Dry Chief Outlines Arrangement to Group States Which Have Similar Problems.

REGIONAL DIRECTORS UNDER HIS COMMAND

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Establishment of a new prohibition zone taking in the Mississippi Valley territory from New Orleans north to the Northern Missouri border, was outlined today by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews, in charge of prohibition enforcement.

For the time being at least, O. D. Jackson, prohibition administrator for the New Orleans district, will be in charge of the new zone. Administrators of the St. Louis, Texas and Kentucky districts have been instructed to get in touch with him, immediately to work out plans for the stricter enforcement of the Volstead act in this territory by close co-operation between the coast Guard, the customs service and prohibition enforcement organization.

Two other zones have been tentatively laid out by Andrews. One is on the Pacific Coast, under the direction of Alf Oftedal, a representatives of the special intelligence unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau. The other is composed of the South Atlantic Seaboard states, extending from Florida to the Potomac River. It is now being supervised by M. O. Dunning, Collector of Customs at Savannah, Ga. This last zone will be enlarged northward to include what Andrews called "the wetter area," extending north of the Potomac River, Maryland and New Jersey, the so-called "wettest states," are expected to be grouped in this zone.

Zone System to Be Extended.

Andrews said he was experimenting with these zones, which, according to his plan, include administrative districts having similar prohibition problems. Later all of the 22 administrative districts will be included in one zone or another, he says.

Andrews said he had not yet selected the men who will be permanent chief of these zones. He said a great deal of care would be exercised in choosing them as they would rank directly under him and he could personally direct their work. He believed he would be able to get suitable men by promotion of officials now under his direction.

The zone chiefs, Andrews said would have charge of prohibition enforcement coast guard work and the customs service, whereas the prohibition administrators have been limited primarily to enforcement of the Volstead act.

Today was Andrews' first day at the Treasury since his return from England, where he effected a working agreement between executives to check shipments of liquor to the United States.

Andrews will call on the State Department Monday for the services of Harry J. Anslinger, United States Consul in the Bahama Islands, to organize the division of foreign control which probably will include only members of the State and Commerce departments now in foreign service. After the bureau is organized details of the understanding with Great Britain will be announced.

Won't Discuss Resignation.

Greeted by newspaper correspondents, he was subjected to a cross-examination on a series of questions ranging from his opinion of Wayne B. Wheeler to the proposed re-organization of the prohibition service.

The outstanding developments of the interview were:

He refused to discuss his resignation which is scheduled for October or immediately after the elections, declaring he was "carrying on" with his reorganization plans.

He said he did not feel affronted by Wheeler's remarks about present efforts at enforcement.

He declared considerable progress had been made during his tenure of office and that he expected much more during the next year.

He said he had been highly

Jury Service for Women Is Aim of Voters' League

President of Local Organization Launches Campaign to Amend Missouri Constitution.

The League of Women Voters believes that the time has come to amend the Missouri Contitution to enable women to serve on juries.

Mrs. George B. Mangold, independent president of the St. Louis League, upon her return from California, where she observed the working of the mixed jury, yesterday gave out a statement which may be regarded as the formal launching of a campaign toward the end sought.

"Upon going from trials where there are no women jurors," Mrs. Mangold said, "to a state where women serve, one cannot fail to note the difference. The entire tone of the proceedings is raised. The process of trying a fellow member of the community for some crime or misdemeanor becomes more serious and more dignified—a matter in which the community is seriously concerned."

Mrs. Mangold stated that the feel, inasmuch as they have the long time has been interested in the question of jury service for women, and in many states has worked for constitutional changes so women might be eligible for jury duty. Women, said Mrs. Mangold, are not asking for jury service as a right, but rather that they feel, inasmuch ts they have the same ballot privileges as men, to serve as jurors is their duty.

The president of the St. Louis League believes women figure in nearly every case that comes into court. Furthermore, says she, one-fifth of the women in the United States are engaged in gainful occupations and several million more are members of women's organizations which are endeavoring to educate their members in the duties of citizenship. Much of this information is available to women not members of these organizations.

Mrs. Mangold thinks that women, as a whole, are quite as well qualified for jury service as men. While, she states, it is argued that the poor working woman could not afford to serve as a juror, it is just as true that the jury pay would mitigate this difficulty. Then, she says, the poor woman's salary loss could be spared better than that of her husband, and the wife's service would allow her husband to be called for duty only half as often.

The belief that women should be kept in ignorance of the unsavory side of the courts is out of date in this age, when women realize that ignorance is not innocence, Mrs. Mangold states. Disagreeable court matters are apt to concern both men and women, she says, therefore such matters should be settled by both men and women.

Mrs. Mangold finds that in San Francisco, where mixed juries have been adopted, trials reveal a noticeable absence of indecent and unnecessary detail. Among the women jurors were housewives, school teachers and business women, Mrs. Mangold observed.

PARADE OF PUPILS PLANNED TO SAVE FRANKLIN SCHOOL

Will March as Protest Against Proposal to Use It as Vocational Unit.

Handbills were circulated through the Franklin School district yesterday announcing a parade, scheduled for noon tomorrow, as a demonstration against the proposed conversion of the school building, at Nineteenth street and Franklin avenue, into a vocational school.

"The Big Parade," was the bill's heading. "Leaves Nineteenth and Franklin at Noon, Monday, Aug. 16, to City Hall and Board of Education," it continued. "Pupils, parents, friends, be there. Save Franklin School."

Three pupils of the school, Maurice D. Apple, 14 years old, Harry Wallack, 11, and Morris Weissmann, 11 distributed the handbills, which they said older boys, graduates of the school, hai aided them in preparing. The boys also issued a typewritten circular signed "The Loyal Three."

"We will march to the City Hall and the Board of Education to protect our rights," the circular reads. "We cannot see the pride of our neighborhood being disrupted. If the thousand pupils of the Franklin School, united, will stick together, we will win; if divided, we will fail. Boost your neighborhood. Strike, you loyal citizens!"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Two deaths today were attributed to the heat and more than a dozen prostrations were reported. Col. Henry H. Ludlow, U. S. A., retired, fell dead in the lobby of a bank, the Coroner ascribing death to apoplexy, superinduced by the heat. The other fatality was a Negro laborer.

The capital was still in the grip of a most protracted heat wave on record here for August, but there was a sharp break in the temperature tonight as a result of a thundershower.

WALES MAY VISIT AMERICA

Heir To Throne Expected To Make Flying Trip To Ranch.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Although no official announcement has been made as yet, the London press seems to take it for granted that the Prince of Wales will visit his Canadian ranch in Alberta next month.

This will be about the same time as the autumn round-up and would afford him glimpses of the excitement of ranch life. The Price's friends say that it is of his greatest regrets that he must c ontent himself with flying visits to Alberta, which is ideal as a resting place from the cares of public life.

EX-MILLIONAIRE HELD AS SLAYER OF HOCKEY STAR

SPENT $10,000,000 WITHIN 10 YEARS

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1926.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Alphonse E. Francis Austin Smith, grandson of one of the builders of the Canadian Pacific Railroad and former son-in-law of Robert J. Wynne, Postmaster-General in the Roosevelt administration, was arrested today at Whitstable, near Canterbury, accused of murder.

The police inspector making the arrest testified he went to Stella Maria, Smith's seaside home, and found John Thomas Deerham, international rink hockey player and grandson of Gen. Tyler, V. C., dying of a bullet wound in the stomach. Thomas was taken to a nursing home, where he died a few hours later.

The police inspector found Smith standing in the drawing room with two cuts in his forehead, a bruised eye and his face covered with blood. The furniture in the room was overturned and smashed.

The inspector told Smith he was under arrest, testifying that Smith replied: "Where is he? Where is the seducer?"

In court later Smith made a formal plea of not guilty and was remanded for a week. The inquest will begin tomorrow.

Spent a Million a Year.

Smith is a grandson of both Sir Frank Smith and Hugh Ryan, associates of Lord Strathcona, both railroad builders and two of the earliest millionaires in Canada. As their heir Smith was at one time enormously wealthy. It is reported he was a victim of the notorious William Cooper Hobbs, Montague Noel Newton and Roderick Morrison gang. Hobbs was the principal figure in the notorious blackmail trial involving "Mr. A." who turned out to be the Maharajah Hari Singh of Jammu and Kashmir. One report said these men were appointed a committee of inspection of the Smith inheritance.

It is reported Smith, in 10 years, dissipated a fortune of $10,000,000 and then borrowed from Hobbs and Newton.

Divorced From American Wife.

Smith was married in 1912 to Ruth Wynne and was divorced in 1922. She received in settlement a substantial share of Smith's fortune. Smith took as his second wife, Miss Catherine White, by whom he has three children. He is a near neighbor of Derham, who is said to have given lessons in automobile driving to Mrs. Smith.

Derham in 1911 married Miss Consuelo de Cologan, a daughter of the Marquis de Torre Hermosa. For the last few years he has been living apart from his wife. Both Smith and Derham are graduates of Eton, where they were schoolmates. Derham was 40 and Smith 37 years of age.

Smith once was in the Dragoon Guards. In the great war he joined the Canadian forces as a private. Derham was graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge, and was a captain in the war.

Mrs. Smith Obtained Divorce in New York in 1922.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Mrs. Alphonso Francis Austin Smith, whose husband was held in London today in the murder of John Thomas Derham, obtained an interlocutory divorce decree in 1922 in the Supreme Court here. Her divorce action named a Miss Gertrude Lawrence, whom she described an "an English girl of 20 and of good family."

Testimony at the trial was given to show that Smith and Miss Lawrence had lived together in London from the fall of 1919 until the sumer of 1920, and that a daughter was born to Miss Lawrence on April 19, 1920. Smith did not contest his wife's action.

Mrs. Smith's father, the late Robert J. Wynee, was a Washington correspondent when President Roosevelt appointed him First Assistant Postmaster-General in 1902. In that office Wynne uncovered frauds in the Postoffice Department which resulted in prison sentences for a number of men, including two department officials. Wynne became Postmaster-General in 1904 on the death of Postmaster-General Payne. He was appointed Consul-General in 1905, resigning in 1910 to return to Washington. He became president of the First National Fire Insurance Co. in 1915. Later he retired from active business life. He died in 1922.

UPROOTED TREES CRUSH BUILDINGS

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—A violent wind, rain and thunder storm, which swept this vicinity shortly before noon today, affording only brief relief from the heat, concentrated its fury on New Rochelle in such degree as to be called a tornado, uprooting more than 100 trees and damaging a dozen houses.

Former Mayor George G. Raymond of New Rochelle, an engineer, estimated the wind velocity at 90 to 100 miles an hour and classed the storm as a Western "twister," inasmuch as its main force was expended in a mile square area, bounded by Van Guilder terrace, Webster and Lockwood avenues and Colonial place.

So many streets were blocked by fallen trees and the debris left by the water which flooded them immediately after the storm that 29 municipal trucks, each with a crew of 10 men, worked all afternoon trying to get them clear. Late in the day four streets still were impassable.

Two Deaths Laid to Heat.

Many narrow escapes were reported, but no lives were lost in New Rochelle. In this city two deaths were attributed to the heat, which dropped about 10 degrees during the storm, but immediately thereafter began a steady rise. High humidity added to the discomfort. These conditions prevailed throughout the East, Washington sweltering at 98 degrees in the greatest heat outside the desert area. The Weather Bureau could give no promise of immediate relief.

The storm broke over New York at 11 o'clock and in New Rochelle at 11:45, the heavy downpour at the latter place lasting 1 hour and 10 minutes. The tornado-like blast struck its heaviest blow at the intersection of Warren street, Union avenue and Van Guilder terrace, where no tree was left standing. Skylights were blown in, houses partially unroofed and plate-glass windows throughout the city shattered, but the chief havoc was done by trees that hit dwellings as they crashed to earth.

Lightning Fires College Tower.

Lightning struck the brick and wood tower on The Castle, administration building of the College of New Rochelle, now closed for the summer, setting it on fire. Several instructors at work on the first floor escaped unhurt. The fire department extinguished the flames, but the tower was damaged badly. A score of trees in various parts of the city were fired by falling power wires and gave the firemen a busy hour responding to alarms.

Dr. James Brennan, New Rochelle physician, was driving his automobile when a tree crashed across the street, knocking off the front bumper and damaging the mud guards, but he was not injured. Fire Commissioner Paul Borchard reported a falling tree cut his garage in half and smashed the front end of a sedan housed in it. His house also was damaged badly and every tree in his yard broken or blown down.

Trees of Prohibited Species.

Most of the trees destroyed were poplars and the residents recalled that it was through recommendations of City Forester Thomas Wade that the Legislature passed a bill forbidding future planting of these easily uprooted trees.

Early tonight a second thunderstorm preceded by cooling currents of air swept down on the city and afforded temporary relief. It was predicted warmer weather would ensue tomorrow, with more storms of the same nature, though cooler temperatures were said to be in store for tomorrow afternoon and evening.

In the storm during the morning 2.7 inches of rain fell.

HUNT MISSING BOY ON MT. HOOD

Fresh Footprints Found After 48 Hours' Vain Search.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 14.—While parties of woodsmen, forest rangers and soldiers were leading parties on the slope of Mount Hood today in search of Jackie Strong, 7-year-old boy lost in the wilds for 48 hours, fresh footprints, believed to have been made by the boy last night or this morning, were found.

The boy wandered away from two brothers while fishing Thursday afternoon.

47 BELIEVED LOST IN NOVA SCOTIA STORM

Government Searchers Abandon Hope for Crews of Two Fishing Schooners.

By the Associated Press.

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 14.—Forty-seven fishermen were missing tonight, a week after the storm which is believed to have struck the Nova Scotia fishing industry the most disastrous blow in loss of lives and ships in recent history.

While Government searchers today abandoned hope for the 25 members of the crew of the Lunenberg schooner Sylvia Mosher, grave fears were expressed for the first time for the La Have schooner Sadie Knickle and her crew of 22. The Sadie Knickle, long overdue, was last seen near the Sylvia Mosher, off Sable Island, before the storm. It was feared that both crews had perished in the hurricane that tore the Sylvia Mosher from her anchorage and drove her ashore on the island, a total wreck, and left no trace to indicate the fate of the Sadie Knickle.

"There is practically no hope that a single one of the crew is alive," said Capt. Sutherland of the Government steamer Lady Laurier, which returned today after an unsuccessful search for survivors of the Sylvia Mosher wreck.

The search of the Lady Laurier took the steamer through seas strewn with wreckage. The relief vessel picked up battered debris from the Sylvia Mosher and the Mary Ruth, a craft that barely escaped the clutches of the Sable Island sand after all her gear and boats had been swept away. After viewing the havoc wrought by the storm and finding no trace of the missing fishermen, Capt. Sutherland returned convinced that "it would have been impossible for any of the men to have lived through it."

FINDS PEORIA POLICE CHIEF DRIVING STOLEN CHICAGO CAR

Sergeant Also Recovers Autos From Assistant State's Attorney and His Secretary.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—Recovery of 11 stolen automobiles and clews to about 20 more were announced tonight by Police Sergeant Frank A. McDonald on his return from Peoria, investigating a stolen car market there. One of the stolen cars was being driven by J. Shirley West, Chief of Police of Peoria, and another by Jess Weast, Assistant State's Attorney of Peoria County. Weast's secretary, Policeman Richard Clandein, was driving another car, the serial number of which corresponded with that of a car stolen in Chicago.

Recovery of the 11 cars came through the arrest of Floyd Overby at Peoria two weeks ago on seven warrants charging him with receiving stolen property, automobiles stolen on Chicago streets.

DRY CHIEF DINES WISELY ON DISHES NOT SO VERY DRY

Gen. Andrews Refused to Drink on Ship, but Had Champagne Sherbet.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews, chief of the prohibition forces, disclosed today that he had perhaps had a little taste of liquor on his recent voyage from London. He explained how he managed to beat the prohibition law. On the boat a friend offered him a drink, which he refused. In the course of conversation the friend learned the refusal was limited only to alcoholic beverages.

Andrews could eat what he liked.

Being a true friend this particular friend had the chef prepare the dry chief a champagne sherbet, which, indeed, is not a beverage. Andrews could eat it without any qualms of conscience or fear of breaking the Volstead act.

"Would it be legal to sell such a sherbet in the United States?" the correspondent asked.

"That's a question for the Attorney-General," Andrews replied.

"I think the captain of our vessel on the return trip permitted some pancakes soaked in rum to be served me," Andrews added.

DRIVER OF LAUNDRY WAGON SHOT TO DEATH IN HOLDUP

Cape Girardeau Victim, Had Expressed Belief Most Reported Robberies Were Fakes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO., Aug. 14.—Robert J. Deevers was found dead at the roadside twenty feet from his laundry delivery wagon on a highway 12 miles south of here today. About $150 he was supposed to be carrying, a part of a day's collections, was missing, but twenty dollars was left in his wallet.

Cautioned to be careful and not carry large sums of money, Deevers several times had told his employer that he believed most reported holdups were fakes and at the worst he would be able to take care of himself. He was, apparently shot before he could discharge his own revolver which was found beside his car.

SHOOTS OFFICER AND IS SHOT

Slayer at Topeka (Kan.) Wounded by Aid of County Attorney.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 14.—Ed. Rooney, assistant county attorney, today shot and seriously wounded Joe Morris, 34-year-old farm hand, after Morris had shot Under-Sheriff Wayne Horning. The shooting followed Horning's attempt to arrest Morris for the killing of his brother-in-law, Arthur Page.

Page was shot in a quarrel with Morris which is said to have had its origin in Norris' belief that Page had created dissention between him and his wife.

After shooting Page, Morris begged his wife to kill him but when Rooney and Horning were summoned Morris resisted arrest. Horning, wounded in the right arm, tossed his revolver to Rooney who fired and hit Morris.

ENGLEWOOD BANK WAS LOADED WITH DOUBTFUL PAPER TWICE IN A YEAR

Paul E. Cole, Cashier, Was Forced to Make Restitution in Similar Transaction About Last February.

MATTER WAS KEPT SECRET AT TIME

C. U. Becker's Deposits of State Auto License Funds in Institution $24,000 at Time of Failure.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 14.—The curtain of secrecy thrown around the wreckage of the Citizens' Security Bank of Englewood, a Kansas City suburb, closed a week ago, was drawn back a little farther today and revealed two heretofore unknown features of the wrecking process.

First, that Donald W. Ross, now serving a 10-year sentence for a $167,762 shortage created when he was a Deputy Finance Commissioner liquidating the Night and Day Bank of St. Louis, made overtures in the early part of 1923 toward buying a controlling interest in the Englewood bank. Paul E. Cole, his brother-in-law, subsequently bought the stock and became the bank's cashier.

Second, that the same persons who loaded the little $10,000 bank down with more than twice its capital in questionable assets which the Finance Department rejected July 17, had done exactly the same thing earlier this year and were forced to make restitution, only to return less than three months afterward, get complete charge and repeat the operation.

The earlier attempt, in the last days of January of this year, was a particularly amazing piece of work.

Deal for Cole's Stock.

Cole was cashier at that time and held 66 shares of stock in his name. Four Independence men—Harry S. Truman, Col. E. M. Stayton, Arthur Metzger and Spencer Salsbury—contracted with Cole for the purchase of his stock on the basis of $9900, less a pro rata deduction for whatever bad assets were in the bank, control to be taken Feb. 1.

A local accountant made an audit of the bank, completing it Jan. 25. His report showed the items listed as questionable—just a small collection of the usual bad accumulations of any institution.

Then the four purchasers looked over the list of other stockholders for a president who was better acquainted in Englewood than they were. Lou E. Holland, a resident of Englewood and now president of the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, was selected and accepted on provision the five of them would make their own personal examination of all assets and liabilities.

Loans Without Collateral.

The following Sunday the five made that examination. They found these changes had been made in the bank's status in the few days since the auditor's report on Jan. 25:

A loan of $7500 without collateral or indorsement had been made to the Missouri Press Publishing Co., of which Charles U. Becker, Secretary of State, is president.

A loan of $500 without collateral or indorsement had been made to Ernest D. Wilson, an employe of Becker's publication, associated in the Priest-for-Senator campaign and later with Proctor.

A loan of $2000 without collateral or indorsement had been made to Cole.

The cash account of the bank had depleted by more than $3000 by overdrafts, returned checks and the like carried as "cash items."

A new item had appeared among the assets, "bonds, $5000." Examination disclosed they were Plaza Royal bonds, of no market value, issued by an amusement enterprise on McGee street trafficway fostered by L. J. Smyth, business manager of Becker's publication, and issued to Wilson in lieu of an attorney's fee when the enterprise became defunct.

Demand for Restitution.

The five men—Truman, Stayton, Metzger, Salsbury and Holland—called Cole for an accounting and demanded that he make restitution for these strange items cropping up in the bank's assets, pointing out to him an order by the bank directors that the cashier should be without authority to make any transaction of more than $100 unless approved by two directors.

Cole's bonding company was notified and joined the bank owners in calling for restitution.

Time was asked by the ex-cashier to raise the money. Cole de-

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 14.—Another week of the religious conflict between church and state got under way with business groggy from the effects of the economic boycott, wit the civil authorities calling on the military for help, with rumors of revolution filling the air, and both sides standing pat.

Talk of compromise or surrender appears to be ancient history. The militant declarations of the clergy, notably the statement of the Archbishop of Mexico City, which was transmitted several days ago through the Post-Dispatch and the New York World, have amply defined the clerical determination to fight to a finish.

President Calles' blunt talk with newspaper men has similarly prevented mediators from proposing a truce. Latin-American eagerness to intercede in the conflict has died in the face of President Calles' comeback at President Legula of Peru.

Attitude of Local Press.

Local newspapers are refraining from playing up the struggle; least of all, are they commenting on it editorially. Instead they are featuring American interest in it.

The utterances of the American summer White House spokesman have a peculiar fascination for local papers. All speculation about the return of Ambassador Sheffield to the United States at one of the most critical times in Mexican history obtains front page space, and is the theme for endless conversations in church and Government circles.

While Mexico outwardly is as tranquil as a June day, reports from the interior arriving through commercial channels as well as unpublished dispatches from local correspondents stress the unrest. The military authorities seem to have the affair well in hand, however. No official importance is given to the reported uprising in the states of Vera Cruz, Guerrero and Oaxaca. The loyalty of the army to President Calles is counted upon to put them down.

Effects of Boycott.

From all parts of the country come indications of commercial disaster resulting from the economic boycott, which is now entering its third week. Trade is reported to have fallen off about 50 per cent. Withdrawals of bank deposits in three weeks are estimated authoritatively to amount to 35,000,000 pesos ($17,000,000). The greater part of this is said to have been sent to the United States. Finance Minister Pani, who built up a new financial structure of the Government, is reported to be eager to resign.

The boycott is cutting especially into retail trade, according to American Commercial Attache Wythes, who has sized up the situation and sent his findings to Washington.

The automobile business is the chief sufferer. Dry goods stores are enjoying only a fraction of their former prosperity.

In another fortnight leaders of the Catholic cause prophesy, the boycott will have brought the country to the verge of a business crash. They assert the faithful are bearing up stoically under their losses and are determined to back the clergy to the end. Blacklisting as a weapon to bring the gravity of the struggle home to business gives signs of becoming general.

Effect on Imports.

One big department store in Mexico City is already under the Catholic ban and is doing less than 10 per cent of its normal business, according to reports. Data is accumulating in the office of the American commercial attache which shows the shattering effects of the boycott on imports from the United States.

In the struggle between the church and the Government one Catholic stands head and shoulders above all others of his faith. He is Mgr. Pascaul Diaz, Bishop of Tabasco. Utterly fearless, he does not consider consequences. With him it is irrevocably a fight to a finish.

Possibility of Demonstrations Today Considered.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 14.—With the religious situation still deadlocked Mexican Catholics are preparing for their third Sunday without priests officiating in the churches.

It wil be an important day in the Catholic calendar—the Feast of the Assumption.

Ordinarily the day is observed with special ceremony in all Catholic churches of Mexico, but this will be impossible tomorrow because of the withdrawal of the priests by order of the Episcopate in protest against the new religious regulations. There is much interest to learn whether because of the day's significance, any popular demonstrations will occur.

Sheffield Leaves Vera Cruz for New York.

By the Associated Press.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 14.—Returning to the United States on leave, the American Ambassador, James R. Sheffield, arrived from Mexico City this afternoon and boarded the steamer Monterey for New York. To questions of newspapermen the Ambassador said only that he was bound for Washington and that he intended to return to Mexico in November.

Field Battery Ending 4-Day Homeward Hike

BATTERY PICTURESQUE ON HOMEWARD MARCH

Unit of Artillery Back at Barracks After Three Weeks' Field Training.

Memories of the days of '17 and '18 were recalled by the return to Jefferson Barracks yesterday of C Battery, 14th Field Artillery, from Arcadia, Mo., following three weeks' field training.

An artillery organization on the march is always picturesque and C Battery was no exception. The hard-hitting 75's, their muzzles capped with leather sheaths, the bronzed lean gunners, and the sturdy caisson teams bespoke an "outfit" ready for action.

The Battery marched out of Jefferson barracks July 26 officered by C. M. T. C. students under the command of Col. Walter Siegmund, artillery reserve officer. Major W. S. Woodroff and Capt. George Middleton, regular army officers, accompanied the organization as instructors. The hike to Arcadia was made in four days and the C. T. M. C. students were then given several days' instruction in gunnery.

On Aug. 1 twenty-two officers of the 380th Field Artillery Reserve Regiment, which commanded by Col. Siegmund, relieved the students and took over the Battery. Instruction was carried out under the training plan sponsored by the War Department, each officer completing one or more firing problems against an imaginary enemy. The range at Arcadia offered direct firing practice up to 4000 yards and many well-placed shells were sent into "enemy" territory.

The instruction, in addition to gunnery, included equipment and pistol practice. Five officers qualified for official record with the service automatic pistol as follows: Capt. John K. Walsh, expert; Lieuts. James Montieth and John Dyer, sharpshooter, and Col. Siegmund and Lieut. Harry King, marksman. Both officers and men lived under canvas during the training period and 'mess' consisted of the regulation field ration augmented by purchases from nearby farms.

The return hike to Jefferson Barracks began last Wednesday. Marching an average of 23 miles a day, overnight halts were made at Elvins, De Soto and Antonio. At De Soto a heavy rain storm "washed out" the camp, leaving but two "pup" tents standing. The last lap of 21 miles from Antonio was made between the hours of 4 and 11 a. m. yesterday. Col. Siegmund and the regular army instructors expressed pleasure at the manner in which the entire program was carried out and declared they will recommend similar training next year.

The St. Louis reserve officers, in addition to Col. Siegmund, completing the training, were: Majors Edward B. Felker and James K. Vardamen Jr.; Captains Louis C. Hummel and John K. Walsh; Lieutenants Harry I. King, William P. Sharpe, William M. Donovan, John R. Dyer, James K. Montieth, Sylvester W. Smyth, Robert J. Schroeder and William S. Garton.

Doubtful Paper Twice Put In Englewood Bank in Year

claring he would be forced to visit relatives in Indiana or Illinois and to call on friends over the State.

In the meantime, the publishing company made a $6000 deposit at the bank which was immediately applied by the directors on the publishing company's $7500 note. When the publishing company's checks were returned marked "insufficient funds" there were threats of a suit, but the diversion of the deposit to the note finally was accepted.

Wilson's $500 was taken care of when the directors seized a new automobile and demanded a mortgage on it before they would release it. Soon afterward he refinanced the loan.

Cole raised enough money to restore the bank's account and remove the Royal Plaza bonds. The $9900 due him for his stock took care of the other items charged against him and the incident was considered closed. No publicity was given it at the time.

Then the almost immediate return of Cole to the bank is classed by one of the directors as "an example of his supreme nerve."

Shot It Out "With Bandits."

"But Cole's nerve has not been questioned," he added, since he stood up single-handed and shot it out, July 14, 1924, with five bandits who attempted to rob the Englewood Bank, the third robbery of the institution within a year."

Cole got into control of the bank this time throug Novus Reed, a real estate man living just across the street from the bank. Reed told of a life-long ambition to be a banker and declared he had looked with longing eyes on the Englewood bank since it was organized seven years ago.

Reed's office had been in the bank during Cole's former regime and difficulties. Reed took in with him a brother-in-law, B. M. Houchens of Independence, also a real estate man. Three months later Reed and Cole resigned when a State examiner found questionable assets in the bank, put there by Becker's business and political associates.

But Houchens remained to hold the sack. His father-in-law, John W. Clements, Independence lawyer, came to his rescue with $12,000 and Houchens mortgaged and sold everything he had accumulated, to raise, with the help of Harry Train, a remaining director, the $26,452 to take up all those rejected assets and clear the bank.

All disclosures have tended to vindicate the Houchens from any responsibility for the bank's condition other than that he had allowed himself to be made president of the bank in name only. But to offset that misstep, Houchens has protected the depositors and stockholders with his own personal fortune.

Who else was called on in raising $26,452 is not known. Clements, Houchens and Train refuse to tell, declaring it could mean nothing but embarrassment to any person to be drawn into the affair, but declare emphatically that not one cent came from any person directly or indirectly connected with Cole, Wilson or the Becker publication.

Rejected Assets.

How rapidly the mass of objectionable assets was rebuilt is shown by the detailed list of those assets, accumulated between April 17 and July 17. Presumably a bank examination was not expected so suddenly, but the State Finance Commissioner is known to have been watching the bank closely.

The list of rejected assets taken up by Clements, Houchens, Train and others—Notes: L. J. Smyth, $2750; Missouri Press Publishing Co., $2000; Novus Red, $1500; P. E. Cole, $2000; George McKenney (overdraft), $1058.75. Three small notes totaling $96.

Checks carried as cash items—P. C. Cole, $500; two small checks, $110.59.

Debt tickets showing indebtedness—Six safety deposit box rent slips, $18. Six interest adjustment debits, $785.01. Adjustment on a note, $345.75. Difference in Federal Trust Co. account, $4000.

In repairment of capital, $635.96. Missouri Press Publishing Co., $2750. Novus Reed note, $2060. P. E. Cole over draft, $2960.03. Novus Reed over draft, $644.49. Two small notes, $350. F. Ernest Carmer, treasurer, check, $1253.03. Two checks, $385. Difference in bond account, $250.81.

At the time the bank examiners threw out these assets, July 17, the other directors "accepted the resignations" of Novus Reed and Paul E. Cole. No reasons were ascribed for their disassociation with the bank, but the record of rejected assets tells the story.

"Guaranteed by Becker."

In the list is approximately $4000 charged to Novus Reed and listed as "guaranteed by Charles U. Becker."

Cole is charged with approximately $6500.

The Becker publication is charged with responsibility for more than $12,000 of those rejected assets.

Throughout all these proceedings, Becker used the bank as depository for motor car license collections, having more than $24,000 in the bank when it closed.

He has explained that he did so as a personal favor to one of the officers of the bank, but refused to name that officer.

The Attorney-General has ruled that Becker had no authority to select depositories of State funds as State funds are let by the State officers sitting as a board, at an average interest rate of 3.16 per cent. Becker says the State was to receive 2 per cent interest from the Englewood Bank.

Secrecy in Failures Not Required by Law, Says Gentry.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 14.—Greater publicity, as to the causes and incidents of bank failures in Missouri, is expected to result from Attorney-General Gentry's ruling, called forth today by the closing recently of the Citizens' Security Bank of Englewood, depository for State automobile license funds, and lender of money to associates of Secretary of State Becker who chose it as depository.

The Attorney-General, in an opinion given at Gov. Baker's request, held that no legal requirement of secrecy applied to banks which have been taken over by the State Finance Commissioner, and for which a liquidating officer has been appointed.

Under the law, however, a period of 10 days after the closing of a bank is allowed for reorganization, and a liquidating officer is not appointed until the expiration of that time. The Attorney-General held that the secrecy law would apply during that time.

Secretary of State Becker returned today from a short vacation. He refused to discuss developments in the Englewood bank matter, except to deny the statement of Ernest D. Wilson that Becker had agreed to maintain a minimum balance of $10,000 in the Englewood bank, and that on this condition loans were made by the bank to associates of Becker in the publication of the Missouri State Journal.

State Auditor Thompson arrived in Jefferson City today. He said the audit of Secretary Becker's handling of the automobile license funds, over a five-year period, would be begun as soon as he has auditors available for the work, probably within a week.

PURSUE ROBBERS OF UNION PACIFIC MAILS IN DESERT

Sheriffs, Cowboys and Air Pilots Search Wyoming for Pair Who Bound and Gagged Clerks on Train.

By the Associated Press.

WAMSUTTER, Wyo., Aug. 14.—The sand dunes of the desert in Southwestern Wyoming late today were being searched by sheriffs and cowboys for two men who early today robbed a Union Pacific train of 23 pouches of registered mail while the train was speeding through Wyoming. The value of the loot had not been determined tonight.

Air mail pilots, flying between Cheyenne and Salt Lake City, were asked by postal officials to scan the desert for the fugitives.

The robbers, instead of using the broncho of the frontier stage and train robber, took to the modern automobile, posse leaders here believe.

With apparently well laid plans, two men boarded the mail car at Rawlins, 41 miles east of here, and flourishing revolvers, bound and gagged the two postal clerks. Waiting at Wamsutter, a confederate of the robbers changed a railroad signal so that the train was slowed down. The robbers are then believed to have jumped off and fled with their confederate. The clerks remained bound until the train reached Rock Springs, when the robbery was discovered, because of their failure to deliver the mail.

Only one route of flight is open to the holdup men through the desert into Northwestern Colorado, as the other roads lead back to the Wyoming cities of Rawlins and Rock Springs, the posses insist. The desert, although it stretches over a region of many miles, is populated with only a handful of ranchers and sheep herders, and is practically without waterholes, its only vegetation being sage brush.

To the sheriffs and cow punchers, the robbery recalled memories of Bill Carlisle, who, single handed, held up three Union Pacific passenger trains in 1913 and later escaped from prison to rob another in 1920. Carlisle now is in the Wyoming penitentiary at Rawlins.

Small Amount of Loot Obtained, Officials Believe.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 14.—Robbers who held up and robbed a registered mail car attached to Union Pacific train No. 5, near Green River, Wyo., last night, received a small amount of loot, railway mail officials here believe. Although some time will be required before a complete check can be made, railway mail officials explain that the train never carries much registered mail of value.

ANDREWS TO PUT MISSOURI INTO NEW DRY ZONE

successful in his negotiations with the British officals and would be willing to make similar arrangements with other Governments if bootleggers sought to ship liquor to the United States from those countries.

He declared he was confident that Congress would pass the legislation he considered necessary for stricter enforcement, particularly the reorganization bill for establishment of the prohibition service as a separate bureau of the Government.

His present work will be to concentrate of the liquor traffic which was taken to mean the suppression of the source of supply—and development of local law enforcement against distributors.

A meeting of the prohibition administrators will be held in Washington Sept. 10 to discuss plans for the coming year.

In refusing to discuss his resignation Andrews contended that his sole object at present was to make plans for the coming year.

"I don't want to discuse my resignation now," he declared. "I want to give my full time to reorganization. I expect to carry on."

This was taken to mean that he was leaving a loophole, but in the next breath he declared that he expected to have a "whip hand" over the liquor traffic next year after Congress had passed the legislation he had asked for.

The report had been current in Washington that Andrews will resign in October, after the election. It has not been denied that he sent his resignation to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and later withdrew it.

Wheeler, general counsel and legislative agent for the Antisaloon League, apparently gave the report some credence. In a recent statement he declared that officials in sympathy with the Volstead act were necessary and that the Government should not wait to get resignations from officials who declared that prohibition could not be enforced.

Not Wounded by Wheeler's Thrust.

Concerning Wheeler, Andrews said that he had not taken the Antisaloon League leader's remarks as personal. He would make no statement regarding the proposal to make Wheeler his successor.

If Andrews does resign within the next few months it will not be because of the pronouncement he made last year that if he could not make the country drier within a year he would quit. He declared today he thought "considerable progress" had been made—as much as he had expected when he took office.

Nevertheless, he has his disappointments. When he took office he said he would give preference to army and navy men, who were bound by a tradition of honor and service to the country. When asked today about his friend, Col. Ned Green, administrator of the Los Angeles district, now under indictment for personal use of confiscated liquors, Andrews said that he had had only a cursory account of Green's alleged acts, and was "tremendously disappointed." He added he still believed army and navy men were essential to the prohibition service.

Andrews seemed confident that the prohibition bills which failed to pass last session of Congress because they did not receive administration support, would be enacted at the coming short session. Several times in the course of the interview he stressed the need of the reorganization bill establishing the prohibition unit as a separate service.

This bill has the support of the Antisaloon League, ostensibly because it would put the dry administration under civil service. Another reason, however, advanced for the proposal is that it would end the present dual control over personnel.

Last year after Andrews had made a public announcement that he would take prohibition out of politics, he found that David H. Blair, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, had as much to say about appointments as himself. Blair was credited with blocking some of his appointments and for rearranging several of the administrative districts. Under the reorganization plan Blair would be eliminated.

Concerning the "poison" now being put into industrial alcohol in an effort to stop its diversion into bootlegging channels, Andrews had little to say except that it was an old Internal Revenue precaution. He declared the chemists were still seeking a preparation which would not be fatal, yet would make the alcohol unpotable. He declared many persons were willing to take a chance with wood alcohol.

"Why some people squeeze "canned heat" through a handkerchief and drink the liquid, which contains 5 per cent alcohol," he exclaimed in an amazed voice. "If they are willing to do that, what can we do? We might as well stop putting preparations into industrial alcohol, or else stop the sale of alcohol altogether.

Coolidge's Objections to Poisoning Alcohol Jar to Dry Bureau.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—President Coolidge's concern about ways and means resorted to by the prohibition unit to poison industrial alcohol to make it unfit for beverage purposes has caused consternation among the dry officials and they manifested much anxiety today over the situation.

While the Treasury Department has issued no orders to stop the further use of poison in denaturing alcohol, there were strong intimations that such a step is likely in the near future as a direct result of the President's dislike of the present methods.

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Winston expressed the hope that the prohibition forces would soon announce the adoption of a formula by which industrial alcohol can be made unfit for drinking without resort to poisons. Reports reaching Winston are that the chemical division of the prohibition unit is on the verge of promulgating a new rule whereby industrial alcohol will be made nauseating by the addition of chemicals which cannot be removed by the bootleggers' chemists employed by the bootleggers.

Dr. J. M. Doran, chief chemist of the prohibition unit, admits much progress had been made in that direction but declared any announcement on the subject would have to be made by Gen. Andrews in charge of prohibition enforcement.

Andrews declared an old internal revenue law authorized the addition of poisons to industrial alcohol to prevent its use as a beverage. He declares all the nations of Europe have similar laws and some of them provide for the addition of 10 per cent of a foreign substance to industrial alcohol to make it unfit for drinking purposes. He said the prohibition forces are constantly warning the public against bootleg liquor but declared many people were willing to take a chance. He expressed the hope that his chemists would find a new formula to make industrial alcohol "non-potable but not fatal."

YEAR-OLD DEATH COMPACT IS CARRIED OUT BY PAIR

Young Woman Before End, Tells of Agreement With Married Man to Kill Selves.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 14.—A year ago Alex Mitchell, 38 years old, of Ashland, Ky., a confectionery store owner, and one of his employes, Miss Viola Dye, 21, of Pikeville, Ky., entered a suicide pact, thinking they would be "inseparable in the other world." Mitchell was found dead and Miss Dye in a critical condition in a hotel here today, both having taken poison. Miss Dye died shortly before midnight.

The girl before her death, told the story at the hospital. She said the attentions paid her by Mitchell caused Mrs. Mitchell to leave him. Three weeks ago, she said, they decided to carry out their agreement. Accordingly they purchased a pistol and the poison and motored to Charleston.

Mitchell took the poison first. Then she took some, and to make death more certain she drank some disinfectant also.

A note found in the hotel room asked that Mrs. Mitchell and Miss Dye's parents be notified.

Woman Slashed, Suitor Sought.

Mrs. Marie Siefried, 36 years old, was slashed on the face with a razor in her room at 1336 Chouteau avenue last night. On that occasion he beat her because she resisted advances, she declared.

MURDER JURY CALLED TO NEW TRIAL HEARING

Counsel in Kansas City Case Says They Read of St. Louis Gangsters.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 14.—The 12 jurors who returned the death verdict against Millard Abel for murder of Harry T. McConnell, several Deputy Sheriffs and two newspaper reporters were subpenaed today to appear at the hearing Monday in Judge Landon's court at the motion for a new trial for Abel.

An attempt will be made by Abel's attorneys, it is understood, to question the jurors in an effort to learn whether they read newspaper accounts of the trial in violation of their instructions.

Two excerpts from newspaper stories were mentioned in the motion for a new trial, filed by Joseph F. Alyward, attorney for Abel. One of these appeared while the testimony was being given, and stated several Deputy Sheriffs had been placed throughout the courtroom following rumors received by Sheriff Miles that St. Louis gangsters were here to attempt to rescue the defendant. The other stated that the jurors were reported to have asked protection to their homes should they return the death verdict.

The Prosecutor's office, it is understood, will oppose the attempt to question the jurors and others at the hearing.

An extension of 10 days in which to file a motion for a new trial for Carl Benson, who was sentenced to life imprisonment Thursday for the murder of McConnell, was given today by Judge Coon. Attorneys for Benson had asked for more time.

Mrs. Hall did not come out f the house, but Russell E. Watson, one of her attorneys, offered he party plans of the building. hese were declined.

Cursory measurements were ade of the house and grounds nd pictures taken by New York ewspaper photographers. Simpson said he asked the newspaper en to do the work for him beause official photographers were ot available.

The party then left for the Phillips farm, just over the Middlesex County line, where the bodies of he rector and the choir singer were found under a crab-apple tree. The distance between the spot where the bodies had laid, and the home of Mrs. Jane Gibson, who yesterday identified Willie Stevens, Mrs. Hall's brother, and Henry de Carpender, cousin of the widow, as the persons she saw there the night of the murder, were measured by driving an automobile over the route.

Other Witnesses Questioned.

Earlier in the afternoon Simpson questioned several unidentified witnesses at State trooper headquarters.

Inspector Underwood announced he had telegraphed the San Francisco police a request for sworn statements from Henry Dickman, former New Jersey trooper and lone investigator in the original investigation. He did not expect depositions before Tuesday. Dickman is serving a term in the Military Disciplinary Barracks at Alcatraz Island. Army authorities Underwood said, had signified their willingnes to turn Dickman over to the New Jersey authorities.

A San Francisco paper had quoted Dickman as having admitted that he accepted a bribe to drop his investigation and disappear, but this was later denied by Col. William Morrow, commandant at the barracks.

Carpender and Stevens will remain in the county jail until Monday morning, when the hearing to determine if they shall be held for indictment on charges of murder during the couple will be resumed before Judge Cleary.

SEARCH WARRANT IN HUNT FOR HALL MURDER EVIDENCE

Special Investigator to Ransack Homes of Two Brothers of Late Prosecutor for Papers.

HOPES TO RETURN WIDOW TO JAIL

Move to Cancel $15,000 Bail of Mrs. Hall—Her Home Photographed and Measured for Records.

By the Associated Press.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 14.—Search warrants for the homes of Frederick Beekman and Marcus Beekman, brothers of the late Azlin Beekman, prosecutor of Somerset County, were obtained today by Special Prosecutor Simpson as a step toward obtaining all papers bearing on his investigation of the Hall-Mills murders.

Some of the papers were turned over to Simpson yesterday by Marcus Beekman. The special prosecutor said today that "an important document" had been found among these papers.

Frederick Beekman, whose home is in Westervelt avenue, Plainfield, N. J., is executor of his late brother's estate.

Simpson made known today that when he has completed his public hearing he will take transcripts of all the testimony before Chief Justice Gummere and seek cancellation of the $15,000 bail on which Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall was released from jail after she had been arrested on a charge of murder. If he should be successful, Mrs. Hall would be returned to jail.

The special prosecutor also announced that he had placed a detective in the Somerville telephone exchange as a result of the alleged asking of information telephoned to the State Police by witnesses and investigators for the State.

Photographs Hall Home.

Special Prosecutor Simpson, accompanied by Inspector Underwood of Jersey City and Patrick Hayes, chief investigator, appeared at the recently remodeled Hall home this afternoon with newspaper photographers and an architect. Mrs. Hall did not come out of the house, but Russell E. Watson, one of her attorneys, offered no party plans of the building. Those were declined.

Cursory measurements were made of the house and grounds and pictures taken by New York newspaper photographers. Simpson said he asked the newspaper men to do the work for him because official photographers were not available.

The party then left for the Phillips farm, just over the Middlesex County line, where the bodies of the rector and the choir singer were found under a crab-apple tree. The distance between the spot where the bodies had lain, and the home of Mrs. Jane Gibson, who yesterday identified Willis Stevens, Mrs. Hall's brother, and Henry de Carpender, cousin of the widow, as the persons she saw there the night of the murder, were measured by driving an automobile over the route.

Other Witnesses Questioned.

Inspector Underwood announced he had telegraphed the San Francisco police a request for sworn statements from Henry Dickman, former New Jersey trooper and one investigator in the original investigation. He did not expect depositions before Tuesday. Dickman is serving a term in the Military Disciplinary Barracks at Alcatraz Island. Army authorities, Underwood said, had signified their willingness to turn Dickman over to the New Jersey authorities.

A San Francisco paper had quoted Dickman as having admitted that he accepted a bribe to drop his investigation and disappear, but this was later denied by Col. William Morrow, commandant of the barracks.

Carpender and Stevens will remain in the county jail until Monday morning, when the hearing to determine if they shall be held for indictment on charges of murder of the couple will be resumed before Judge Cleary.

Millon Goes to Evian-les-Bains.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Aug. 14.—The American Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew W. Mellon, left Geneva by automobile today for Evian-les-Bains, France, saying he expected to stay there a fortnight. Asked if he planned to have any conferences there, he replied that if people came to see him he naturally would receive them. There were indications that, although Secretary Mellon is on a vacation, he was keeping an eye on developments in the general financial situation in Europe.

Plans to Build $250,000 Church If He Inherits $9,000,000 Estate

Mr. and Mrs. John Cooper and their children: William, 11 years old; Paul and Pauline, twins, 2 years old; and John, 7. Below: The store over which the Coopers now make their home at Kewanee, Ill.

John Cooper, Steelworker of Kewanee, Ill., Goes Ahead With Plan for Spending Legacy Despite Sarcastic Criticism.

Insists Will of Eccentric Grandmother Will Put Him in Possession of Properties in Virginia When He Is 33.

DOUBTS or no doubts, sarcasm or no sarcasm, evidence or no evidence, John Cooper, Kewanee, Ill., structural steelworker, is going right ahead with plans for spending the $9,000,000 estate which a few church people of Kewanee, at least, still think he will inherit under the will of an eccentric grandmother when he becomes 33, Sept. 18.

Cooper, with the pastor of the Christian Church at Kewanee, to which he has promised a $250,000 new edifice, spent Thursday in St. Louis, getting ideas on church architecture. At the same time, he gave another name for the firm of architects he had engaged, this time with an Ohio address. Previously he had named a Virginia firm which newspaper inquiries had failed to locate.

His party on the visit here included his wife, the Rev. and Mrs. W. B. Olive, William Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rosenow, Harold Mumford and J. P. Drew. They called at the headquarters of the United Christian Missionary Society, 425 De Baliviere avenue, but, it was said there yeterday, did not extensively discuss the plans.

Cooper's story first came to the attention of the Post-Dispatch several months ago, when he was employed in construction work in Granite City. Attempts then to verify it failed, as did the attempts of a Kewanee newspaper which last week telegraphed to every county in the Shenandoah Valley, where Cooper said his late grandmother's broad acres were located.

That has been the only flaw in the story—no one has been able to check up on the names and addresses Cooper gave. He since has explained that he gave fictitious data of that sort by an attorney's instruction, but even an attempt to find the attorney was vain. Then Cooper said the Kewanee newspaper which tried it had the lawyer's name wrong.

Certainly his bearing and the way he told the story to a Post-Dispatch reporter, strange as the story is, gave no indication that he was dreaming. He is short and square-shouldered, with the muscular hands, quite manner and level eyes of a high-type of American workingman. And when he tells about his expected fortune he looks one squarely in the eye.

He related that his grandmother was Mrs. Mary Bradford, owner of cash and stocks now amounting to $5,000,000, besides 16,000 acres of Virginia land, much of it city property. He was her favorite among the Cooper children, of which he was the youngest. But she had another favorite—a little girl on a neighboring farm near Wilmington, and she provided in the will that Cooper should inherit the bulk of her estate only in case he married this girl before he became 21. He was 7 years old when Mrs. Bradford died.

Ran Away From Home.

Cooper said he escorted this young woman, as they grew up together, on many social affairs of the countryside, but that they just never seemed to warm up to each other. "It's entirely different when you're told you've got to marry somebody," he remarked, "even if you were friends to begin with."

When he was 18 he ran away from home to avoid going to college and settled in Kewanee. In 1913 he married Miss Opal McCready, whom he met at a function in the parlors of the church which expects his $250,000 gift. He said that he thought he then was throwing over all chance of obtaining the estate, and for that reason never mentioned it to her.

Then, two years ago, he visited his father, Frank Cooper, still living on the farm near Wilmington, and was told of another provision allowing him to inherit the residual estate when he becomes 33.

Father's Visit.

One thing that implied substance to his story was that his father had just visited him in Granite City and Cooper, apparently reluctant to talk, explained that he would not tell his story except to put a stop to many rumors, more or less fanciful, that his father had inadvertently started by hinting at the fortune. But try and verify it!

Rather than trying to obtain anything on the strength of the inheritance, Cooper has avoided, he said, multitudinous offers of credit. Lately, however, he has opened up on "futures," not to gain anything for himself, but in the way of promises to his friends:

A Granite City automobile dealer is to manage the estate, with R. E. Johnson of Kewanee as assistant; James Ratcliffe, Kewanee coal dealer, is to operate the coal land; Cooper will give the edifice to the church on a $17,500 site on which he gave a $500 note as earnest money, and Mrs. Cooper will give the city a new nurses' home, his three assistants will have cosy homes grouped around a 30-room mansion for himself in the middle of the estate, he says.

Now Lives in Flat.

Just now the Coopers, with their four children, reside in a flat over a grocery store. It is a typical workman's home, reached by a dark and creaking stairway, with the kitchen doing double duty as dining room and the large living room bright with golden oak furniture and many pictures.

Another piece of furniture may be considerably on Cooper's mind these days. One provision of the will, he related in Granite City, was that he had to be out of debt. The Kewanee store from which he bought a stove a year ago recently served him with an execution for $46 allegedly still due.

3 Die in Premature Explosion.

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., Aug. 14.—Three men were killed and another injured when nitro-glycerin exploded before it could be dropped into an abandoned oil well on a farm near Elgin, late yesterday. The fuse was too short. The men killed were Lee Colpit, lease boss; his brother, Ray, and Levi Butler. A son of Lee Colpit was injured.

ADMIRERS BESIEGE CHANNEL SWIMMER ON GERMAN VISIT

Miss Ederle Plunges Into Lake to Satisfy Throng of Children.

By the Associated Press.

BISSINGEN, Germany, Aug. 14.—Gertrude Ederle, who is visiting her grandmother here, today was the center of several impetuous ovations by admirers of her recent fet in swimming the English Channel in 14 hours and 31 minutes.

On her way to the postoffice this morning, she was seized by a delegation of members of the Swimming Society of Goettingen, hustled into a waiting automobile and carried off to the university town, where the freedom of the town was extended to her.

Upon her return to Bissingen she was mobbed by several hundred school children, who vociferously demanded to see her in action. With the children at her heels, and with the entire village of Bissingen trailing along, Gertrude went to the nearby Feuer Lake, where she splashed and dove about for half an hour. She raced Hans Fause Dogerman, a German swimming champion, across the lake, which is only 250 feet long. The American swimmer won handily by several lengths.

Gertrude was advised today from New York that a new model automobile is awaiting her there. During her channel swim, Gertrude admitted that she was spurred on by the promise of a new roadster if she succeeded in her undertaking.

By the Associated Press.

DOVER, England, Aug. 14.—Miss Clarabelle Barrett of New Rochelle, N. Y., will start on her second attempt to swim the English Channel from here to the French coast at 6 a. m. tomorrow.

It is generally considered that to swim from the English to the French coast is far more difficult than to swim in the opposite direction.

Miss Barrett more than covered the channel mileage in her first attempt, Aug. 3. At that time, she pointed out, she was defeated only by a blanket of fog which hid the pilot boat and halted her two miles from the goal.

MAN STABBED AT BEER PARTY

Assailant Is Arrested, Neither Will Tell Cause of Fight.

Charles Gardner, 59 years old, of 1636 Franklin avenue, was stabbed in the right side and left hand at 10 o'clock last night by Frank Flanagan, 49, of the Franklin avenue address, as the men were in the kitchen of their home drinking home brew. Flanagan was arrested and Gardner was taken to City Hospital. His condition is serious. Neither man gave a reason for the fight.

MISSOURI CROPS SHOW EFFECTS OF SEVERE DROUTH

Recent Local Showers Afforded Only 'Spotted' Relief, Officials of Agricultural Department Say.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 14.—Scattered local showers in several sections of Missouri temporarily have halted the damage by drouth to corn and other crops in those sections, but the relief is spotted and only temporary, and more serious damage will result if the State does not get general rains within the next few days, according to reports received by State Department of Agriculture.

The department declined to place an estimate upon the damage caused to Missouri crops by the extended drouth, but it will run into the millions of dollars, it was stated.

The corn crop needs heavy rains and the few local showers falling in the last few days have given only local benefit. Early corn on the thin upland soil is firing and may be lost if the drouth continues.

Unless general rains fall in the State in the next few days the August forecast issued by the department and the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics, showing a condition of 74 per cent of normal for corn and an estimated corn crop of 185,845,000 bushels of corn, will be materially reduced, it was stated.

Corn Crop Late.

The forecast of a 1926 corn crop of 185,845,000 bushels is based upon an estimated yield of 27.23 bushels an acre from 6,825,000 acres planted in corn this year. The crop is 1925 totaled 201,338,000 bushels from 6,825,000 acres, the acreage being the same as this year. The average annual yield for the last five years has been 183,041,000 bushels.

Wheat Grades High.

The wheat crop harvested in Missouri this year is estimated at 19,470,000 bushels, from 1,298,000 acres, averaging 15 bushels an acre. This production ran more than 5,000,000 bushels higher than the department's estimate of 14,140,000 bushels last June, based upon a crop condition at that time of 69 per cent of normal. In 1925 wheat crop totaled 21,965,000 bushels. The wheat yield was much better in the southern part of Misouri than in the northern section, where there was considerable loss from winter kill. The wheat is grading high in virtually all sections, much of it grading 60 to 64 pounds a bushel.

Condition of the oats crop is 62 per cent of normal and the crop is estimated at 43,723,000 bushels from 2,137,000 acres, compared to a crop of 49,166,000 bushels of oats in 1925. The yield this year has been reduced by dry weather, rust and chinch bugs.

The tame hay crop also is smaller than usual, following an unfavorable season. The Missouri crop is estimated at 2,593,000 tons from 2,619,000 acres, or an average slightly less than one ton an acre. The 1925 crop totaled 3,098,000 tons.

Conditions of the apple crop is placed at 52 per cent of normal, forecasting a crop of 4,073,000 bushels. The yield last year was 4,100,000 bushels. The commercial apple crop is good in the northwest and southwest sections, but only fair in central Missouri.

The department report shows the condition of the peach crop at 59 per cent of normal, grapes, 84 per cent and pears, 60 per cent.

Continued dry weather has damaged pastures in nearly all sections of the State and this condition is reflected in reports of decreased milk production in dairying centers.

COOLIDGE NEW FARM RELIEF PLAN A BANKERS' POOL

Idea Same as That of Fess Bill, Rejected by Congress, but Using Private, Not U. S. Funds.

WHITE PINE CAMP, N. Y., Aug. 14.—President Coolidge's new plan for farm relief mentioned by his spokesmen following the visit here yesterday of Secretary of Commerce Hoover involves creation of a huge private banking pool with ready credit for co-operative marketing associations, it developed today.

Secretary Hoover is credited with originating the idea, which is supposed to follow the lines of the Northwest Finance Association, created when the farm situation was criticized two or three years ago by Eugene Meyer Jr., managing director of the War Finance Corporation. This association made up a pool of $25,000,000 subscribed in New York and other financial centers to help farm banks.

Private, Not U. S. Funds.

From such information as is available today it appears that President Coolidge hopes to carry out the administration farm relief program—which failed when the Fess amendment was lost in the last session of Congress—by unofficial methods, with private banking interests supplying the credit for co-operatives. For this reason it is presumed a pool of $100,000,000 the amount carried in the Fess amendment, will be attempted.

The spokesmen gave out yesterday that in a general way the proposal is to organize banks, mortgage loan houses and insurance companies into an instrumentality to give the farmers credit. What was regarded a development in the plan today was the visit to the president of Charles H. Barrett, head of the National Farmer's Union.

Plan Merely Incubating

According to information today the new farm plan is at present only in the stage of consideration. The individual or organization to whom President Coolidge will entrust the formation of the pool is not disclosed nor does it seem entirely certain that the plan will be put into effect. Secretary Hoover has left for California and it is believed he will not participate in it further. Secretary of Agriculture Jardine to whom the President might turn for advice before attempting any new farm relief movement, has not been summoned to White Pine Camp.

It was pointed out today that the pool organized several years ago did not require the full amount of the subscriptions. Banks of the farm sections which held frozen paper were strengthened by the existence of the fund upon which they could draw. It is now believed that the co-operative marketing associations would find their position greatly strengthened by the existence of such a pool. The Fess amendment, which the senate defeated because of opposition to the measure by the farm bloc and Southern Democrats, provided for an appropriation of $100,000,000 for extending credit to co-operative organizations in order that they might exercise control over surplus farm products. While the new plan has not developed sufficiently for its nature to be clear, it is assumed that the president feels something like the provisions of this measure can be worked out with the funds coming from private banking and credit institutions rather than may the government.

BEAUTIFUL CASKET PROVIDED FOR DOG IN HOME 14 YEARS

"Gill," Pet of Donald McKenzie, Given Elaborate Funeral in Pasadena Park.

"Gill" died last Tuesday. "Gill" was the 17-year-old English fox terrier who had lived with Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKenzie, of 7455 Florrissant road, Pasadena Park, Normandy, for the last 14 years. He was really regarded as a member of the family shared in all their secrets, their joys and sorrows, and his passing was a sad blow to Mr. McKenzie and his wife.

In this time of the family's great sorrow, their good friend Joseph McCoole, who lives at 314 Tower Grove drive, came to the bereaved to offer his consolations. Mr. McCoole also was deeply affected as he had always considered "Gill" a close friend. Now Mr. McCoole is connected with the St. Louis Coffin Co., and he asked if he might not present a fitting coffin for "Gill." The McKenzies said "yes."

Thursday there was a quiet funeral in the McKenzies' back yard. "Gill," lying in a beautiful casket, specially built, handsomely trimmed in plush and silk, a spray of roses upon his breast, was laid to rest while Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie, Mr. McCoole and other close friends stood by to pay him their last respects.

FORD PLANES AT KANSAS CITY

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 14.—From the west today came a fleet of airplanes contending for the $7,000 prize in the Ford Airplane Reliability Tour. The planes, 21 in number, reached Kansas City from Wichita, Kansas, on the eighth leg of the tour, making the flight without mishap.

Winging his way over the 170 airline miles in an hour and thirty minutes, Walter Beach, piloting a Travel-Air machine, made the best time for the distance.

Beach was the first to reach Wichita yesterday on the hop from Lincoln, Nebr.

The pilots will take part in an aerial circus tomorrow and Monday morning they will hop off for Moline, Ill., on the ninth leg of the contest.

7400 AT OPENING OF MISSOURI STATE FAIR

Heavy Rain Friday Night Kept Many Away and Made Auto Track Soft.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SEDALIA, MO., Aug. 14.—For the opening of the Missouri State Fair today the attendance was 7,400 in contrast with 5600 for the opening of the exposition a year ago. An exceptionally heavy rainfall last night prevented thousands from coming from points on dirt roads, which were muddy during the forenoon for the first day of the twenty sixth annual fair.

The county agricultural contest was judged during the day and in this the cash awards divided as follows: Buchanan County, with 206 products showing the agricultural resources of the county, took first prize, $500; Lawrence County, second, $300; Cole, third, $200; Chariton, fourth, $175; Pettis, fifth, $150; Benton, sixth, $125; Linn, seventh, $100.

Following in the order in which they placed in the contest were Andrew, Douglas, LaFayette, Ray, Johnson, Monroe and Franklin. The last seven counties in the placing received $500 prorated among them according to the score of the judges. In the varied industries building are many excellent displays presenting a resplendent variety of colors and exhibit booths. Two distant states, California and Florida, and the Dominion of Canada, are represented with elaborate displays depicting the agricultural, industrial and economic resources of these places.

But little judging was done during the day, such being confined chiefly to the home economics department.

For a time this afternoon it appeared as if the auto racing fans would be disappointed because of a heavy track for the races scheduled, but after a conference with fair officers and the racing promoters it was decided to eliminate the 50 mile free for all sweepstakes and do away with the time trials.

In a five mile drive Hampton Cox, driving a Lemonte special, took first place with Nelson Hayden, in a Hudson special, second. Time 4:32.

The second race for the same distance was won by Harley Wells in a Fronty special with Girard Cohen in a "Gomac" second. Time, 5:09½.

The final event of the day, another 10-mile race, ended with Harley Wells in a Fronty special first, Nelson Hayden second and Girard Cohen third. Time, 9:03 3-5.

The fair from Sunday on through the week is expected to attract far greater crowds, and on Monday morning all livestock will be on hand, as well as other exhibits, some of which has been late in arrival, owing to not being released from other fairs in time to reach here the opening day.

NEW MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM IS TO SEAT 17,000

TWO UNITS CAN BE COMBINED

Built-in Amplifiers Will Be Provided No Columns to Obstruct View of Spectators.

Seats for 17,000 persons will be provided in the Municipal Auditorium, which is to face Memorial Plaza at Fourteenth and Market streets, under the tentative plans of the Memorial Plaza Commission, comprising architects and engineers. Everyone in an audience there will have unobstructed view of the great stage and, through a built-in amplifier system, full hearing of a speaker's voice.

This will meet a long-felt want in St. Louis for a place of assemblage suitable for large crowds. The accommodations for 17,000 persons will be in two units—a capacious arena to hold 13,500 and a more compact theater to hold 3500. These will be on opposite sides of the stage, which is to be constructed for use by the units singly or in combination.

Ideas Obtained in West.

President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, an ex-officio member of the commission, and architects belonging to it, brought this idea from a recent tour of Western cities. Kinsey wants the architects to inspect auditoriums at Cleveland and Memphis, with the particular view of determining finally if a sound-proof curtain can be arranged to make the double stage practicable.

"Great arena" will be the name of the larger unit, on the second level of the structure. Since a cardinal principle in the design will be to provide for quick entrance and egress of crowds and ease in taking equipment, displays, scenery and other things in and out, the arena will be reached from the exterior, on all four sides, by ramps on easy inclines, over which the audiences may walk, and horses, wagons and automobiles may be driven. This will facilitate particularly use of the place for circuses and horse shows.

Main Floor Can Be Cleared.

No columns will be used in supporting the extensive roof of the arena, nor the roof of the theater. Thousands of seats in the arena will be of permanent nature in balconies, but the remainder will be removable, so that the main floor may be cleared when desired. This arrangement will make the arena better suited in many respects for spectacles than the Coliseum.

The stage will be at one end, big enough to hold great choruses and the largest orchestras. The arena will be to the south and the theater, or music auditorium, to the north. The one will accommodate spectacular affairs and the more important sort of civic gatherings, while the other and lesser unit will be for musical and theatrical productions chiefly. Special attention will be paid to acoustics. Suitable dressing rooms and kindred space will be provided.

Smaller Auditoriums.

A grand foyer will be connected with the arena, where audiences may promenade. The designers are picturing the colorful scene there if the Veiled Prophet's annual parties are moved to this building. Another eventuality they are planning for is the holding of important national conventions, especially those of the political parties. With these in mind they are arranging a suite for newspaper correspondents, with ample telegraph facilities and a lounging room where these men may snatch rest during long hours of work.

There will be a number of smaller auditoriums, to hold 600 to 1200 persons each, since it is considered a meeting structure of this sort needs small quarters as well as large. Furthermore, there will be a considerable number of committee rooms accommodating up to 40 persons each. All these units will be grouped around the two chief halls on the second and upper levels.

Will Have 30 Entrances.

The first level will be devoted to a broad exhibition room. On the eastern side this level will be entirely above ground but on the western it will be partially below the surface. The ceiling will be higher than that of any similar place the commission has heard of in other cities. There will be no basement, but storage spaces will be provided on the exhibit floor. Columns will be used in this level.

For big exhibitions the arena and theater may be used, too, giving, with the main room, 180,000 square feet of space. Like the auditorium level, the exhibit floor will be readily accessible from all sides, outside. In all, the building will have at least 30 entrances.

The site comprises most of the two city blocks on the south side of Market street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, running two-thirds of the way back to Clark avenue. It is being acquired under the condemnation suit for Memorial Plaza, which may not be wound up till 1929. However, the city is endeavoring to acquire as much of the land as possible by direct purchase, for which funds are available.

Ample Parking Space.

Studies of the architects and engineers for the design of the structure began more than a year ago, and it is proving to be arduous task. The plans are expected to be ready by midwinter. The exterior appearance has not been determined, nor has the height. The whole site will be occupied, except a 50-foot space on the south end, for access. The plaza will offer ample parking space. Dirt from a power plant will be obviated since heat and light will come from the projected municipal service building.

An item of $5,000,000 for the building was included in the 1923 bond issue and it will cost all of that, but is expected to be self-supporting. President Kinsey said it remains to be determined what arrangements shall be made as to charges for use of the units. Some affairs of a community nature will have free access, while commercial productions will be charged, probably on a sliding scale. It is emphasized that this is to be a community center, under the law, and as such is to be readily available to the public, under proper control.

FLYERS END TRAINING WITH AERIAL SHOW

35th Division Air Corps Exhibition at Lambert Field Witnessed by 1000.

Winding up a period of two weeks' training at its annual summer camp, the Thirty-fifth Division Air Corps yesterday afternoon gave an aerial exhibition at Lambert-St. Louis Field before a crowd of more than 1000.

The show opened at 3:30 with a formation flight of five planes—all Jenny training planes except the TW-8, flown by Maj. C. Ray Wassall, squadron commander and flight leader. The flight crossed the field several times in "V" formation, swung into a line, and finally resolved into a circle about the field, a difficult piece of formation flying, featured by the work of Capt. Charles E. Lindbergh, air mail pilot, who despite the inadequacies of his Jenny hung closely behind Wassall.

There followed bombing exhibitions and an effort by several enlisted men to catch baseballs tossed from airplanes at heights ranging from 150 to 300 feet. The accuracy of the ball droppers was excellent but the ability of the enlisted men as catchers was not so high and none of the balls were caught, although one landed squarely in the glove of a man on the ground.

A skillful bit of flying was done by Capt. Lindbergh and Maj. Wassall when they took off in separate ships and circled the field without breaking a 30-foot length of cord tied to their respective wing ends.

During all the later events on the program there were five squadron ships in the air with a continuous exhibition of aerial acrobatics. As they landed Lieut. Frank Dunn took off with Al Muesch, an exhibition performer, who made a parachute jump from an altitude of 2000 feet. He landed safely in a field near the hangars to close the afternoon's show.

CONKEY DEFIES PHYSICIANS AND SINGS IN 'FRA DIAVOLO'

Despite Infection of Wounds, Municipal Opera Leading Man Appears in Title Roll.

Thomas Conkey, leading man of the Municipal Opera, appeared last night in the title role of "Fra Diavolo," against the advice of physicians who pronounced him to be suffering from an infection of his accidental wound, inflicted by birdshot in a misplaced shell fired in Monday night's performance.

Drs. R. B. H. Gradwohl, E. H. Johnson and J. S. Young yesterday certified they had removed five shot from Conkey's right ankle joint, and that 18 other shot still were in his right leg and thigh, but causing no serious trouble. The ankle wound, they said, has caused an infection. They believe that, to avoid the danger of permanent disability, Conkey should be kept in bed.

ANTI-KLAN WOMAN SEEKS OKLAHOMA GOVERNORSHIP

Mrs. Miriam Bezanson Announces Herself in State Race as an Independent.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Aug. 14.—Mrs. Miriam Olivet Bezanson, wife of a retired physician, today announced she would run for the governorship as an independent antiklan ticket. When she filed her name with the State Election Board last May she agreed to withdraw in favor of any nominee who aligned himself with the antiklan forces. It is said she is not satisfied with the position of either the Democratic or Republican candidate on the klan question.

LARGE SUM IN CITY LICENSE TAX FEES AT ISSUE

A very large sum in license taxes, the amount of which he could not estimate, would be lost to the city, License Collector Chapman declared yesterday, if the city is unable to establish its right to tax St. Louis wholesale concerns on the total amount of their sales, regardless of the place of manufacture or sale of goods, under a proposed suit against the International Shoe Co.

This company is the only one which has raised this question, the Collector said, but an upset of the city's contention would permit various other concerns to reduce their license tax payments.

The International Shoe Co. is licensed as a manufacturer, but not as a merchant, but this year for the first time, Collector Chapman has sought to levy on its business as a merchant. A merchant's license will not be issued, however, while the proposed suit is pending. Prior to 1924 the company made its return on the basis of total business, including sales of shoes manufactured out of the city. Then it raised the contention that it was carrying on an interstate commerce and could only be taxed by the city on sales of goods made within the city.

History of the Controversy.

In 1924 the company made a return on $15,000,000 worth of manufactures in St. Louis and the Collector assessed it for $76,000,000 in additional sales. The company took its objection to the State Supreme Court and a commissioner of that tribunal ruled in the company's favor, although it was shown all the goods were shipped to St. Louis as the distributing center. While the case was pending, a 1925 return was made by the company on about $15,000,000 of locally made goods, but the Collector assessed it for $79,000,000 more, as before.

The city tried unsuccessfully to show in that suit that the tax on manufactures outside the city could be assessed as a merchants' levy, on the theory that the merchants' tax is an occupational charge for the privilege of doing business in the city, on the basis of total sales made and amount of stock carried here.

This year the assessment in dispute is $86,138,744, as a merchants' tax. It is Collector Chapman's understanding that the shoe company will refuse to pay its tax on this, and as soon as formal refusal is made his attorney and the City Counselor will sue the company in Circuit Court, asking $155,000, the amount of the tax on the sums disputed in 1924 and 1925. Success for the city in this suit would force the company to pay on the 1926 and future assessments and would set a precedent for other wholesalers. The company has paid its 1926 tax on goods manufactured in the city, on an assessment of $6,210,315.

Two Taxes Are Distinct.

The merchants' and manufacturers' taxes are distinct from each other, but for some years both have ben at the rate of $1 per $1000 of sales. Total tax on the disputed assessments of the International Shoe Co. for the three years, 1924-26, is about $241,139.

In trial of the threatened litigation the question to be decided will be whether the city can levy on total sales of the company as a merchants' tax, thus answering a dispute not determined in the previous suit.

WOMAN CHARGES DEPUTY COLLECTED SPEED BRIBE

$5 'Shake-down" is Alleged to Have Occurred on St. Charles Rock Road.

Another complaint of a "shake-down" by a St. Louis County deputy constable was made yesterday by Mrs. William O'Brannon, of Lee's Summit, in a letter to Prosecuting Attorney Bueller at Clayton. Mrs. O'Brannon said that on July 17 a man who represented himself as a deputy constable accused her of speeding on St. Charles rock road, and suggested she drop a $5 bill on the road. She complied and saw him pick up the bill as she drove away, she said.

Constable Flood of St. Ferdinand Township, in which the alleged shake-down occurred, said he would assist in prosecuting the man if Mrs. O'Brannon identified him. He said he dismissed all of his regular deputies but two, on Aug. 10, upon hearing complaints from the Automobile Club of Missouri and various motorists.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—In its twelfth fiscal year of operation, which ended June 30, the Panama Canal carried 5926 ships and collected $22,931,762.23 in tolls. Compared with the preceding fiscal year this is an increase of 524, or 11 per cent, in the number of transits, and $1,530,532.47, or 7.1 per cent, in tolls collected. The 5197 commercial transits carried an aggregate cargo of 26,370,448 long tons. Of the total number of transits during the last fiscal year, 534 were United States Government vessels, which paid no tolls and transported 177,047 long tons of cargo. Had the latter vessels paid the usual tolls the canal revenues would have been increased by approximately $926,863.

EUROPEAN STEEL AND IRON TRUST PLAN PERFECTED

Negotiations Virtually Complete to Unite French, German, Belgian and Luxemburg Concerns.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 14.—Negotiations for the formation of a continental steel and iron trust have been virtually completed. The agreements will be submitted to the industrial interests of France, Belgium, Germany, including the Krupps, and Luxemburg, who are concerned, for their approval. It is not expected that the agreements will be signed before Sept. 15 because of a difference in opinion between the French and Belgians on some minor details which will be discussed before ratification by all the groups involved.

The conversations which have been carried on here for the last few days follow preliminary feelers during the last two years with the object of forming a combine that will be able to compete with American and British iron and steel producers in foreign markets. The negotiators are particularly interested in markets in South America and the Orient, as it is admitted that the British hold the colonial trade and that the United States is supreme in Canada.

Since Lorraine ore and Ruhr coke have been united by the Franco-German commercial treaty and private agreement the internal settlement of heavy industry prices has been rapid. It took years to knit them together, and now with European solidarity anticipated, the question of steel rail prices will occupy the principal place in the discussions of the present conference.

French steel makers, who are able to undersell their competitors with the falling franc, are willing to stand with the others now on the basis of prices figured in gold, so that the American price of $30 a ton is likely to prevail.

Italy Fears It May Suffer From Proposed Steel Combine.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Aug. 14.—The Paris negotiations for an iron and steel agreement among France, Germany and Belgium is exciting extensive comment in the Italian press, which fears that Italy will suffer from it.

"It is an agreement which may become an alliance dominating European metallurgy," says Giornale d'Italia: "We expect either a policy of very low prices, intended to inundate the Italian market, or a policy of high prices, rendering purchases abroad extremely difficult or impossible for the Italian industry. Either case presents a grave menace for Italian industry requiring immediate defensive measures."

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—German financial writers welcome the progress that has been made at Paris for the creation of a continental iron and steel agreement apportioning shares of production in the industry to various countries. They predict that the pacts will afford protection against overproduction and ruinous competition.

"Such Franco-German co-operation also will serve to ameliorate political and other acerbities," says the Boersen Courier.

STOPS HEAT....

Stops Cold . . . Quiets Noise . . .

Amazing Lumber

adds new comfort . . . saves money

It builds homes Summer-cool . . . Winter-warm . . . Costs little or nothing more . . . and year after year will save from 25% to 35% of your fuel money!

A RADICAL, drastic change is taking place in the building of homes today!

Already more than 90,000 homes have been built with an amazing lumber. A lumber that shuts out both the discomforts of sweltering Summer heat . . . and the biting cold of Winter . . . that keeps every room at a healthful, unvarying temperature the year 'round . . . that cuts fuel costs by about ⅓.

These houses have set a wholly new standard of American building practice. Now that insulation has been made practical, heat-leaking houses are a poor investment. The authorities agree such houses are becoming obsolete: harder to sell, rent or borrow money on.

This amazing lumber is Celotex, developed five years ago to meet the urgent need for a building material that would resist the passage of heat and cold better than wood lumber, masonry and other wall and roof materials.

Celotex is not cut from trees, but is manufactured from the long, tough fibres of cane. It is enduring . . . scientifically sterilized and waterproofed. Celotex is stronger in walls than wood lumber, because of the greater bracing angle of the broad boards, and many times better as insulation. Wood and moisture can not penetrate Celotex. It quiets noise.

ACTUALLY saves money. Thus, unlike ordinary insulation, Celotex is not an extra item in building. It replaces wood lumber as sheathing (see the illustrations) eliminates building paper, gives greater wall strength and adds the insulation needed back of wood, brick and stucco exteriors at no extra cost.

Under plaster, replacing lath, Celotex costs a few cents more per yard at first, but is a great economy. It means less upkeep expense because of no lath-marks . . . fewer cracks. Plaster bonds with Celotex far better than it keys to lath.

Because Celotex helps deaden noise it makes your home more quiet and restful.

Moreover, with Celotex in the walls and in the ceilings or roof of your home, a smaller, less expensive heating plant and smaller radiators will keep you comfortable.

And year after year, Celotex will save from 25% to 35% of your fuel money!

NEW COMFORT for old homes. In houses already built, a big measure of this comfort and economy is being secured by lining attics and basements with Celotex. That helps a lot and costs but little. There are dozens of other places where Celotex is the ideal material for building and remodeling.

If you are going to build, talk with your architect, contractor or lumber dealer about Celotex. Leaders in these lines advise its use. All lumber dealers can supply it.

If you are going to buy see that Celotex is used before you put any money into a house. Now that Celotex has made insulation practical, heat-leaking houses are a poor investment. Also ask your contractor or dealer about the $200.00 gold bond now issued on every Celotex-insulated house.

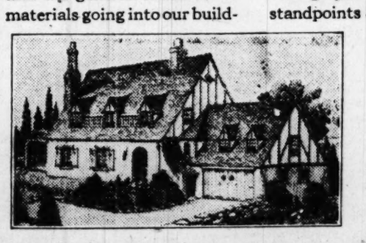
St. Louis builder says:
"It's our greatest selling point"

Harry H. Hawke & Norman B. Comfort, Inc., 217 Calumet Bldg., builders of houses in the Country Club section, say: "Except for the distinction of design of our homes and the general character of materials going into our buildings, we find the greatest single item of appeal to our clients to be that of "perfect insulation." We have experimented with many types of insulation and find none to be so highly desirable from all standpoints as Celotex."



This house in the increasingly popular French style is now under construction by Hawke & Comfort in York Village. Celotex is being used throughout, underneath the plaster

UNDER PLASTER

On inside walls and ceilings, plaster is applied directly to the surface of Celotex. This eliminates the use of lath and gives stronger, insulated walls: less apt to crack and free from lath-marks.

AS SHEATHING

Celotex is nailed directly to the framework and supplies the insulation needed back of brick, wood or stucco exteriors. Here it replaces the rough boards formerly used, gives greater strength to the house walls and makes building paper unnecessary.

IN THE ROOF

Most heat beats into houses through roofs in summer, causing hot attics. Most heat leaks out through roofs in winter, causing high fuel bills. Celotex applied over or under roof rafters gives the needed protection. For best results both uses are recommended.

FOR OLD HOUSES

In homes already built, a big measure of Celotex comfort and economy may be secured by lining attics and basements with it. In the attic an extra finished room can be made by nailing Celotex to the roof rafters. In the basement line ceiling with Celotex.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

IDA—There are a number of the smaller moving picture theaters having "vaudeville night." There is, however, no special night set aside for this. It may occur any night in the week. The best way for you to do would be to watch the advertisement in the papers for an announcement.

S. D.—The following is a recipe for cheese souffle: 2 tablespoons of butter, 3 tablespoons of flour, ½ cup of scalded milk, ½ teaspoon of salt, few grains cayenne, ¼ cup of grated old English. Young American cheese, yolks of 3 eggs and whites of 3 eggs. Melt butter, add flour, and when well-mixed add gradually scalded milk. Then add salt, cayenne and cheese. Remove from fire; add yolks of eggs beaten until lemon colored. Cool mixture, and cut and fold in white of eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake 20 minutes in a slow oven. Serve at once.

S. M.—To clean white plumes and feathers, dip them up and down in warm soapsuds and rinse repeatedly, with the faintest tint of blueing in the last water. To curl them place a hot flatiron so that you can hold the feathers just above. Take a bone or silver knife and draw the fibers of the feather between the thumb and the dull edge of the knife, taking not more than three or four fibers at a time, beginning at the point of the feather and curling one-half the other way. The hot iron makes the curl more durable, and after a little practice one can make them look as well as new feathers. Or they can be curled by holding them near the stove, not near enough to burn; withdraw at intervals and shake. Then hold them over the heat again until the curl is satisfactory.

J. T.—The English Channel is the narrow sea which, since the glacial period, separates England and France. On the Strait of Dover, where it is narrowest, being only 21 miles wide from Dover to Cape Gris-Nez. From this strait it runs southwest for 280 miles, and joins the Atlantic Ocean at the Scilly Isles, with a breadth of 100 miles between Scilly Isles and Ushant Isle. It occupies 23,000 square geographical miles, and contains the Channel Isles, Ushant Isle, Isle of Wight, and other islets and rocks, especially off the coast of Brittany. It is shallowest at the Strait of Dover, where the chalk ridge at the depth of 12 to 30 fathoms joins England and France. The English Channel abounds in fish, of which the chief are pilchard, mackerel and oysters.

DAILY READER—Charivari is a French term used to designate a wild tumult and uproar produced by beating of pans, kettles and dishes, mingled with shouting, bawling, groans and hisses, got up for the purpose of expressing a general dislike for persons against whom it is directed. The etymology of "charivari" is not clear; the Germans translate it by "Katzen music," the English of which is "caterwauling." In France, during the Middle Ages, a "charivari" was generally raised against persons contracting second marriages, in which case the widow was especially assailed. On these occasions the participants who were masked accompanied their hubbub by the singing of satirical and indecent verses, and would not cease until the newly wedded couple had purchased their peace by ransom. "Charivari" answers to the English concert upon "marrow-bones and cleavers," with which it was customary to attack a couple who live in notorious discord. It was also organized against an unequal match.

READER—Tennyson's Enoch Arden is a narrative in 911 lines of blank verse, and is one of the most popular poems of modern times. Sixty thousand copies of it were sold soon after its publication in 1864 and translations appeared in seven foreign languages. The story itself was such as to make a wide appeal, but the poet enhanced its power. He describes the life and scenery of an English fishing village and a sailor's exile on a tropic island with elaborate, vivid details and genuine feeling. He shows also the strength and purity in humble English folk, as he imagines them; of certain simple universal, if restricted, ideals of family life as seen in his hero's aspirations for his children and in his self-sacrifice when, returning from long absence to find that he has been thought lost at sea and his wife happily remarried, he refrains from disclosing himself. The story, as distinct from the setting, is presented with studied, almost prim, simplicity, but with narrative effectiveness, to be seen, for instance, in Enoch's silence self-effacement after beholding Annie at the hearth with Philip and his children. False sentiment appears, perhaps, in Enoch's making sure that his wife shall know of his return after his death and in the author's emphasis upon the costliness of his hero's funeral. There is weight too in Bagehot's criticism that the poem is an example of ornate rather than pure art, concealing lack of truth to facts under beautiful but irrelevant details. Nevertheless, Enoch Arden holds its place as one of the loveliest descriptive and idyllic poems in English.

MISS E. G.—The fourth commandment of the Jewish law distinctly commands that the seventh day of the week shall be a day of rest, in which no work of any kind shall be done. The early Christians observed the seventh day for a long time, because such was the law of the land. The fact that Jesus arose from the dead on the first day of the week led them to meet again on that day, and it gradually became a custom for them to meet on the first day of the week for Christian fellowship. Thus both the first and the seventh days of the week were observed by Christians for some time. The first day of the week, Sunday, was called the Lord's day. The first time Sunday was set apart as a holiday was in A. D. 321, when Constantine issued his famous edict prohibiting certain labors and trades on that day. Since then numerous decrees and laws have been issued or enacted, both by the ecclesiatic and civil authorities, governing the conduct of different peoples on that day. As Judaism waned and Christianity grew the sentiment and basis for observing a day of worship changed. The completion of creation had hitherto seemed to be the basis for such observance. But the resurrection of Christ furnished a higher motive for worship. Hence, first by popular custom, then by legal or ecclesiatic enactment, the seventh day of Judaism were both adapted and changed to the first day of the week. Record of this change is found in the New Testament, Acts 20:7: "Upon the first day of the week the disciples came together to break bread," that is, to administer the holy communion of the Lord's supper. Other evidences also appear in the New Testament. Pliny, in his letter to Trojan, A. D. 100, mentions the custom. Tertullian, A. D. 200, mentions it.

Left sad and lonely hearts alone.
Their loving heart has ceased to beat,
And before we knew it they were gone.
Sadly missed by
MRS. F. ALLES, WIFE AND MOTHER.
And all those who loved them.

In loving memory of Ollie Ruschenberg, who was killed Aug. 17, 1925.
Just five years ago you left us; how we miss you, Ollie dear;
It is that vacant chair cherished should be taken from our home.
But the joys that do not perish live in memory alone.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, SISTER AND BROTHER.

In loving memory of our dear son, husband and father, Thelbert U. Hiatt, who departed this life one year ago, Aug. 12, 1925:
Dear son, how we miss you.
Since from earth you have passed away:
We grieve and long for you day by day
Have you forgotten?
Years of sadness often flow:
Love shall always keep you near us.
Tho' you left one year ago,
Never shall you be forgotten.
Never from our memory fade;
Loving hearts shall always linger
Round the grave where you are laid.
Sadly missed by Mother, Wife Son and all who loved him.

LOST ARTICLE Advertising

When concentrated in the Post-Dispatch is almost certain to re store the article if it is found by an honest person, because the Post-Dispatch is the recognized Lost medium of St. Louisans that many consulted by persons who find lost articles is also a fact recognized by St. Louisans that many lost articles are advertised exclusively in the Post-Dispatch. Each week the Post-Dispatch prints TWICE as many LOST and FOUND ads as the next St. Louis newspaper. If a lost article cannot be recovered through the Post-Dispatch it is, as a rule, not recovered.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Declaration of a 50 per cent stock dividend by the General Motors Corporation, an increase in the rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank at New York, fresh Government estimates on the cotton and grain crops and a gain in unfilled orders of the Steel Corporation were among the events of the week that gave Wall street something new to think about. So many important incidents had not been crowded into the space of a week in a long time. Speculators in the stock market took the opportunity to make a new appraisal of conditions on the basis of latest reports. That they have not to date discovered any fundamental change in the outlook may be judged from the performances on the stock exchange where diverse movements have occurred without establishing any new or predominate trend. The cutting of one of the largest melons in history did not affect materially the price even the stock of the company that was involved for in the market, those events are discounted before their occurrence. In this particular instance the action was discounted by the rise of more than 100 points in the General Motors stock since March.

Rediscount Rate Brought in Line.

"The increase in the rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to 4 per cent bringing the local rate for accommodations in line with that at the other 11 institutions in the system, was, perhaps, the event that came as the week's greatest surprise. Indisputable signs of an adjustment was seen in the forward creeping movement in the price of money, and the withdrawals of call loans in response to demands for funds from the interior, but the authorities generally had reckoned that the 3½ per cent rate would stand until autumn. There was nothing unusual about a slight tightening in rates at this period of the year when the seasonal demands for funds with which to move the agricultural crops multiply until they reach a peak in October. A marked scarcity in the number of new capital flotations indicates confidence on the part of borrowers, presumably, that money rates will undergo no pronounced change in the immediate future. The future trend in money will depend primarily upon whether the autumn brings further material expansion in industry or a modest recession. At the present moment slowly rising rates are indicated, but no dear money.

Agricultural Situation.

"That our agricultural sections may expect a satisfactory year is the logical conclusion suggested by the latest official estimate on the crop bpt if the farmer makes more money this year than he did last year it will probably be through his greater diligence in saving and economizing. Growers of winter wheat are in a favored position by reason of the large crop predicted for this country and the short Canadian output. Aug. 1 calculations indicate a total yield of wheat in this country of 839,000,000 bushels or 173,000,000 more than last year. That farmers may hope to realize a fair return on this bountiful crop is at least suggested by the estimated 100,000,000 bushel shrinkage in the Canadian yield. Present prospects are the South will produce 15,621,-000 bales of cotton, or substantially more than had been expected, and, such a production, following the bumper crop of last year, would tend to hold down the price of the commodity. Whatever losses the cotton grower suffers in immediate purchasing power, however, will to a measure be offset, so far as the country's general prosperity goes, by the improvement thus estimated in the cotton goods industry. The corn crop will be smaller than last year but nevertheless adequate.

Steel Industry Developments.

"For the first time this year the Steel Corporation has reported an increase in its forward bookings but for a long time the maintenance of activity on a high level has been a matter of remark. The usual midsummer downturn not only has failed to appear in that key industry but the demand has enabled the companies actually to make gains. With the building boom losing its force gradually it is difficult to see what dispostition is being made of all the steel produced and some authorities are beginning to wonder whether a portion of the output has not gone into stocks. This much of course is plain, that building, even if the peak has been reached, still proceeds on a big scale and that unprecedented activity in the motor and allied industries accounts for a considerable consumption of the metal. The extraordinary demand for cars this year makes it reasonable to suppose that 1926 will top the record production of 3,839,-302 passenger cars and 497,452 motor trucks, or 4,336,754 motor vehicles, established in 1925. Already the companies are planning the introduction of new and alluring models at the January showing in New York and the experts meanwhile have pushed ahead their estimates of the time for a downturn in sales."

Record U. S. Steel Price.

"With United States Steel common at a new high record for all time above 156 and other favorites pointing upward, the recovery went ahead today in the stock market. The volume of business approximated 1,000,000 shares. Although suggestions were heard in the financial district that the advance in the rediscount rate here this week was intended as a check on speculative excesses in security markets, traders apparantely were inclined to ignore the signal and continued to bid for stocks. Fluctuations were again irregular in the bond market.

Bulls Still in Control.

"Speculators for the advance continued in control of the market and bid up prices under the leadership of the recently active industrial favorites. General Motors spurted to 214 before settling back slightly, while U. S. Steel equaled its record high above 156 then eased off about a point, and before the end of the session demand for the stock had increased to such an extent that a new high record for all time had been recorded. Mack Trucks, Dupont, Hudson Motors, American Smelting and General Electric were other strong features. In spite of considerable week-end profit taking demand for industrials continued in good volume with the result that a strong finish marked the short session. Rail shares and rail equipment stocks pushed forward briskly, such leaders as Atchison, Baltimore & Ohio and Chesapeake & Ohio attracting attention.

Weekly Bank Statement.

"An explanation for the firmer tone in money rates in the last week, resulting in an advance in the rediscount rate at the New York Federal Reserve Bank to 4 per cent, found in the weekly statement of the Clearing House banks. This revealed a decrease in surplus of $39,-139,190, resulting in a drop of the excess reserves to $6,282,820. Loans, discounts, etc., declined $40,840,-000.

Foreign Exchanges Steady.

"Fluctuations were narrow in the usual dull week-end in foreign exchanges, a steady tone being maintained in the principal European rates. Sterling held firm, while French and Belgian francs showed a tendency to rally. The remainder of the list was quiet.

WEEK'S BOND TRADE ON EXCHANGE QUIET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The event of the week in the investment market was the raising of the rediscount rate of the New York Federal Reserve Bank from 3½ to 4 per cent, thus putting it on a parity with the other banks in the system.

In a general way Wall street had been talking about the probability of this action for a long time and when it came it was not much of a surprise. At the same time it did bring about some selling of high-grade bonds, the most notable of which was in the United States Government list. Here the declines were sufficient to depress quotations to a level where they were nearer to the low than the high of the year. This in itself was not a large loss, for prices have been ranging for some time now. In the same way there were fractional recessions in first mortgage rails of the savings bank type.

Aside from the incident of the increased rate the week was a very quiet one. Transactions fell to approximately the low of the year. One reason was the decline of interest to the stock market. Another was the refusal of holders to sell at current levels and the hesitation on the price, indicating a practical deadlock.

The market was helped by the comparatively small volume of new offerings. New issues for the week totaled around $35,500,000 which was an increase over last week's aggregate of $10,150,000 but was the least for more than a year and the sum in the corresponding week of 1925 was $110,150,000.

Bond Trade Steadies at Week End.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Bond trading was steadied today by indications that the recent increase in the Federal Reserve rate had caused no serious liquidation of investment obligations by banks and other large holders. Some encouragement was derived from the spectacular recovery of the stock market after the initial flurry of selling which followed the rate action.

Railroad liens shared to a limited degree in the improvement in prices of the carriers, based on reports that the rate of freight traffic and indications that the North western grain crop was surging the corner. Delaware & Hudson 4s, Pere Marquette 4s, Missouri Pacific general 5s and Southern Pacific refunding 4s closed fractionally higher.

Rails, Oil, convertible 6½s and Republic Iron and Steel issues were the rallying force than a point, were the outstanding features in the industrial group.

There was no pressure to sell.

Peruvian 7½s to a new high record basis of 109. French, German and other European bonds drifted aimlessly.

What's Wrong With Oil Stocks?

A month ago, in spite of widespread bullishness at the time, our clients were advised against loading up with oil stocks. Now, though the general market is up, oils are down more than 3 points. What next? Are technical and basic conditions now right, for a broad advance? Or will the oil lag? Another impartial analysis, up-to-date, with specific recommendations, being mailed our clients. Weekly Metal Review

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The demand for finished steel during the week was fulled fully up to the recent average and the gains in orders on the books of the corporation at the close of July were based upon as confirmation of the many optimistic reports relative to business. Prices were very steadily maintained.

Pig iron was again quiet as far as new business was concerned but there was some improvement in the Eastern demand and prices were steady.

Copper has remained quiet. The July figure representing deliveries slightly in excess of production were considered significant from the producer's standpoint, but buyers failed to bring in any fresh business of consequence. Foreign dealers are said to be cutting producers' prices materially and in the absence of export interest buyers for domestic consumption are holding off. As a result there has been little trading by second hands, but the leading producing interests were said to be holding for 14¼ cents at the end of the week.

Tin advanced to the highest levels since the war, reflecting concern over light visible supplies and fears of an inadequate early production. Prices later reacted on the poor showing in foreign markets, but buyers took hold freely on the setback and the undertone at the close was firm, with good hold firm despite the late decline in London. Consumers continue to draw sparingly on odd contracts, but were disinclined to make fresh purchases in volume.

Zinc was steady with a good consumptive demand, particularly from galvanizers. The decrease in stocks during July had a favorable effect.

ELY-WALKER IS TRADE LEADER ON EXCHANGE

Aggregate Transactions for Week Exceed Those of Other Individual Shares—Market Not Very Active.

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Aug. 14.—Ely-Walker, with aggregate sales of a little over 1100 shares between a range of 33¾ and 34, with final price of 34, was the individual feature as far as activity was concerned on the local market during the past week. The market was not active and price changes were on the whole without significance.

Next to Ely-Walker was another dry goods stock, Rice-Stix, which showed a net gain of a small fraction for the week. Some National Candy common changed hands with upturn of two points for the period. Missouri Portland sold at from 53½ to 57½.

A check of the movement of prices showed that advances, declines and the number of securities that were unchanged for the week were about the same in number.

A new listing was announced during the week, 40,000 shares of $1 par common stock of the Interstate Leasehold Co. being admitted. No transactions were recorded, though bid was made.

Foreign Exchange

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, says:

The week's trading was mixed. Japan was in steady demand, selling at new high for the year at 47.87, sterling was steadily supplied, falling five-eighths of a cent to $4.85⅝, but the close was assured at some quarters that this heaviness was due to the appearance of commercial bills in greater numbers, contended that offerings of commercial bills were small and that cotton bills have not yet appeared even in trifling amounts. Swiss and Dutch units both in supply at declines after the week and with sterling were greatly influenced by the advance in the Reichsbank's discount rate.

French after being established above one cent a week ago suddenly turned easy following publication of the famous letter. The franc reached 1.02 but the trading on the decline was in limited ranges from 1.02 to 1.03, making its lowest yesterday. Scandinavians were strong in the first half of the week, Norwegian rose to 21.99, but eased heavy in the last two days. Spanish exchange moved in a more orderly manner. At steady tone marked Italian exchange, although the drive against speculators made moderate gains, but became heavy later following another decline in the lira. Greek drifted to a new low for the year.

Canadian exchange was not changed in dollar parity, however, may have been a factor in holding the market steady at the premium of 3-32, around which it has held for some time. South American exchanges had irregular tendencies and strength. Uruguayan after being in supply in the first few days became in demand, while Argentine, Brazilian exchange showed a heavy tone toward the end of the week.

Foreign exchange on Saturday in the usual dull week-end in foreign exchanges, a steady tone being maintained in the absence of pressure. Sterling, Paris, Berlin, while French and Belgian francs showed a tendency to rally. The volume of business of the week was quiet.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Extreme buoyancy characterized today's brief session of the market. With speculative confidence, which had been shaken by the unexpected increase in the New York Federal Reserve Bank rate, restored by the sharp rally late yesterday, operations for the rise assumed control of the upward movement at the outset and succeeded in lifting scores of stocks one to 15 points above yesterday's final quotations. Total sales ran well well over 1,000,000 shares.

Establishment of a new high record for all time by United States Steel common at 156⅝, an extreme overnight gain of 3⅝ points, was one of the outstanding features of the session. Buying of this and other high-grade industrials was believed to be predicated on the speculative belief that other large corporations will follow the lead of the General Motors Corporation in making a generous distribution to stockholders before the end of the year.

Dupont, directors of which are expected to pass on its stockholders at least part of the "melon" received through the stock dividend on its large General Motors holdings, soared 14½ points to a new high record at 314½, and then eased to 313. American Smelting opened 2½ points higher at 150, the highest price in about two decades, but slipped back later to 149. Among the other industrials which attained new peak prices for the year, or longer, were General Electric (new), Gotham Silk Hosiery, United Cigar Stores and Vanadium Steel.

General Motors again changed hands in large volume at advancing prices. The first sale was a block of 10,000 shares at the "spread" price of 210 to 211½, subsequently it moved up to 214, and then back to 211, where it showed a net gain of 3 points on the day. Total sales in that issue exceeded 110,000 shares. Hudson sold as high as 70⅜, but slipped back to 68¾ at the close for a small fractional gain.

A good demand was noted for the railroad equipment shares in response to increasing railroad inquiries for rolling stock, track material and signal apparatus.

Railroad shares also participated extensively in the upswing. Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio and Rock Island all breaking through into new high ground. The statement credited to Hovland Elliott that the roads in the Northwest had "turned the corner" attracted fresh buying into the shares of carriers traversing that region. St. Paul preferred touching a new high for the year at 23⅜.

Commodity market were firm. Wheat rallied over a cent a bushel and cotton closed 20 to 30 points net higher.

Foreign exchanges held steady in quiet trading. Demand sterling ruled around $4.85⅝, and French francs were quoted just under 2¾ cents.

Lead, Zinc and Copper.

Lead was reported strong in St. Louis Saturday at $8.90 per 100 pounds. Zinc was weak at $7.45 per 100 pounds.

Edward P. Weston Found Hungry in Brooklyn Street

Former World's Champion Walker Had Disappeared From Niece's Home in Philadelphia Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—A tired old man with slightly wobbly legs, sad travesties of the strong limbs that bore him not so long ago proudly from coast to coast, was recognized by Brooklyn police today as Edward Payson Weston, missing from Philadelphia since Tuesday.

"Yes," he responded to the policeman's question, "I'm Edward Payson Weston, world's champion walker."

And then, his mind seeming unable to focus more than a moment on any topic, he talked, rambingly of other things. He was very tired and his eye lighted momentarily as the policeman spoke of food.

Mind Apparently Wandering.

He went to the nearest police station without protest. Food was placed before him and he ate voraciously, lapsing then into a state of imperviousness to all around him. His mind apparently was traveling backward along the years and questioners could learn little from him of his most recent adventure.

"Yes," he said again, though no one had asked him that, "I am Edyard Payson Weston, the world champion walker," and he smiled, slumped there on a hard chair in the bare room, smiled perhaps in memory of the feats he had accomplished and the honors he had won.

A physician examined him and expressed surprise.

"Why, he's in fine physical condition. Age has done its work, but allowing for that he's in remarkable shape."

Had Left Niece's Home.

The old walker—he is 88—mumbled something inaudible and a flicker of emotion that might have been pride passed over his face. The police gathered that he had come most of the way from Philadelphia in an automobile, that he had slept on doorsteps for four nights running and that twice he had been drenched with rain.

Notification of his discovery was sent to Weston's niece, Mrs. Anna O'Hagan, with whom he has been living.

Mrs. O'Hagan had expressed the opinion before her uncle was found that he had gone away because he was unable to bear the thought that he, all his savings gone, was forced to live on her slender income and might even become a public charge.

INDICTED BANKER'S HEARING FOR GUARDIAN IS HELD UP

Georgia Solicitor Charges Attempt to Remove Financier From Court's Jurisdiction.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 14.—Hearing of a petition by Joe Patterson son-in-law of W. D. Manley, indicted banker, asking for a guardian for Manley on the ground that he is mentally incapacitated was blocked today when Judge John R. Humphries, of Fulton Superior Court, granted a temporary writ of prohibition, returnable Tuesday. Solicitor John A. Boykin, on whose application the Superior Court order was issued, viewed the guardianship hearing as an effort to remove Manley from the jurisdiction of the Superior Court.

Manley was indicted on a felony charge in connection with the failure of the Farmers' & Traders' Bank of Atlanta, of which he was president, and is at liberty on $25,000 bond. This bank was one of $3 closed recently in Georgia.

The Cornelia Bank and its branch at Demorest, with resources in excess of $1,000,000, the Habersham Bank, Clarksville, resources more than $500,000, and the Merchants & Planters Bank of Whigham, will reopen Monday, it was announced by the State Banking Department today. Other banks of the chain may reopen next week, it was said.

HOMICIDE VERDICT AGAINST NEGRO WHO KILLED WHITE MAN

A Coroner's verdict of homicide was returned yesterday against Eugene McConnell, 21 years old, a Negro, for the fatal stabbing of Matthew O'Grady, 64, a railroad section hand, in his shack at the foot of Miller street Friday afternoon.

Albert Williams of 11A North Sixth street, a friend of O'Grady, testified that McConnell and two other Negroes visited the place and inquired as to the time, and when O'Grady pulled forth his 98-cent watch, McConnell grabbed for it, saying he wished to see for himself. O'Grady resisted and was stabbed in the left leg, and bled to death.

McConnell admitted stabbing O'Grady with a pocket knife, but said he did so after O'Grady struck at him.

Mars broke in a tangle, steadily improved his position on the outside responding gamely to punishment and wore down Pompey in the final sixteenth. Pompey broke moving, drew away into a long lead under steady restraint and stopped badly in the final furlong when put under pressure. Display, very fractious at the barrier, steadily improved his position and finished well. Crusader was left, moved up with a rush in back stretch, almost got on even terms with the leaders at the quarter turn and tired from his early efforts. Boot to Boot had no excuses. Blonde stopped.

Odds—Mars, straight 7 to 1, place 2 to 1, show even; Pompey, place even, show 1 to 2; Display, show 2 to 1.

By G. F. Ryall.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Pompey beat the barrier in the Travers Stakes here this afternoon, while Crusader was left at the post, so Pompey beat Crusader, but Mars beat them both.

Crusader ran an amazing race considering his impost of 129 pounds and that he was backing up as the barrier was sprung, and turning into the stretch it looked as though he would win, but the effort of making up so much ground was too great, and he tired at the end, and finished unplaced.

Mars, coming from behind with the same sort of rush that won him the Saranac Handicap a week ago, beat Pompey, which tired in the last furlong, by a length and a half, while Display, closing with a rush, was third, that much behind the Coe entry. The time for the mile and a quarter was 2:04 3-5, and the race was worth $15,050 to the winner.

Women Swim Stars Set Two World Marks

Ethel McGary Beats Her Own Time for 500 Meters in A. A. U. Meet.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Aug. 14.—Ethel McGary of the New York Women's Swimming Association, bettered her own world record for the 500-meter swim when she covered the distance in 7:41 1-5 in the National Junior A. A. U. meet here today. Her former mark was 8:05.

Agnes Geraghty, a club mate of Miss McGary, set a new world's mark for the 200-meter breast stroke when she beat her own time of 3:33 2-5 by 4-5 of a second.

Mathilda Schuerich of the same club set a new national record of 1:31 1-5 for the 100-meter breast stroke.

JOHN McCORMACK IN DOUBLES MATCH IN TENNIS TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

DEL MONTE, Cal., Aug. 14.—John McCormack, famous tenor, made his debut in tournament tennis play here today and came through a winner in his first round match of the annual Del Monte Championship. Afterward he admitted he had suffered an attack of "stage fright" more severe than he ever experienced on the singing stage.

His partner, Maurice McLoughlin, the "comet" of a few years ago, was not up to his usual form, but the team defeated M. W. Rich and A. McAslin of Sacramento, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3.

REBEL PIRATES FAIL TO ISSUE STATEMENT

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 14.—The promised statement from Max Carey, deposed captain of the championship Pittsburg National League baseball club, in which he said he would disclose events leading up to his suspension and the unconditional release of Babe Adams and Skeeter Bigbee, failed to materialize tonight. The whereabouts of the three, who drew the heavy penalties for their part in a movement to oust the veteran Fred Clarke, assistant manager, from the bench, was uncertain. They were reported to be in conference, working on a statement.

The only statements of the day came from Carey, Clarke and McKechnie. The former captain said he had had a good night's rest, as did Adams and Bigbee; that their conscience was clear and that what they had done was for the good of the team. McKechnie, commenting on a report that six players had voted against Clarke, said he would make no effort to learn the names of the other three and that the issue was closed.

HOT & OFF THE BAT

By John E. Wray

Pittsburg Plus.

THE Pirates, as a result of the late incandescence over the Fred Clarke case, today are minus three veteran players—Babe Adams, Bigbee and Carey—but are PLUS a consolidated team.

Friends of the Cardinals are deploring the situation, believing that the country will say they defeated a crippled rival should the local team finish first in the National League race.

First, however, it is necessary that the Cardinals win the flag. They can worry afterwards. For, in the estimation of some fans, the Pirates will be considerably strengthened rather than weakened by the incident which cost them three veterans. The situation which caused unrest has been removed and the leaders in the uprising apparently all have been eliminated.

The club is now free to devote its entire attention to the business of winning the flag and gathering that world's series bonus of $5000 per man.

Friendship on a ball club has never yet gone as far as inducing players to support the cause of fellow players at a cost of $100,000 to the members of the club.

Won't Be Missed.

THE Pirate team is as strong without the players in question as it was with them, except in so far as they may be considered reserve assets.

Adams is through, Bigbee was a bench rider and Carey has not had any marvelous record this year. The outfield of Waner, Cuyler and Barnhart is the best Pittsburg could put into the field today. The playing strength of the club is therefore not impaired, save in case of an unusual number of injuries requiring replacements.

Pittsburg's weakness for the remainder of the year will be largely in its uncertain pitching. If either Meadows or Kremer falters, infinitely greater damage will be done to the team's prospects than will result from Fred

HELEN WILLS NOT TO DEFEND TENNIS TITLE

Father, Examining Physician and Tennis Officials Urge Her Withdrawal; She Finally Agrees.

By Leased Wire to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

FOREST HILLS, Aug. 14.—Miss Helen Wills, California's pride and for the past three years America's woman tennis champion, will not defend her title in next week's annual championship tournament at Forest Hills.

The youthful champion who, so shortly after her recent operation and against the advice of many of her friends, resumed tournament play was persuaded today to withdraw her name from the entry list and thus turn the tournament into an open championship.

A physical examination ordered by her father and performed by Dr. Robert H. Kennedy of New York disclosed, what many had suspected, that Miss Wills is physically below par, and that the exactions of a week of championship tournament play might result in permanent injury.

Despite that finding, however, the courageous Helen would not accept the physician's orders until she had consulted leading tennis officials.

Asks Mersereau's Advice.

"I want to know what you think of it," she asked Jones Mersereau, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, "If you think I should defend my title I will do so. I don't want to be thought a poor sport and if you think my absence from the tournament will reflect upon me or upon such other contestants who might win the title I will start play on Monday."

Mercereau, who had been in touch with the examining physician and had received a certified report of the examination informed her that neither he nor any other of the association officials would permit her to take the risks involved.

"I give you the same answer I would give my own daughter should she be in your position," he told her. "You are young and have your future before you. There are many national championship tournaments to come and it would be, going against my personal sentiments as well as those of the United States Lawn Tennis Association to advise you or even permit you to engage in the approaching tournament."

Going Back Home.

Dr. Kennedy told the champion that it would be advisable for her to spend the next few months recuperating from the effects of her operation. His finding was communicated to Miss Wills' father and it was his expressed wish that Helen return immediately to her home in Berkeley. According to Mersereau the girl champion plans to comply with the latter instructions next week and may see none of the championship matches.

Indication that Miss Wills was not ready for strenuous play came at East Hampton three weeks ago. In that tournament she carried on to a victory in the finals. But at Seabright one week later she was all but defeated by Mrs. Charlotte Hosmer Chapin and Miss Eleanore Goss and did succumb in straight sets to Miss Elizabeth Ryan, while at the Women's New York State Turf Court Championship at Rye she met her second defeat in eight days when Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory vanquished her after three long, taxing sets. It was the first defeat Miss Wills had suffered at Mrs. Mallory's hands since the California girl won the championship three years ago.

With Miss Willis out of the title tournament Miss Ryan, recently repatriated American and the one reigning tennis star of this country who has not denied a willingness to follow Mlle. Suzanne Lengien into professional tennis, becomes the odds-on favorite for the title.

By the Associated Press.

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 14.—With a sweeping triumph at 6—2, 6—1 over Alfred H. Chapin Jr of Springfield, Mass., Vincent Richards, Olympic champion, today paved the way for his fourth battle of the year against William T. Tilden, American titleholder, in the final round of the Southern New York State title tournament.

The rivals of six years' standing will renew their feud tomorrow afternoon on the turf courts of the Westchester-Biltmore Club, three sets out of five to prevail. The outcome of their struggle not only will decide the title at stake, but will have an important bearing on selection of the singles players for America's defending Davis Cup team, since Tilden already has gone down to defeat three times before his youthful foe from Yonkers.

Richards Outclasses Chapin.

Richards required only 32 minutes to dispose of his semifinal match against Chapin. Taking advantage of a heavy court to use his low skidding chop, the ranking No. 3 singles player skimmed the lines with clever placements and handled Chapin's returns with unerring skill at the net.

Twice he broke through the New England player's service in the first set, piling up 31 points to 21 for Chapin. In the second set he traveled at an even faster clip, making three breaks through service and SHELDON LEE SCOTT of Wichita, Kan., who went to Buffalo only to fail to qualify for the national public parks golf championship, will take a title back to the Sunflower State anyway.

On his way home he stopped off here to compete in the city golf championship and today won the Chicago City title, taking it out of the Chicago district for the first time on record.

Playing over the Jackson Park course Scott won from T. R. Montgomery of the Home Club, 4 and 3 at the thirty-third hole of the final round. Scott won through superior driving and putting.

Browns to Play Two Games Today

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 14.—If a two-day rest means anything in the battered life of the Brownie hurlers, Manager George Sisler's hill staff should be in good shape to work against the second-place Indians in their double-header here today. Ernie Wingard and Joe Giard are likely to be called on as starters.

The twin bill was made necessary when rain caused postponement of yesterday's game.

After the two engagements here today, Sisler's men go to Boston to open their final Eastern trip of the 1926 season. They have four contests scheduled with Lee Fohl's Red Sox and three with each of the other teams on the Atlantic end of the circuit, making a total of 13 clashes in the East.

FAILURE OF THEVENOW TO TURN DOUBLE PLAY IN 6TH COSTS VICTORY

Alexander Has Old Teammates Baffled for Five Innings, Then Two Bad Breaks Send in Pair of Runs—Blake's Hit and His Pitching Big Factors in Triumph.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Grover Cleveland Alexander deserved a 2-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs yesterday afternoon, but because Tommy Thevenow did not think quickly enough after fielding a grounder in the sixth inning with a Cub on first base, Alexander had to take the loser's share and the Cardinals, by dropping the first game of the series, dropped half a game further behind the league-leading Pittsburg Pirates. Hornsby's men are now two and a half games behind Pittsburg and one percentage point ahead of the Reds.

That sixth inning is just about the story of the game and the 16,500 fans gave the Cardinals a great reception and enthusiastic support throughout the afternoon and went home with that sixth inning standing out as the high light of the contest.

Alex's Great Start.

Alexander had turned back 14 out of 15 batters in five innings. He had retired 10 before Heathcote singled in the fourth inning and he got the next two batters and three in the fifth.

Then Gabby Hartnett lined a single to left to start the sixth. The Cardinals had a two-run lead and that single by Hartnett did not worry the fans and it did not worry the Cardinals.

To Alexander it was just a chance for a double play.

Blake, the pitcher, was the next hitter and the Cardinals almost turned the double play when the Sheriff grounded to Thevenow. But the ball was not hit soundly enough and before Hornsby could take Tommy's relay and whip to Bottomley the fleet-footed Blake had chased to first base.

But now there was one out and the same chance for a double play, which would end the inning and nullify that Hartnett single.

The Break of the Game.

That's what Thevenow was thinking about when he took a hot hopper from Sparky Adams' bat. But instead of whipping the ball to Hornsby, Thevenow elected to chase to second, touch the bag and then throw to first. Perhaps he remembered his toss to Hornsby before he had started only a force play, and thought that he might save a second by pivoting over the bag and whipping to Bottomley.

At any rate, Tommy took several stops toward second and then saw that he had underestimated his distance from the bag. He had absolutely no chance to get to second in time to make a double play and when he finally changed his plan and tossed to Hornsby he forced Blake all right, but it was too late to double the racing Adams at first.

There was the break of the ball game, a little play that would have checked the Cubs if it had been executed the other way, but which, as it appeared, paved the way for two Chicago runs and changed a potential 2-1 Cardinal victory into an actual 3-2 triumph for the Chicago Cubs, who are playing with all their hearts, with the scent of world series money in their nostrils.

Alex Heaves Wild.

It took several breaks to turn that unfortunate choice of Thevenow's into a costly mistake. The first came when Adams stole second. The next was when Heathcote, the next batter, hit a hot grounder to the right of Alexander. Alex stuck out his bare hand and stopped the ball, but it rolled a few steps away from him. He hustled after it, but his hurried throw to Bottomley was low and skipped past Jim to the concrete wall of the stand and Adams chased over the plate and Heathcote raced all the way to third before the ball could be retrieved.

But this was not all. It seemed that the Cardinals had had their share of hard luck, not just for an inning, not just for a game, but all season—but it was not to be. Stephenson sent a roller toward Thevenow. The fans sat back and heaved a sigh of relief. No tied score anyhow. Alexander still had a one-run lead, was the line of their reasoning. But it was all a mistake. The lead was not to be, for that dinky little ordinary roller of Stephenson's took a crazy hop over Thevenow's head and rolled into left field for a single, Heathcote jogging over the plate with the tying run.

Then in the seventh, the Cubs earned a run on straightaway hitting, the only run they would have had if the gods of baseball had deigned to smile on young men who are trying to get along and who wear Cardinal livery. Howard Freigau, former Cardinal, opened the seventh with a single to left, Cooney, a former Cardinal sacrificed and after Hartnett walked, Blake closed his eyes and popped a single into left field, scoring Freigau.

That was the ball game. Alexander retired after that inning and Herman Bell turned back the Cubs in the eighth and ninth, but what of it? The Cardinals could not score off Sheriff Blake after the fourth inning and all the good pitching by Alexander and Bell was wasted.

There has been a heavy advance sale for the game this afternoon, and the Cardinal business office is prepared to handle a capacity crowd.

Rhem to Oppose Kauffman

Had the Cardinals won yesterday, the box office would have expected today's attendance to break the record of 37,186 set June 27, when Alexander won the first game of a double-header. However, with the defeat of yesterday to temper the fans' enthusiasm, the record is expected to stand until the Pirates call later in the month.

Charles Flint Rhem who has won 14 games, will pitch against the Cubs in the second contest of the series this afternoon. Tony Kauffman is due for Chicago.

St. Louis fans never gave the Cardinals a more cordial reception than they did yesterday afternoon. The team was cheered when it took the field and each individual was given an ovation as he went to the plate.

Alexander received 10 letters be-

ATTORNEY GENERAL TO SETTLE BOXING COMMISSION DISPUTE

WILL DEFINE AUTHORITY OF COMMITTEES

Chairman Brower Requests Ruling to Clarify Dempsey-Tunney Situation in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—State's Attorney General Albert Ottinger was appealed to today to render a decision on the powers and functioning of the New York State Athletic Commission by George Brower, a member of the commission. The request was made in an effort to clear up the controversy which developed in the prospective heavyweight championship fight between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney.

The appeal was made in a letter to Attorney General Ottinger, who stated that he would draw up an opinion on it by Monday at the earliest. Brower reviewed the proceedings of the boxing commission and of the license committee to date, pointing out that the boxers had both applied for a license to box in this state and that while a license had been issued to Tunney, action on the application of a license by Dempsey had been deferred.

Brower asked for specific information on the right of the license committee to arbitrarily refuse a permit for a boxer if he has complied with all the rules of the commission and the commission already sanctioned, by a majority vote a proposed match involving the boxer.

Here is the Law.

According to the New York State boxing law, better known as the Walker law, for it was fathered by this present mayor of New York City, the jurisdiction of the commission is:

"* * * sole direction, management, control and jurisdiction over all boxing, sparring and wrestling matches or exhibitions to be conducted, held or given within the State of New York. * * * The commission shall issue under its hand and seal annual permits in writing for holding such boxing, sparring or wrestling matches, but only to corporations thereunto duly licensed * * *"

And the License Committee is defined:

"The License Committee is hereby given the sole control, authority and jurisdiction over all licenses to hold boxing, sparring or wrestling matches or exhibitions for prizes or purses or where an admission fee is received, and over all licenses to any and all persons who participated in such boxing, sparring or wrestling matches or exhibitions * * *"

The legal aspects of the Dempsey license question have worried observers since that day that Brower reversed his stand and invited Tex Rickard, promoter, to come back from Chicago and place the matter before the New York Commission.

Brower, many contended, knew the law and did not take the unexpected action without due study of the situation.

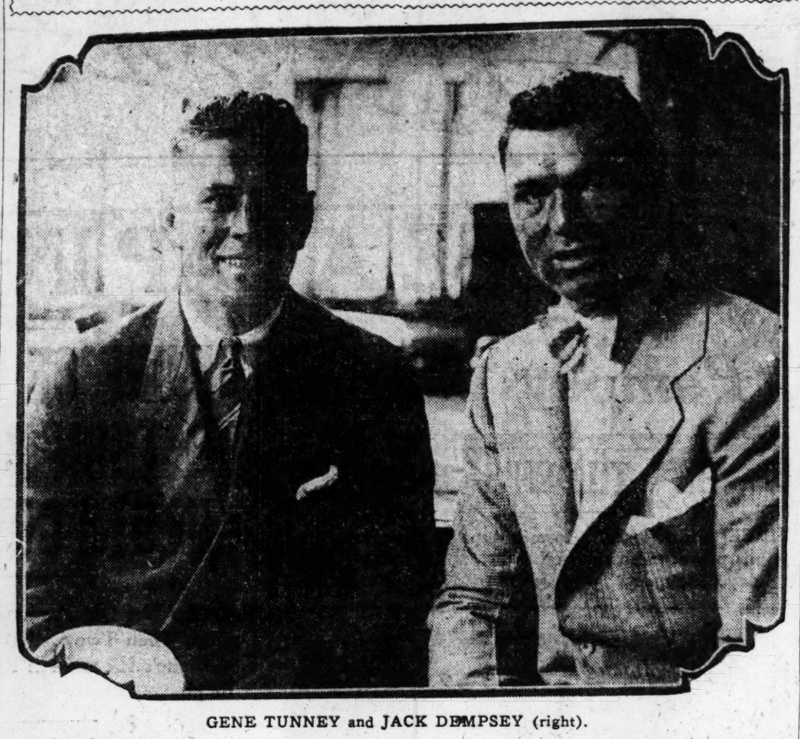
Which Has Precedence.

On the other hand it is contended that the commission went far beyond its power in sanctioning a bout between two men who had not obtained licenses.

But there was precedent on the side of the commission, for when Dempsey fought Firpo at the Polo Grounds, he received his license only a few hours before he entered the ring. A far different situation maintains now with the License Committee definitely pledged to act as an independent body. Brower believes that the License Committee is a part of, and in many matters, subsidiary to the commission, that when the commission declares a boxer eligible, as in the case of Dempsey, issuance of a license is only a matter of form.

The Attorney-Geeral is expected to deliver his verdict before the meeting of the License Committee now scheduled for Monday.

"When Shall We Two Meet Again?"



GENE TUNNEY and JACK DEMPSEY (right).

The New York Boxing Commission says they shall meet Sept. 16 at Yankee Field, but the New York License Committee may say "No!" when it meets tomorrow.

Mars Wins Travers Stake; Crusader Fourth

the opening event at seven furlongs. She raced Apostle into submission in the run around the stretch turn but the latter held Sherman safely for the place at the end.

Widener's Jumper Wins.

Joseph E. Widener's Lorenzo won the North American steeplechase at about two miles, beating the Sewickley Stable's Vessington King, with Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Tassel Third. Brantome, one of the Green Tree pair—the favorites—finished far back. Brantome and Erne II made the early running, racing head and head for half a mile then Erne bobbled and left the race to Brantome, which went as far as he could then tired. The defeat broke the run of luck of the Green Tree Stable and was th first important stake through the field that Mr. Widener has won in some time. The race was worth $3275 to the winner.

Bonnie Pennant Wins.

Bonnie Pennant, which disappointed twice at the meeting, came back and won the Spinaway stakes, the classic for 2-year-old fillies, at six furlongs. Making all the running, she beat Candy May by a head, with Pandera third, half a length back. The time for the distance was 1:14 2-5.

Pandera ran a winning race. She picked up 127 pounds and when the break came she was away badly and did not have clear sailing until the field straightened well into the stretch. Then she closed with such a rush that it looked as though she would get up. McAtee saw that Bonnie Pennant was winning, so he did not come on at the end. Bonnie Pennant was in a running mood today. Breaking well, she raced Fire Opal, which was quite a tip, and Lodina into submission before they turned for home.

Candy May ran a good race, too, for she was up there fighting it out with the daughter of Pennant from there on. Aramagne ran a good race, too, for she was away badly and closed with a rush in the last furlong to be beaten only a head by Pandera for the shortest end of the purse. The race was worth $9850 to the winner.

Calumet beat Pheasant Bruns and eight other platers in the fourth at one mile, which preceded the big event. The Winner followed the pace to the furlong pole where he came away handily for his second victory of the meeting.

Four Home Runs Hit as Senators And Yanks Divide

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The Yankees and the Senators broke even before one of the biggest crowds of the year this afternoon. More than 40,000 watched the leaders take the first battle by a score of 4 to 2 and lose the second by a count of 10 to 5.

Four home runs featured the afternoon's play.

Goslin made two in the second game, clearing the right fence in the first inning with Myer on base and repeating the trick in the ninth with the bags empty. Gehrig made his third home run in two days off Ruether in the first game, scoring Combs ahead of him, and Ruth hit his thirty-eighth circuit clout in the third inning of the first battle. Jones was a puzzle to the Senators in the first game, but the Senators made 19 hits off Shocker, Braxton and McQuaid. Shocker lasted less than two innings and yielded seven hits before he left.

By winning the first game the Yankees captured the season's series with the Senators. It was their twelfth victory and there is only one game more to play. The Senators have taken four of the six games played by the teams in the last week.

Robins Take a Double Defeat From the Braves

Boston Triumphs, 4-3 and 5-2 —Jack Smith Star at Bat.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 14.—Boston beat Brooklyn twice today, 4 to 3 and 5 to 2. Petty lost the first game through poor support, O'Neill's two passed balls being costly.

Benton held the Dodgers to five hits in seven innings, but when he opened the eighth by walking Cox and allowing Felix to single, Manager Bancroft took him out. Mogridge did splendid rescue work. Gautreau's stickwork and fielding were big features.

The Braves made 15 hits off Grimes and McWeeny in the night cap, the nine registered against the spit ball king including five bunts.

Hearn did not allow the Dodgers a hit while he toiled on the mound, but the two runs were charged against him. Bunnie gave six bases on balls. Genewich limited the Dodgers to three hits and no runs in six innings.

J. Smith and Welsh each got four hits.

Detroit Wins From White Sox

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 14.—Detroit defeated the White Sox 5 to 2 in the opening game of the series this afternoon at Comiskey Park. Earl Whitehill was the winning pitcher. Alphonse Thomas and Hollis Thurston could not stop the Tigers.

The Tigers counted two in the fifth and another pair in the sixth. Singles by Bassler and Fothergill and a pass to Neun gave the Bengals their markers in the fifth. Tavener's walk, Bassler's double and Whitehill's single accounted for the Tiger tallies in the sixth.

WOMAN TO COMPETE AGAINST MEN IN GOLF MEET HERE NEXT WEEK

A woman player in a golf tournament in which men will play, is one of the unusual features promised in the meet here next week of the Typo Athletic Association.

An entry has been received from Mrs. William H. Seamon of Brooklyn, N. Y. She will compete with members of the International Typographical Union members and newspaper writers in their four-day tourney beginning next Monday. Play will be over the Glen Echo and North Hills Country Club courses.

OSAGE COUNTRY CLUB INVITES INSPECTION

Today and next Sunday have been set aside by the Board of Directors of the Osage Country Club for inspection and members and friends are invited to visit the new club building.

The building is done with the exception of inside finishings. Nelson Cunliff, president, plans a formal opening later.

The ground on which the Osage Country Club is being developed, approximately 120 acres, is restricted to country club and other recreational uses, for a period of 50 years, in an indenture filed and recorded at Clayton, which names Ralph F. Bixby, Henry McCook and James C. Smith as trustees. This guarantees the future of the new club, while the financial arrangement guarantees its membership against financial loss or assessments, it was stated by Cunliffe, who made known the execution of the instrument.

LAYDEN SIGNS WITH ROCK ISLAND ELEVEN

HOT OFF THE BAT!

Clarke's determination to make it clear who is boss of the club.

Queer Quirks.

THE Browns were idle yesterday, but Gossip was not. This largely concerned the fact that Ernie Nevers' wife accompanied the team East, after Nevers had insisted that he would not go with the club if she was not permitted to accompany him.

All baseball clubs hate to face this issue. The Browns have fronted it on more than one occasion. In the instance of Urban Shocker it cost the club the services of that great pitcher for several weeks and considerable humble pie-eating, although the wife did NOT go with the team.

Earlier in the season Nevers was denied the privilege of taking his wife around the circuit, as it is one of the unwritten rules of every ball club that wives and other impedimenta be left behind on trips to foreign battlefronts.

But this time Nevers and his wife are with the club.

Fans wonder.

The Answer.

THAT the club should humor a recruit who has only partly made good, after turning down a veteran of proved value is not as inconsistent as it seems.

Nevers not only has shown promise, but he remains to be signed for next season. That signing may involve some difficulty, since Nevers' earning power is not limited to baseball.

He has signed a contract to handle the Duluth football club of the professional league, at a salary of $20,000—which is about quadruple his St. Louis annual emolument.

He may decide that the baseball job is pin money and that the football berth is everything—in which case the Browns may have to sit up and beg.

There is another difficulty confronting the Browns. On Sept. 15 Nevers must report to Duluth for this football duty.

But on Sept. 15 the Browns will be at home and probably needing Nevers' services.

Will St. Louis release him, while the other players must toil on?

Baseball's Troubles.

THERE are problems in baseball such as this that admit of no solution, under the rules.

Isolated cases like that of Nevers, who has a special value in more than one sport, arise from time to time and have to be treated outside of the rules. They are exceptions, and require exceptional treatment.

The club could insist that Nevers not enter any football contract at all for the rules require that the players obtain their club's permission to take up off season sports of a hazardous nature.

Nevers, for example, might be injured in football in a way to utterly ruin him for baseball. The club would, therefore, be justified in preventing him from reporting, if it would.

On the other hand if denied permission, Nevers might quit baseball entirely and leave the club holding the bag for $7500 investment and a year of salary, spent for a player who thus far has won only two games for the team. The club's hope of recouping next year on its outlay would be ruined, if he retired.

The club's handling of the case seems to be for the best, as Nevers at this time appears likely to develop into a real pitcher.

Big Three Passing?

TODAY we learn that Harvard is considering dropping Princeton from its football schedule. Michigan is the team to take its place.

Eastern writers see in this the breaking up of the Big Three of blessed memory.

In reality, the Big Three long ago was broken up. For years Princeton was not on the Crimson schedule. In recent times the old triumvirate was reassembled, but too late to regain supremacy.

With or without Princeton, the Big Three has been for years only a memory as regards leadership in football.

The members of this once-supreme triangle are today only equals (and not always that) of their many rivals in the football world.

Stars Go Elsewhere.

The cause of the decline of the Big Three in football is the same as that which precedes economic decline—loss of control of the sources of supply.

Time was when all top-hand football players either begged to enter one of the Big Three schools or were rounded up by the scouts of those organizations.

Today the situation is different. Other schools grab the football star in the high school embryo. And so it came to pass that the Big Three of other days today are now just any old three out of MANY.

Same Old Bill.

NOT yet can we stamp the "counterfeit" on one bill—Bill Tilden. Big Bill again showed his mastery of Little Bill Johnston yesterday, although it took four sets of real tennis to turn the trick. This is one more than the average, for Big Bill.

But it indicates that the lanky champion is forgetting his stage lines and regaining his tennis power in time for the Davis Cup and national title matches.

The Right Step.

HELEN WILLS was advised by her father to withdraw from the national championships. That may have been because she has been beaten twice within eight days—an eyantuation that was to be expected.

However, Miss Wills has shown that, while she is not in top form, her playing has not injured her in anyway. It perhaps would have been better for her recovery, even if she faced sure defeat, to play through the national championships than to remain out of it.

CARDS DEFEATED BY CUBS, 3 TO 2, BLUNDERS COSTLY

Luck gave the Cardinals their first run. Blades singled to right to start the first inning, advanced on Southworth's sacrifice and scored when Hornsby's grounder straight to Adams bounced over Sparky's head for a single.

With one out in the fourth, Bell singled to center and scored an untainted run. Douthit's single to right sent Les to third and he scored on O'Farrell's sacrifice fly.

Hartnett opened the sixth with a single to left, the second hit off Alex, only to be forced by Blake. Adams then hit to Thevenow and the grounder should have ended the inning, but Tommy, instead of tossing to Hornsby to start a double play, tried to play it alone. After taking several steps toward second he changed his mind and threw to Rogers, but then it was too late to make a double play. Then came misfortune that too frequently follows loose fielding.

Heathcote made a great catch of Southworth's fly in the third inning, making a glove-hand catch just back of the diamond. He could have had a double play, doubling Blades off first, but nobody was covering the bag. Heathcote then made a nice running catch of Hornsby's foul to end the inning.

In the sixth inning, Wilson made a running catch of O'Farrell's short fly, but dropped the ball after running several steps. The umpires held a conference and decided that Hack had held the ball long enough to make it a put-out. It was a fair decision.

You never can tell about strategy. Alexander didn't give Hartnett anything good to strike at in the seventh, preferring to take a chance at Blake. But Blake, a left-handed batter, punched a single to left, scoring Freigau with a run that put the Cubs ahead.

The American Legion band from Belleville will attend the game today and throw a few tunes before the hostilities start.

It was an enthusiastic but orderly crowd. There was much cheering, but no shots were fired and no pop bottles thrown.

Race Meet Called Off.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 14.—The Red Sox and the Athletics divided a snappy double-header here today, the natives taking the first game, 3 to 1, while the invaders snatched the second, 3 to 2.

Ruffing held the Macks to seven scattered hits in the opener, while Lefty Grove and Jack Russell did some excellent pitching in the nightcap.

Bryan Harriss, who started the second game for the Red Sox, was taken out in the second inning after the Athletics had made all their runs, and Russell held them to one hit for the remainder of the game.

With two on and one out in the ninth, Haney drove a savage liner toward second, but Dykes made a great leaping catch and stepped on second for a double play, retiring the side.

U. S. Distance Champ to Swim Here, Saturday

10-Mile Mississippi Swim Attracts Two New York Entries.

Clarence Ross, winner of last year's National A. A. U. long-distance swimming championship, and Joe Farley, who finished second in the 1925 event, have been selected by the New York A. C. to represent that organization in the 10-mile river swim to be held over the old M. A. C. course on the Mississippi River next Saturday afternoon.

Ross and Farley are training under the direction of Bud Goodwin, the New York paddler who established the present record for the 10-mile course when he captured the M. A. C. event of 1910. Goodwin plans to accompany the New York swimmers on their visit to St. Louis, according to a letter received by Chauncey P. Heath, chairman of the Western A. A. U. swimming committee and donor of the championship trophy.

Heath expects at least six out-of-town entries for the local revival of the 10-mile water marathon. Entries have already been filed by Roy Colombo of Galveston, Tex., and Sanford P. Hodges of Indianapolis, Ind., while Walter Laufer of Cincinnati and Herman Dankief of Detroit are planning to compete. Heath also expects one or two entries from the Illinois A. C. of Chicago, represented in the past by Mike McDermott, who took the M. A. C. trophy out of competition in 1916.

Approximately 15 local natators are training for the 10-mile event, according to reports from various pools and river clubs. Forest Park Highlands will probably be represented by Charley Mudge, Virgil Moulton, Frank Hutchison and Adolph Furman, while Herbert Bernau Jr., Fred S. Miller, Bruno Stahlmach and Charley Pace are prepping to compete under the colors of the New Coliseum A. C.

Roy Berghaus and Leo Duenckel of the Kieffer's Beach Swimming Club are other prospective contenders. Berghaus won the district championship five-mile swim in the Mississippi River last year. Duenckel captured the recent three-mile handicap event in the Meramec.

TILDEN'S DEFEAT OF JOHNSTON FEATURES TRIUMPH OF EAST OVER WEST

COAST NET STAR WINS ONE SET FROM CHAMPION

Eastern Players Make Clean Sweep of Intersectional Series, Taking Seven Matches in Two Days.

By the Associated Press.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 14.—The rivalry that has given American tennis history some of its most sensational chapters started its eighth season today with a triumph for "Big Bill" Tilden over "Little Bill" Johnston.

Tilden gave a convincing demonstration of his mastery, beating back his rival in decisive fashion after the Californian had exhibited only a brief flash of power. The scores were 6—3, 4—6, 6—1, 6—1.

The national champion's victory was the high spot of the two-day struggle for intersectional team supremacy in which the East overwhelmed the West, taking all seven of the matches that brought most of the top ranking stars into action.

Richards and Williams Win.

The crowning touch to the eastern sweep was applied by the eastern doubles combination of Vincent Richards and R. Norris Williams, the national champions, who took the measure of Johnston and Edward G. Chandler of California, in two sparkling sets, 6—3, 6—4.

Straight set victories were scored by eastern representatives in two other singles matches that completed this afternoon's program. Francis T. Hunter defeated Phil Neer, 6—4, 6—3, in the contest that clinched the intersectional series, while Manual Alonso, the Spanish Davis Cup star, emerged the winner over Cranston Holman, Stanford star, 6—3, 8—6, in a hard fought battle.

The more seasoned and experienced array put into the field by the East demonstrated their superiority by registering five of their seven victories in straight sets. It was the eastern ace, Tilden, who figured in both extra-set engagements, yielding a set with A. H. Chapin Jr., in the doubles engagement with Holman and Ogden yesterday, and dropping a set to Johnston today.

Tilden-Johnston Match.

Tilden and Johnston crossed racquets today for the first time since their stirring five-set struggle in the finals of the national singles last September, but their match had few of the throbbing moments of that epic struggle. Johnston held his own for the first two sets as they matched drive for drive in a base-line duel, but the champion made short work of his rival in the last two sets, bringing the full battery of his versatile assortment of shots into play as "Little Bill," wilting in the humid atmosphere, saw the punch and accuracy vanish from his strokes.

Tilden, although he was erratic, particularly on service, in the second set, always held command. He had Johnston on the run with his sharply angled drives to the corners, whipped across his marvelous backhand for repeated placements and mixed his attacking strokes craftily in a manner that had the Californian baffled. Tilden himself was wild at times but Johnston's mistakes more than offset the champion's errors.

Tilden's cannonball service was a potent weapon when he needed points but Johnston's delivery went to pieces toward the end. In the last two sets, "Little Bill" made his service good only once in six times.

HOME BREW STAKE AMONG FIXTURES AT NORTH RANDALL TRACK

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 14.—Single G, 16-year-old son of Anderson Wilkes and Little Gyp, and winner of more races than any other horse, will make his season's debut at North Randall during the Grand Circuit meeting opening here Aug. 23.

This became known today when President Win Kennan announced the entry list for the six days. Large fields are entered in all events, which include the Rainy Day Sweepstakes, the richest event for two-year-old trotters, and the championship stallion stake for three-year-old trotters.

Other fixtures are the Cuyahoga for 2:07 trotters, Forest City for 2:09 pacers, and the North Randall for 2:12 trotters, and the Inauguration of the Home Brew Sweepstake, for two-year-old Cleveland bred trotters. Each has a value of $3000.

Eight have been named in the Rainy Day Sweepstakes, which has a value of $14,400, to be raced on opening day. Nineteen are listed in the championship stallion stake, valued at $11,400, the probable starters including Guy McKinney, Peter Maltby, Station Belle, Guy Dean and Petrena Harvester.

Single G will appear in the 2:03 pace against Anna Bradford's Girl, Tarzan Grattan, Sparkle and others. He has been out of training because of lameness.

Junior District Champion Lorenz To Defend Title

District Championship Golf Event, Postponed Last June, Starts Aug. 24.

Herbert Lorenz, junior district golf champion, will defend his title at the fifth annual tournament which opens at Sunset Hill Country Club Aug. 24, according to the announcement made today by Clarence Wolff. The tournament was postponed last June because of lack of entries.

The tournament is open to all local amateurs between the ages 14 and 21 who are sons or near relations of members of St. Louis District golf clubs. Entries from the municipal courses have been provided for. Fifteen golfers recommended by the Forest Park Golf Club will be eligible to compete.

The tournament was held at Bellerive, last year, and was won by Herbert A. Lorenz of Westwood club. The Fred D. Gardner trophy will be the property of the victor until he is defeated or wins it three times.

The championship links will be open for practice to all entrants on Aug. 18, 19 and 20 up to 1 p. m.

The Life Guard's Status Worries Muny Officials

The swimming committee of the Municipal Athletic Association will meet tomorrow to decide whether the association will bar life guards from the Municipal swimming championships Thursday night, as indicated by the Amateur Athletic Union rules, or adhere to the broader policy of municipal athletics, permitting the guards to compete.

It was learned yesterday that private clubs, fearful lest their swimmers come under the ban of the A. A. U. because of competing with "professionals," have declined to enter their teams in the municipal meet. There are, however, 100 entries from Fairgrounds, Marquette and Lorlei. If an amateur knowingly competes against a professional or an ineligible athlete, the amateur is liable to suspension.

The life guard occupies a unique position as far as amateur athletics is concerned. He is not always regarded as a professional although he may be receiving money for his services as a guard. He is not barred from competition in the Missouri Valley Conference or in many other collegiate groups. Thus, there would appear to be some doubt as to his status. He is neither fish nor flesh.

The Municipal Association is not inclined to bar people from competing in public park athletic activities. However, rather than place the amateur standing of hundreds of youngsters in jeopardy, it may be found advisable to conform to the A. A. U. ruling.

Harvard Likely To Drop Tigers, Is Boston Rumor

Change to Be Made to Make Room for Michigan on '27 Grid Schedule.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Aug. 14.—The Boston Traveler today says that either Princeton or Dartmouth is likely to be dropped from the Harvard football schedule in 1927, to make a place for the University of Michigan.

The Traveler further says that a factor that indicates Princeton is likely to be dropped is that Harvard plays only one game away from home each season and that the Tiger demands a home-and-home agreement, while Dartmouth has been content to play Harvard at Cambridge.

"Princeton or Dartmouth—which will be dropped from the Harvard football schedule?" asks the Traveler. "For despite all denials, either the Tiger or the Indian are slated for the discard. The University of Michigan is picked as the successor of the dropped Eastern university. Western alumni of Harvard for some time have been urging a game with a member of the Western conference.

"Dropping Princeton would mean the end of the 'Big Three,' which would make Dartmouth the logical victim. On the other hand Dartmouth is much stronger in the number of local alumni and influence in Cambridge affairs.

"President Lowell of Harvard before sailing for Europe, gave his approval of the game. Both Bill Bingham, director of Harvard athletics, and Prof. Kennedy, Princeton director of athletics, make formal denials. It will be remembered that Harvard authorities denied that Maj. Charles Daley was to be coach of Harvard, and that the late Secretary of War Weeks confirmed the report the next day."

Michigan-Harvard Pact Reported.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Aug. 14.—Rumors that the big three agreement involving Princeton, Yale and Harvard was in danger of abrogation spread today after the unofficial announcement that University of Michigan was to appear on Harvard's football schedule in 1927 and 1928 on the date now assigned to Princeton.

Confirmation of the report which was published in the Boston Traveler today, could not be obtained from Harvard athletic officials, but it was indicated from many sources that the two-year-agreement with Michigan had been reached. William J. Bingham, Harvard athletic director, was absent on a yachting cruise and could not be reached.

Harvard-Michigan Entente Planned

It was known that Bingham discussed football matters recently with President Clarence C. Little of Michigan and that a two-year agreement was proposed, but it was understood that definite decision on the matter had been postponed until the fall. Today's announcement said the 1927 game would be played on November 5, at Ann Arbor, as the formal dedicatory contest for the University of Michigan's new stadium, and that the return game would be played at Cambridge the following year.

The first Saturday in November is the date which Princeton has had on the Harvard football calendar since the big three gridiron competition was inaugurated in 1911. It was this fact which gave rise to the report that football relations betwen the Tiger and the Crimson were about to be severed.

A report that Dartmouth might be dropped from the Harvard schedule to make way for the western university also was circulated. President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth told the Associated Press today that he had heard nothing of such a possibility.

Yost Declines to Comment.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Fielding H. Yost, director of athletics of the University of Michigan, said here tonight that he would not comment on reports from Boston that Harvard will drop Pinceton or Dartmouth to make a place for Michigan in football.

"Any talking to be done must come from them, not us," he said.

He left New York tonight for Ann Arbor.

Princeton Head Silent.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., Aug. 14.—Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, chairman of the Board of Athletic Control at Princeton University, today refused to comment on the report from Boston that Harvard contemplated dropping either Princeton or Dartmouth from their 1927 football schedule. Other members of the Board could not be reached.

National Champion

WILBUR COEN

Wilbur Coen Boys' National Net Champion

Kansas City Youngster Defeats New York Boy in Final.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—Wilbur Coen of Kansas City took the national boys' tennis singles championship across the Mississippi for the first time in history today, defeating Sidney B. Wood Jr. of New York in the final round, 6—2, 6—1.

John Doeg, Santa Monica, Cal., and Julius Seligson, New York, will bring an East-West duel to the junior net world tomorrow when they clash for the junior singles championship as the result of their semifinal victories today. Berkeley Bell, Austin, and James Quick, Dallas, entered the final round of the junior doubles, along with Bob Seller, San Francisco, and Emmet Pare, Chicago.

Coen Fires a Barrage.

Coen's victory over Wood was an impressive display of ground strokes on the part of the victor. The diminutive western lad ran up a lead of 5—0 in each set before Wood could crash through to take a game. Wood's usually brilliant net work was smothered under the barrage of drives from Coen's barquet and the eastern lad never had a chance.

Julius Seligson provided the tournament with another upset in his semifinals singles when he pounded his way through Bob Seller, the Pacific Coast junior title holder, 6—4, 7—5.

Seller, who was seeded third in the draw, could not gain his favorite net position, being kept constantly on the defensive by Seligson's steady driving to the base line. Seligson covered the court in splendid shape, despite his size, and his strategic playing kept Seller looking in vain for an opening.

Doeg Defeats Pare.

John Doeg, the powerful southpaw from the Coast, trimmed Emmet Pare of Chicago, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4. Pare forced the play to Doeg's weak back-hand in the first set, and profiting from Doeg's numerous errors, ran out the set, 7-5. The

SLOW TRACK AT LINCOLN FIELDS BRINGS UPSETS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LINCOLN FIELDSS RACE TRACK, Ill., Aug. 14.—The Crete Handicap, $5000 added, the second stake fixture decided at Lincoln Fields during the week, resulted in a spectacular finish this afternoon, and in victory for Hal Price Headley's Supremus over Malcolm B. Jr. As a matter of fact, it was the first effort for Malcolm B. Jr. since his memorable achievement of downing Carlaris in the Raceland Derby.

Both colts were receptive during the stretch to the keen urging of their riders, and Supremus only succeeded in the last 20 yards in forging slightly in advance to win by a neck.

Reputation had shown the most early speed, but he gave way when straightened in the stretch and had to be urged hard near the end to outstay Thistlewood. The latter had raced closely with Reputation in the first half mile, but it was different company than that he succeeded in triumphing over in two former starts at the track.

The net value of the Crete Stake was $4980. Only six started in it. Helen's Babe being coupled with Supremus as the Hal P. Headley entry.

Heavy track conditions were responsible for a reduction of the field and also the absence of Captain Hal from the race. The other numbers were also reduced heavily by withdrawals.

Arabian Beats Paula Shay.

In spite of the severe track conditions, the racing was spectacular and several of the finishes hard-fought and close.

Arabian's unexpected victory in the sixth race was the outstanding upset of the afternoon. He just beat out Paula Shay. The latter finished lame and with better racing luck, would have been the victor. The winner paid $46 for $2.

Fabian again performed in erratic fashion and upset calculations by winning in the seven-furlongs race, in which Devon and Bolton were the choices, but proved dismal failures.

Favorites and second choices were successful in most of the races and the big crowd combined profit in most instances with their outing.

Hawthorne Officials.

Officials who will serve at the 18-day meeting at Hawthorne, which will begin Sept. 13, were made known this afternoon. They comprise General Manager Joseph A. Murphy, who will serve also as presiding steward, with Sam C. Nuckols as his associate. The judges will be Herman Conkling, John Carey and Joseph McLennon. The latter will also serve as racing secretary and is now compiling the first week's program. Harry Morrissey has been named as starter and Francis Dunne, clerk of the scales. A. H. Blanchard will be paddock judge and W. Doyle and W. Martin, patrol judges.

The management has decided that no purse will have a value of less than $1200. There will also be a daily handicap of $1500 and each Saturday there will be a feature race of $2500.

BETHLEHEM TO TRY FOUR NEW PLAYERS; NAMES ARE WITHHELD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Aug. 14.—Although the soccer season is still more than a month away, local interest in this major league sport is being boomed and indications are that the coming season will be put across bigger than ever before.

With the object of booming soccer throughout the entire Lehigh Valley, direct activities to school and college soccer and to increase the attendance at local games, several hundred fans organized a Booster Club.

The Bethlehem mangement continues to maintain an attitude of secrecy in so far as players are concerned. At club headquarters it is said that at least four new players will sport a Bethlehem uniform but who they are or where they come from will not be divulged until they are on the ground and ready for practice. The new talent, it is also said, will include two goalies, a full-back and two forwards. The management is quite satisfied with its half back line comprising Carnihan, MacGregor and McDonald.

Orders were given to start practice Monday, Aug. 23. By that time all the players will have reported. Several exhibition games are scheduled for the team before it starts its league activities.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Aug. 14.—Canadian and United States entries tuned up on the Ottawa River course today in preparation for the Rudder International trophy races for 151 class hydroplanes Monday and Tuesday.

"Miss Brown," owned by L. R. Brown of Ottawa, winner of last year's contest in New York, will probably defend her title. The field includes "Little Star," owned by the Waugh brothers of Peoria, Ill., which lowered the world's record for her class at the Mississippi Valley powerboat regatta last month.

Arabian, going in his best form and given a hustling ride, raced closely up from start and just landed under hard urging. Paula Shay, much the best, was taken far out of it in first quarter and came like a streak when ridden hard and was wearing down leader at the end, finished badly lamed. George Demar tired in last sixteenth. King Gorin II was done after half a mile. Cherokee Lee quit badly.

COMMERCIAL LEAGUE PENNANT BATTLE ENDS IN DEADLOCK

HANDICAP

TOWER CAMP AND CENTURY TO PLAY IT OFF

Contest Scheduled for Saturday; National City Pulls a Triple Play in Last Inning to Beat Alhambra.

As had been predicted the race in the Commercial League pennant ended in a tie between Tower Camp and Century when both won their games yesterday. Each defeated a lesser team and they will meet in a playoff game next Sunday.

The eliminations for the city championship start Saturday, but in these teams will draw byes to the first day of competition.

It remained for the cellar teams of the Commercial to furnish yesterday's fireworks. The Bostons and the Browns of this circuit played to and ground out a triple play with three on base in the first inning and a close contest in which the opposing pitchers allowed four and five hits respectively.

National City apparently had the game with Alhambra cinched when the latter came to bat in the closing frame and filled the bases with none out. The score was 8 to 1. Mahl, Alhambra slugger who had made three out of three up to bat, one of which was a homer, with the bases full, stepped up to the plate.

Mahl shot a hot liner toward third, which looked good for three bases, but Davis speared it, stepped on third and relayed to Snow on second for a triple play.

Walter Rau hurled the Pilgrim A. A. to a 2-1 victory over the Heitmann's. Cameron, Central High pitcher, also pitched nicely for the losers, but let in the winning run in the ninth on a wild pitch.

Win Evangelical Title.

St. Stephens won the Evangelical senior title when St. John defeated St. James, 5 to 4, in a thrilling game. Because of their win with St. Stephens for first place St. James was in a position to win the championship by winning yesterday, but Pitcher Mike Diester of the St. John team smothered all their ambitions, fanning 12 of the St. James batters.

In the Sunday School League finals with Cote Brilliante defeating St. Paul 16 to 13, and Third Baptist conquered Sidney Street Presbyterian 13-2. Burlew of St. Paul got five hits in five trips to the plate including two home runs, a three-bagger and a two-bagger. Longhoefter for Third Baptist struck out 10 batters.

Next week Wagner Place will meet Cote Brilliante in the senior division and Third Baptist will play the Epworth Juniors in the junior division. These games will be in the second lap of the semifinals. The final games will be played two weeks from yesterday.

ROAD WORK AND A SHOPPING TOUR KEEP JACK DEMPSEY BUSY

By the Associated Press.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 14.—A few miles of road work in the morning and a shopping trip with his wife in the afternoon consumed the major portion of Jack Dempsey's day. Starting out early in the day, the heavyweight champion covered over five or six miles of road and returned to his camp at the Saltpus Springs. A bath, a rub and a shave filled out the remaining time for lunch.

The meal over, Mrs. Dempsey led him forth for a shopping tour of the stores, an expedition which covered the major portion of the afternoon and which may have been responsible for his absence at the race track today.

With his entire staff at hand, Dempsey planned to start intensive training tomorrow afternoon, when, o'clock, he goes into the ring in his first sparring match. His last two days at the training camp will be spent in resting up and becoming acclimated.

Century's Eight To Get Test in Chicago Regatta

Crack Eight-Oared Shell Crew Faces Lincoln Park at Chicago, Aug. 22.

Century Boat Club's next chance to make a real bid for rowing honors this year will come next Sunday when it's eight-oared shell crew will take part in the Chicago Tribune regatta. In this event the Century boys will be opposed by two Lincoln Boat Club crews and the Culver Military Academy crew.

The Century crew gave the Lincoln Park boats such a great tussle in the Central States regatta here, a short time ago, that the Lincoln Park men went back home sounding the praise of the local crew.

The result was the arrangement of the four-cornered race as the Tribune regatta feature. The event will take place in the long lagoon at Lincoln Park.

Allen Coach for 10 Years.

The Century crew is coached by Harry Allen. Coach Allen has been with the Century Boat Club for the past 10 years and during that time has developed several prominent crews, the most important being the national championship four-oared crew of 1919, composed of Belzer, Heyne, Oestereicher and Abeken.

During the year 1920 Coach Allen was the head coach of the Norton Boat Club of Worcester, Mass., and at that time several of his crews were winners at the Middle States Regatta in New York.

This year's crew is made up of a fine bunch of young athletes.

Capt. Buder, rowing No. 3, and Hanley No. 6, are the veterans of the crew, both having won their seniorship in 1923, at the Central States Regatta at Decatur, Ill. They also rowed in the Century four-oared crew which placed third in that event at the National Regatta in 1924, at Springfield, Mass.

Daust, stroke; Karches, No. 7, and Pardyke, No. 5, gained their spurs in the 1924 regatta at Creve Coeur Lake. Although Mathews, No. 4, Neudecker, bow and Schoestein, No. 2, are the youngest and most inexperienced members of the crew, they have rapidly developed under the intense training of Coach Allen. Cexswain Panzier has been swinging the Century crews for the last three years and has several important victories to his credit.

Won Every Local Race.

The Century eight-oared crew has won all local senior and open eight events this year. In the eight-oared event at the Municipal Regatta, which was held on Aug. 1, this crew took an early lead and held it over the entire course, winning by at least three lengths. On July 25 at the Central States Regatta it placed third, the two Lincoln Park crews taking first and second places.

A half boat length covered these three crews and the remaining six crews were bunched about two lengths behind. The time given the winning crew was 4:54 for the mile, making it one of the fastest eight-oared races ever rowed on Creve Coeur Lake.

Only 27 Years Old, But He Has Spent 8 Years in Majors

Cleveland star who has chance to surpass Vance's 1925 record for complete games pitched.

GEORGE UHLE.

George Uhle, "Iron Man" of Indians, in the Limelight for Valuable Player Award

Has Won 18 and Lost Only 8 Games This Season and Has Been Removed From Box Only Twice — Strong Against Yankees.

By Herman Wecke.

One of the players who will come in for serious consideration as the American League's "most valuable player" for the 1926 campaign will without a doubt be George Uhle, right-handed pitcher of the Cleveland Indians. Uhle on his record in this, his eighth campaign in the big tent, is one of the outstanding stars of the circuit.

The Trophy Committee, in selecting a man to succeed Roger Peckinpaugh, will do well to look towards the Forest City. There's another man with Speaker who will have to be considered. He is George Burns, the veteran first sacker. But this story does not concern Burns. It's about the doings of Uhle.

Uhle is one of those "cheap investment" twirlers. When he was taken on by the Cleveland club in 1919 all he cost was railroad fare to the training camp. He had been snared during the off-season from the Cleveland sandlots, where he had made quite a name for himself.

Only Two Bad Years.

Since joining the tribe, he has had but two losing years. Oddly enough, one of these was 1920, the year the Cleveland aggregation won the pennant and later downed the Brooklyns in the world's series. Uhle had little to do with those triumphs. His season's record was 4-5 and he twirled but three innings in the big series. His other losing year was 1924.

However, this, the 1926 campaign, promises to be his best. At present he owns a record of 18 victories against but eight defeats, a winning percentage of .692. That's far ahead of the figure owned by the Indians for the year.

The Cleveland right-hander promises to set several records for the year. He will without a doubt go down as the "iron man" of 1926. In addition, he will likely have the honor of working in the greatest number of complete contests. At present, not a flinger in either circuit is close to him.

Near Vance's Record.

To date, Uhle has pitched in 22 complete games. That's as many as any American League hurler labored in a year ago and only four behind Vance's record for the National in 1925. With more than six weeks remaining, Uhle should easily top the Vance record. He has slaved in 216 innings, and thus is far ahead of all competitors in this line.

When Uhle goes to the hill, Speaker generally knows he has a man who will stick to the finish. At least that has been the case this season. Uhle has started 24 times and on but two occasions has the Indian manager been forced to send out the S. O. S. Which is quite a record. It's as good as that made by Dazzy Vance, when the Robin star was named as the National League's most valuable player two years ago.

The right-hander in the 216 rounds he has labored has permitted a total of 86 runs, an average of 3.60 each nine innings. The hits off him total 207. He has struck out 109 batters and walked 81. His greatest strikeout feat came against the Browns, May 25, when he whiffed 10 men in 11 innings.

He Prefers Yankees.

Speaker's ace has had his greatest success of the year against the league leading Yankees. He has faced New York four times and beaten them on as many occasions. In those four clashes, the sluggers chaperoned by Miller Huggins have been able to score but seven runs and make 25 hits in 36 innings. Indicating that Uhle has something on the Yankees.

Uhle has 4-1 records against the Tigers and Athletics. He has downed the Browns three out of four; Boston two straight. Washington one out of three, while the White Sox have tamed him three in a row.

For his entire big league career, Uhle has won a total of 118 victories against 89 defeats, a winning percentage of .570. He has worked in 1718 innings.

Though this is his eighth season in the majors, Uhle is still a young man, as he will not be 28 years of age until next month.

That's the record of the player who will have to be given consideration when the A. L. committee votes to decide the 1926 most valuable player. From his record, it seems that Uhle is entitled to the prize a great deal more than was Roger Peckinpaugh in 1926.

McGRAW WILL PUT IN A CLAIM FOR CAREY

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 14.—Manager John J. McGraw of the New York Giants said today that he would put in a claim for Max Carey, deposed captain of the Pittsburg Pirates now under waiver.

He regards the Giants' chances of acquiring Carey are slim, however, as clubs lower in the standing have first call, but Manager Art Fletcher of the Phillies said he would not claim the player.

The Giants have sought an experienced center fielder for years, more than a score of players having been tried in that position since the days of Benny Kauff, and Carey is regarded as a man who would meet expectations although his days in the major leagues are numbered.

McGray intimated that he would make no attempt to obtain the services of Carson Bigbee, outfielder, released unconditionally by Pittsburg as the result of the attempt to drive Fred Clarke from the bench.

Hornsby Is Now 12th Among N. L. Batting Leaders

Cardinal Manager Has .331 Average—Burns Is Close to Record.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—Slowly but surely the old master of the National League sluggers, Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals, is climbing to the top of the list. For the past six years Hornsby has finished in first place among National League batters, but injuries this year have kept down his batting average. Back in the game now in full vigor, he has reached twelfth place, with .331.

The Cincinnati catcher, Bubbles Hargreave, who has been leading the Nationals in hitting for some time, stepped farther in front this week, in the unofficial figures released today, including games of last Wednesday. In eight games he gathered 12 hits, and three of them went over the fence.

Cuyler, long the leading base stealer of the Nationals, went back to his specialty this week, gathering two more, but he dropped out of the leading 10 hitters. He now has 24 stolen bases, four ahead of Frankie Frisch of the Giants. He scored three runs this week to total 80, the highest in the league, but Blades of St. Louis is only one behind.

Mays Has Good Week.

Hack Wilson of the Chicago Cubs and Jim Bottomley of St. Louis rested from their home run race this week, their totals remaining stationary at 15 apiece.

Carl Mays of the Reds had the best luck of the National League pitchers with long winning streaks this week, getting two victories to tie with Pete Donohue of the Reds and Lee Meadows of Pittsburg at 15 victories. Meadows, though, has lost but four games.

Leading National League hitters: Hargrave, Cincinnati, .391; Stephenson, Chicago, .369; Bressler, Cincinnati, .352; Herman, Brooklyn, .349; Traynor, Pittsburg, .348; E. Smith, Pittsburg, .348; Grantham, Pittsburg, .339; L. Bell, St. Louis, .338; Christensen, Cincinnati, .333; Jackson, New York, .332.

Burns Close to Record.

While Babe Ruth is slugging along toward his 1921 home run record, six behind his mark of that year on Aug. 11, George Burns of Cleveland is headed toward a new major league mark in two baggers. Three years ago George's boss, Tris Speaker, set a mark of 59 two-baggers for a season, the same as Ruth's 1921 record in homers. Burns now has 53, four this week. Ruth's home run total Aug. 11 was 37.

The league this week lost its only .400 hitter, Fothergill of Detroit, who dropped five points, but still leads the league. Ruth and his teammate Gehrig, both crossed the hundred run mark this week, Ruth with 107 and Gehrig with 104. Ruth's four home runs this week pushed his total bases to an average of two bases for each hit. Ken Williams of St. Louis and Simmons of Philadelphia are tied for second place home run honors at 16.

E. Rice of Washington, and Johnny Mostil of Chicago, first and second in the base stealing contest, each got one this week. Rice has 18 and Mostil 16. Rice displaced Mostil this week among the first 10 hitters of the circuit.

Uhle the Work Horse.

George Uhle of Cleveland, the work horse of the American League pitchers, now leads with 18 victories, his rival, Pennock, having bad luck this week. Uhle and Braxton of New York, who leads the pitchers' percentages, each have played in 27 games, but Uhle has pitched five times as many innings as the Yankee relief tosser, who is credited with six victories and one loss.

The Yankees regained their .300 hitting percentage as a team this week, Ruth alone gaining seven points in his batting figures. Manush of Detroit was the week's star at bat, going from sixth place to second, displacing George Burns of Cleveland.

CHAMPION DEMPSEY IS MARK FOR A RIGHT HAND PUNCH, SAYS TUNNE

CHALLENGER IS CONFIDENT HE WILL WIN BOUT

"I'm Going to Knock Him Out in Very Same Round I Land First Solid Right Smash," Writes Gene.

By Gene Tunney.
(Copyright, 1926.)

SPECULATOR, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Of course, I think I'll knock out Jack Dempsey. If I didn't, I never would have accepted the match. I could have had a fight with Dempsey before now, but I always clung to the insistence:

TUNNEY.

Not until the last few months have I come to consider myself able to defeat Dempsey. Before, I was lacking in experience; lacking in height, and lacking in poundage. I never felt that I could "spot" the champion a lot of bulk, let him have a big edge on me in seasoning and ring development and still whip him. He's too tough for that.

If I felt I weren't ready for Dempsey now, I'd just back away from the fight. I realize that any man who goes against a champion and is beaten, rarely gets a second shot.

Has Gained Experience.

But I AM READY. I've gained the experience I've needed in battling men like Gibbons, Madden, Carpentier and a dozen others. Nature has given me added height and increased poundage, without taking away any of my speed. Constant training and striving has equipped me with vital fighting knowledge. And so, I am positive that I am at the peak of my career.

Certainly I think I'll knock Dempsey flat. Why not? He's easy to hit; he's a mark for a right-hand punch. When he meets me he'll take a lot of them. I know he's a good shock absorber, but Dempsey himself insists that "no man lives who can take one solidly on the button and still stand up." If Dempsey is right—and no one is inclined to dispute him—then Dempsey is going down, for I AM going to hit him on the button.

This battle will NOT be tame. Dempsey is a rushing, tearing type of fighter—exactly my delight. I've specialized in countering, in letting the other fellow lead and beating him to it. I want a man who will lead. The history of my career shows that I've whipped every man who has.

I want Dempsey to come to me—and he can come with all the wild swinging punches he cares to throw. For five years I've been learning how to get out of the way of such punches. If Dempsey isn't hitting me, he can't hurt me, can he? I don't care if he has the power to knock down a 20-story building. It's of no value to him if he can't land.

Champion Lacks Defense.

Dempsey hasn't any real defense—and never had. He's never boasted of one. They have all hit Dempsey. I'll hit him, too.

Three men had Dempsey within one punch of defeat—Carpentier, Bill Brennan and Firpo.

No man is a "peerless—superb fighter" who is in a bad way in almost all his fights. And no man—not even Dempsey—can be lucky all the time. The law of averages—if nothing else—is due to get him. And I think I'm this law of average.

I don't think Dempsey can hit me solidly. If he can't do that, he can't hurt me. If I'm not hurt, I can fight at top speed. I can drive home that right hand of mine—and I'm going to do it. When it connects, Dempsey isn't going to feel so full of confidence. The very second I drive one through and shake him up, I'm going to let loose with everything I have—never give him a chance to recover—and I'm going to knock him out in the very same round in which I land the first solid right hand smash.

(Tunney's next story of his preparation for his title fight with Jack Dempsey will appear in next Tuesday's issue of the Post-Dispatch.)

JIMMY COONEY PLAYS AT DAD'S OLD POSITION

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14. — The Cubs' shortstop, Jim Cooney, is playing the same position in which his father made a big reputation as a member of the late Capt. Anson's Chicago White Stockings in 1890.

Nearly all of Anson's stars deserted him for the Chicago Brotherhood team, managed by Charley Comiskey. As a result of this walkout, Anson had to build up a new team. His scouts in New England induced him to sign Jimmy Cooney to cover shortstop. Cooney was short and thick set. In a week or two he was fielding magnificently and batting heavily. Anson prized the little fellow highly and placed him at the top of the Chicago batting order.

Critic More Valuable Than Teacher In Learning Tennis, Says Helen Wills

Suzanne Lenglen's Father, Although Second-Class Player, Understands Fine Points and Is Marvelous Coach.

By Helen Wills.
(Copyright, All Rights Reserved. Reproduction Prohibited.)

Helen's Forehand Drive

TO a young player who wants to learn the game, the start is certainly an exciting time. Everyone goes through nearly the same stages, I imagine. First comes the thrill in getting the ball over the net; then serves begin to get into their squares; then rallies of slow popping balls punctuate the wavering game.

I'm sure I'll never forget my first drive. It happened on one of the outer courts of the Berkeley Tennis Club in California. To one who hasn't struggled through the very "beginning" stages, this will seem an unimportant occurrence. To me, it was a thrilling thing. It came from no conscious effort to make a drive, because at that time I was not particularly interested in the various kinds of strokes, but just in the fun of hitting the ball over the net. I felt that I had discovered a new and easy way of making the ball go much faster, and with little effort. After that, I tried to make the same shot again and again.

Some Indifferent Teachers.

And this leads us to the question of the value of professional teachers in tennis. There are many, some very good, some indifferent. Almost every club has one or two. If a young player has the good fortune to be able to have a lesson, or several lessons a week with a teacher who understands the game and knows the strokes, it should help him a great deal in getting off to a good start.

One sometimes sees a teacher who does not play a particularly good game, but who does know how to carry over the idea of the best strokes of his pupil. Mlle. Lenglen's father, although he was not a professional, was highly successful in perfecting his daughter's play. He never was, I believe, even a better class player himself. He is, however, a marvelous critic, and understands all of the finer points in tennis. His coaching, along with his daughter's natural ability, brought out a game which is as close to perfect, as any human, I venture to say, can hope to develop.

Many sport-loving fathers are eager to have their daughters play a good game of tennis, and the interest of someone older means a great deal to a beginner. A little encouragement goes a long way. Where professional tennis teachers are scarce, suggestions from someone are very valuable, especially if the advice comes from a person who has seen the best players in action.

Poor Stroke Costly.

Without any sort of instruction, the beginner is left to discover a great many things for himself, and often with difficulty. The danger lies in the fact that a young player may get off on some wrong track, waste time on a poor stroke, and ever afterward be burdened by it. Bad habits are sometimes very hard to break. When I first played tennis there were no professional teachers in Berkeley. But my father, when he found I loved the game, used to help me with my strokes now and then, and steered me away from any that seemed to him to be unorthodox.

Another way in which the beginner can improve his game is by watching good players in action. Seeing even one match in which very clever players are taking part will help. And the more matches one watches, the more one's mind becomes impressed with the picture of graceful stroking, correct timing, and the easy swing of well-played tennis.

ALEC MERMOD

IT will not be long till the shooting season opens, and the hunters have begun to talk about the conditions of the water and food in their favorite duck resorts.

The dry weather has lowered the water in all the nearby lakes and ponds, and unless we have rain and lots of it, the shooting will be poor, except at the clubs which are equipped with power and pumps.

However, it is said "You cannot beat the law of averages," so the chances are that we will have plenty of rain before the duck flight is really on.

Season Opens Sept. 16.

While the season opens Sept. 16, no one really expects to get any shooting that early.

The clubs equipped with pumps should keep their ponds pretty well filled by pumping a short time each day, for when a pond is allowed to dry up it takes a great deal of water to fill it. In many cases the ground dries up and great cracks form which soak up an enormous amount of water.

Some few clubs have planted natural duck food in and around the ponds which, in my opinion, is superior to baiting with corn.

Grain-baited ponds certainly attract water fowl, but the shooting does not compare with that obtained where conditions are entirely natural, furthermore, after ducks have been feeding on corn for several weeks they lose that gamey flavor so much desired.

But Flavor Is Different.

Some hunters claim that ducks taste alike, no matter what they eat, but they are only fooling themselves.

For instance, the canvas back killed on the Maryland shores has always been considered the finest flavored of all the duck family, but this same duck killed inland tastes no different than other species.

On the "Eastern shore" the food of the canvas back consists of wild celery which gives them that flavor so desired by the epicure.

The best flavored birds we have in this part of the country are those that feed on acorns.

Where possible clubs should reserve a certain pond for a resting place, and this refuge should never be disturbed.

Shooting Is for Few.

Duck shooting anywhere near St. Louis is confined to members of expensive clubs, with the exception of a little uncertain shooting on river bars, so that the outsider does not have much of a chance nowadays, and unless we stop draining the various lakes for the benefit of land promotors trying to make farms of worthless land, none of us will have any shooting 25 years hence.

If the truth were known, I venture to say that all kinds of water fowl have decreased 50 per cent in the past 30 years, due to several reasons:

First: Nests in the North have been robbed of their eggs by the thousands.

Second: Feeding grounds and rest lakes have been destroyed by draining.

Third: The population has increased, besides disease accounts for thousands.

Our Prodigal Policy.

It seems too bad that we of America have been so prodigal with our natural resources.

Our forests, fish and game have been sacrificed to the greed and desires of those who should know better.

The sportsmen of Illinois enjoy a short open season on doves, while we of Missouri must pay $10.50 for an Illinois license or do without.

It was bad enough when our Federal Government saw fit to class the dove as a migratory bird along with the water fowl, but when Missouri placed a perpetual ban on shooting this fast flying, toothsome bird it was the last straw, and we are deprived of some mighty good sport, for when a dove comes driving across the field at a clip which is not exceeded by the fastest flying duck there is quite a thrill in knocking him down.

No Economic Value.

The dove is purely a grain eater and is of no economic value to the farmer.

Some go so far as to claim the dove eats so much grain that he is a pest to the farmer, but this idea is absurd for the grain eaten by doves does not amount to much and he very seldom disturbs growing wheat.

The season here should open Aug. 15 instead of Sept. 1, for at the early date mentioned the young bird is fully developed. While the season in the Northern zone lasts till Sept. 30, we get very little shooting after the first week for the birds begin to bunch about Sept. 10, preparatory to their flight South.

Ban Should Be Lifted.

A great many stop in the southern part of our State but the majority go on further south, where shooting is allowed till Dec. 15 and the doves are killed by the thousands in baited fields.

We should make some concerted effort to lift the ban on doves in Missouri for it's hardly fair that we should protect this bird for the benefit of the shooters in the South.

Fishing has not improved greatly, though some good catches have been made on Black River, and crappie have offered good sport at Iron Mountain Lake, though the stage of water is lower than it has been for years.

Last week-end Lake Kilarney was crowded with visitors and fishing was poor.

Title Holders to Compete in Negro Tennis Tourney

Events Will Be Played at Sherman Park, Starting Tomorrow Afternoon.

The tenth annual national championship tournament of the American Tennis Association, a Negro organization, will start here tomorrow and close Saturday. The matches will be played on the Sherman Park courts. The visiting players will be the guests of the St. Louis Tennis Association, of which Dr. W. H. Barrett is president.

The largest entry in the history of the association i expected. There were 116 contestants last year. There will be matches in men's singles, men's doubles, women's singles, women's doubles and juniors.

Richard Hudlin, a member of the 1925 Chicago University varsity tennis team, won from Edgar Brown, who held the national championship in 1922 and 1923, in the recent Windy City championship, making him a factor in the men's singles.

Ted Thompson, present champion, a member of the Wilberforce University team, will defend his title. Another entrant is Eyre G. Saitch, runner-up in the final last year. Saitch, although a resident of New York, is a west Indian by birth.

Miss Lulu Ballard, a Philadelphia high school girl, is entered in the tourney. Miss Ballard upset all dope when she beat Miss I. Channels of Chicago in the women's singles.

Tally Holmes and Ted Thompson, both of Washington, hold the men's doubles championship.

The annual meeting of the American Tennis Association will be held tomorrow at the Pine Street Y. M. C. A., with Dr. Harry McCard, president, presiding. The American Tennis Association was organized in 1916. The organization is composed of 18,000 members and 120 clubs.

Falling Off in Play of Veteran Athletes Making Ruth's All-Star Team Contest Hard Proposition

Detroit Players Pick Teams and Fail to Agree, Many Youngsters Are Knocking at the Door.

"I've been going over the records during the last two weeks and the further I dig into the thing, the tougher the job looks," says Babe Ruth, speaking of his task of picking an All-America baseball team with the assistance of sport writers from all over the country.

"A lot of the old standbys, who have been sure bets in other years, are slipping. They've got competition. Some of the kids who were rookies a year ago are making real bids for places," says the home run king.

As an experiment, Ruth walked into the Detroit Tiger dressing room after a game the other day and suggested the players try their hand at the All-America idea. They fell to it with a will and when they had finished, no two selections were alike and no one player was named unanimously for any position.

Readers who enter the contest must pick a team of ten players, two pitchers and eight men in the other places, with a view to having it coincide with the one which Ruth will pick and announce after the close of the contest on Aug. 31. The rules are tabulated in skeleton form and a close perusal of them is necessary.

Vernon Smith, Balknap, Ill., has mailed in the following selection:

Burns, Cleveland, first base.
Hornsby, Cardinals, second base.
Hunnefield, White Sox, shortstop.
Kamm, White Sox, third base.
Meusel, Yankees, center field.
Waner, Pirates, right field.
O'Farrell, Cardinals, catcher.
Grove, Athletics, pitcher.
Rhem, Cardinals, pitcher.

Gehrig, Yankees, first base.
Lazzeri, Yankees, second base.
Thevenow, Cardinals, shortstop.
Bell, Cardinals, third base.
Wilson, Cubs, center field.
Southworth, Cardinals, right field.
Hargrave, Reds, catcher.
Pate, Athletics, pitcher.
Haines, Cardinals, pitcher.

Burns, Indians, first base.
Lazzeri, Yankees, second base.
Thevenow, Cardinals, shortstop.
Bell, Cardinals, third base.
Wilson, Cubs, center field.
Heilmann, Tigers, right field.
O'Farrell, Cardinals, catcher.
Grove, Athletics, pitcher.

Thoroughbreds By Lucky Hour To Go on Block

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 14.—The first three thoroughbreds by Lucy Hour, greatest of the sons of Hourless that will sport racing colors in a consignment of 40 odd yearlings from Edward F. AMERICANS WILL PAY OUT $6,500,000,000 THIS YEAR BUYING "ON EASY TERMS"

Of This Sum Half a Billion Is Price of Special Credit—Business Men Discuss Wisdom of Installment-Purchasing Plan, but It Flourishes Amazingly.

By LAURENCE STERN,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.

IN ACQUIRING automobiles, washing machines, furniture and various other articles they deem essential to human happiness, the American people this year will spend approximately $6,500,000,000 on the installment plan.

Of this huge sum, reminiscent of a discussion of European war debts, at least $500,000,000, according to the most reliable estimates, will represent not any tangible value of goods bought but the price paid for the privilege of easy terms. Some believe the cost much higher.

These two paragraphs present a problem which in recent months has aroused more comment and debate among manufacturers, retailers and bankers than has prohibition among the ranks of the country's politicians. Affecting the entire pattern and fabric of our national business—perhaps changing fundamental credit methods— it gives rise to a dozen anxious questions.

Does installment buying create an artificial demand which is inherently dangerous?

Will it hasten industrial and trade depression?

Will it intensify the evil results of such depression?

Does a vast economic waste result from excessive costs of goods bought "on time?"

Are "easy payments" misleading hosts of buyers into ruinous extravagance?

These are some of the doubts most frequently expressed, and it is easy to take the pessimistic view. But the fact is that the overwhelming rush of words poured forth on the subject has rested largely upon inconclusive data, upon opinions colored by self-interest, unconscious or otherwise; and, in some cases, upon instinctive aversion to new methods in business. No accurate and comprehensive statistics ever have been compiled. This is the chief difficulty faced in any necessarily brief survey.

"On Time" Nothing New.

Installment buying, far from being new, is literally thousands of years old; and this refers to trade goods and is exclusive of land, houses and insurance, all of which have always been sold chiefly on the installment plan. Disregarding vague ancient history, pianos and furniture have been sold "on time" in this country for at least a century. For 70 years partial payments have constituted a standard method of marketing sewing machines.

It is obvious, then, that what concerns the critics of installment buying is not the system itself, but its enormous growth in the last decade, and particularly during the last five or six years.

This expansion in volume has not been due to installment purchase of goods formerly bought for cash so much as to part payment buying of things which previously were not bought at all. Thus, automobiles, radio sets, washing machines and vacuum cleaners undoubtedly account for considerably more than half of all installment business, exclusive of homes and insurance.

Herein lies another source of criticism. It is argued by some that installment buying should be confined to necessaries; that it is unsound when extended to luxuries. This seems a faulty division. Where it is economically unsound for the individual to buy luxuries on any form of credit it may be equally unsound for the same individual to buy the same unessential goods for cash. Furthermore, having in mind the broadest economic and social considerations, who can draw a sharp line between luxuries and necessities as standards of living constantly advance?

Credit the Life of Trade.

Little better progress is made by trying to draw a line between production goods and consumption goods. Those who do so argue it is economically unsound to "mortgage future income" for non-productive articles. Others contend it is bad to mortgage future earnings against quickly consumed goods, whether productive or not. Under this reasoning, installment buying of food, for example, would be unsound.

In this connection it is interesting to remember that the country's future income has always been to a large extent mortgaged against past purchases. Installment buying is only one method of deferred payment; and deferred payment has always been the heart of business. To give one of a thousand examples applying to the consumer, the cotton farmer has always bought his food and other necessaries on credit, liquidating the debt out of subsequent crop — long after the food has been eaten. He mortgages future income for current purchases. So do most persons who buy on open account.

Installment buying, of course, differs from this situation in important respects. Undoubtedly, installment credit is extended to thousands of individuals who would not be acceptable as good risks for open accounts; and for this reason, as well as for others, the country's total installment debt is superimposed upon the normally huge volume of other debt outstanding. If there is danger in this system, it lies chiefly in these two facts.

It is not to be disputed that over-extension of credit in any form is economically dangerous, but the interesting thought arises that the seller of installment goods may be better safeguarded against loss than the man who sells on open account.

Bigger Than Fire Losses.

E. B. Moran, manager of the interchange bureaus of the National Association of Credit Men, reports that American business losses through improper and inefficient methods of collecting accounts are considerably larger each year than the country's annual fire loss.

In the light of this sober statement, a furniture retailer, for example, would be inclined to smile when warned of the dangers of installment selling. Many of his open accounts, even if eventually good, run several months. In an installment sale, however, he obtains a cash payment which is an important protection against loss, since it gives the buyer a strong inducement to complete contracted payments. Futhermore, if the retailer's method of operation is sound, the total paid by the buyer is at all times sufficient to make up the difference between first and second-hand values if through default of payment the goods are taken back.

Some observers believe this inherent advantage may tend to change our entire system of merchandise credit. The best survey of installment buying yet made is that of Milan V. Ayres, prepared for the American Bankers' Association, but not adopted by the Executive Council of the association—which is only one indication of the differences of opinion which exist on the subject. Ayres points out that there is already developing an important tendency

Post-Dispatch Reporter Makes Aerial Trip to Observe Working of Postoffice Service Now Four Months Old—High Percentage of Meeting Schedule—Stories of Air Pilots—Chicago's Aviation Field, a Regular Union Station Where Mail Planes Start and Finish Their Journeys.

By William F. Allen

FROM the days of the pony express, the gospel of the postal service, seared into the spirit of the humblest employe, has been: "The mail must arrive." Today air men blazon it upon starlit skies: "The mail must arrive." The mail does arrive.

On the four corners of the Federal Building are new large billboard signs advertising the air mail of the Postoffice Department. On the sign is this sentence:

"Letters mailed in St. Louis at 2:50 p. m. in Air Mail boxes downtown or at the main postoffice not later than 3:30 p. m. will arrive in the following cities as follows:

Thereto is appended, in railroad time table form, a list of the larger cities of the country from coast to coast and as far north as the Twin Cities. Note, please, the calm assurance: "Will arrive." "New York 6:15 a. m. next day." Overnight to New York! "San Francisco, 4:30 p. m. next day." Over the Rockies and down to the Pacific in 24 hours!

There is more than incredulity on some of the faces—most of the faces—that stop and study the table. Very patent doubt. "Yes, tomorrow morning in New York—maybe, if and but." The public, if the lean mailing in St. Louis can be taken as indication, does not yet accept its air mail as it does its railroad train. Though banks have learned to clear their Eastern checks almost exclusively by air, the general public uses the air mail as a novelty to send a souvenir greeting. If it arrives, well and good. If not—oh, well, no importance anyway. Business, which clamors for quick delivery of its customers' freight to Texas, clings to the slow railway mail and quite generally neglects the advantages that the air mail is eager to confer.

Where the Race Against Time Starts

One day last week, this reporter followed the mail on the first leg of its journey to New York over night and San Francisco in 24 hours. He cheerfully attests the accuracy of the billboard and its grim assurance: "Will arrive." He understands now some of the things that stand behind last year's record of the air mail—16,000,000 letters delivered; only 4000 lost.

The clock at the main postoffice, Eighteenth street and Clark avenue, passes 3. It is a still hour. The huge work floor is totally deserted. Except over in one corner a knot of six or eight men idle about a little alcove labelled: "Air mail." The pigeon holes of the sorting boxes in front of them have a smattering of letters. Here is the New York consignment sorted by districts. This speed of the air mail is carried down to the last detail. When the mail reaches New York it must be ready for instant delivery. San Francisco has a pigeon hole and some of the intermediate cities. Other letters are bunched by states.

The hands moved toward 3:30. The little group of men watches expectantly. St. Louis business must have its last minute in which to wind up for the air mail. A solitary man stands inside the window waiting for the last letter. As the hands reach 3:30, his hand goes up in a signal. The knot of men before the sorting boxes leap to feverish action. Out of the boxes, into pouches. A quick snapping of locks. Each man seizes a sack and darts across the floor on the run. Down a stairway, out onto the loading platform. A truck awaits, its engine running.

A tossing of sacks, a grinding of gears. A voice shouts: "3:32." The men cheer. The truck races out onto Eighteenth street. Forty-three minutes to reach the flying Field at Bridgeton—16 miles away, through crowded traffic. The driver picks a circuitous route. His ear-splitting siren screeches almost continuously. Drivers ahead, glower: "What the"—and then catch the truck's label and wave it on cheerfully. The only truck the postoffice department owns that is without a governor to limit its speed is the air mail truck. Past Grand, out Page, the truck screeches its way. A brief stop at an air mail box in Wellston, then the open road and an open throttle.

The hangars at Bridgeton field pop onto the horizon. "Time?" the driver inquires briefly and nods in satisfaction. Time to spare. Out onto the field toward a large red and gray plane spreading its wings lifelessly. The truck, a beetle in comparison, draws alongside. Hands seize the mail, pitch it onto a scale and then into the tin-lined cockpit of the big De Haviland—78 1-2 pounds today, scarcely enough to pay the expense of flying it to Chicago.

Pilot Gets Latest Weather Forecast

"Where's Nellie?" Major Robertson, who contracts to carry the mail to Chicago, inquires. The answer is a look into the sky where a ship is coming from aloft in graceful spirals. Thomas P. Nelson, the day's pilot, is taking a little pleasure spin and counting 50 spirals to bring him down from 14,000 feet. He taxies up, crawls out leisurely and strolls toward the big De Haviland.

"Ready?" he inquires. A ground man hands him his parachute. "Weather forecast?" he asks as he buckles the leg strap. "Thunderstorms" is the answer and he nods. Into the driver's seat. The propellor spins and he glances toward the reporter impatiently.

The hands are searching frantically for a parachute to strap onto the passenger. None is found. "Go without?" Nelson inquires. "What do you say," the reporter counters to collect his wits. A shrug is the answer. The reporter climbs in. Up. The mail is on its way.

The mail has been flying to Chicago since last April 15—every day except Saturday and Sunday. Eighty-seven days of flying—a trip to Chicago each day, a trip from Chicago to St. Louis. In that time only one uncompleted flight. Only four days on which the St. Louis-to-Chicago plane has arrived late at its destination. The "trains arriving" board at Union Station does no better. From Chicago, the time has varied, due to delays on the Eastern leg, where night flying was instituted only recently. The mail does arrive —on time.

When Pilots Run Into Heavy Weather

Trouble? At times. Fogs, electrical storms, "bumpy" air, heavy winds—some form of annoyance almost every day, but the mail arrives. The tradition of the Postoffice Department has spread quickly to its new arm. The mail must arrive at any cost. Witness, the two flyers who in the early days of the service stood on the fuselage of their burning plane, pitching out sacks. They went to death, but the mail was saved. Witness one of the St. Louis leg flyers, Charles E. Lindbergh. He drove through one storm that killed one pilot and forced half a dozen others to abandon their trips. Lindbergh is one of the few two-time members of the "caterpillar club." The caterpillars of the air mail are those who have saved their lives by parachute jumps.

On this late afternoon Lindbergh had his warning at Peoria. The heavy wind, whipping rain, nearly turned his de Haviland into the tree tops. Yet he calmly took his receipt for the mail and went aloft again and persisted toward Chicago.

Near his destination, he encountered that dread of all airmen—fog. His sixth sense told him he was somewhere near the field, but at 100 feet he could distinguish nothing.

The lights at the field were flashed on, but he could not see them and the men below heard the roar of his Liberty engine die away to the south again. They shook their heads.

An hour later a Ford truck dashed up to the field. A dripping man strode into the air field office and tossed a sack onto the floor. "There's your mail," he said briefly. "It's five minutes late."

Again, a "bumpy" day when Lindbergh was flying as passenger with the second of the St. Louis leg pilots, Philip R. Love, a red-headed flyer, most reticient about any of his flying woes. Lindbergh was perched among the mail sacks. A "downdraft"—a hole—an unusually deep hole. The ship went from under its burden. Lindbergh was pitched out onto the wing, the mail with him. Clinging to the strut, he kicked the sacks back into the cockpit and when the mail was safe, Lindbergh climbed back in. Love seized his windshield and pushed himself back into the seat.

Springfield Sighted In 35 Minutes

On the reporter's flight, happily, the day was one of an even keel. The Missouri and Mississippi flashed beneath almost simultaneously for the crossing at 4500 feet was just above their confluence, and the Illinois patchwork of farms spread out their greens —every hue of green—unbroken onto the far horizon.

Dependent upon how successfully earthly speed laws can be violated, Springfield is three to four hours by motor from St. Louis. It was only 35 minutes until a tap on the shoulder by Nelson and a pointing finger brought the Illinois capital to view. Five minutes later the pilot nosed down into an open field. Another mail sack was pitched in beside the passenger. Nelson signed a receipt, nodded brusquely to the mail man and in three minutes we were aloft again. Overnight to New York means a husbanding of precious time all along the route.

No more time was required at Peoria. There Nelson glanced at his watch and seemed satisfied. The wind was freshening and wind makes or destroys speed in exact measure with its velocity. Nelson started to hug the earth to make every second count—no more than 300 feet up. Twilight now and increasing cloudiness that obscured the sunset and brought dark prematurely.

Twenty-five miles from Chicago, the lake air hit like a dash of cold water and the De Haviland plunged crazily downward. The passenger gripped and Nelson grinned (afterward he said the drop was 200 feet). "We always get that little bump when we get the lake coolness," he explained.

Again a nudge and Nelson's finger pointed to ground beacons that denoted the approach of the journey's end. Nelson spelled 10 minutes with his fingers. The beacons do not run the length of the air lane to St. Louis. Soon, Lindbergh, Love and Nelson will be flying the St. Louis mail in an hour

REED OF MISSOURI, AND HIS FUTURE, AS VIEWED BY NEWSPAPER WRITERS

Editors Discuss Senator's Chances to Get Nomination for President—Many Comment in Antagonistic Vein.

SINCE the first of the year, or the time when his fight against the World Court reached its spectacular peak, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri has been in the headlines of the newspapers to an amazing extent. As the British would say, he has had a tremendous "press."

Reed has made this "press" for himself by a vigorous and sustained public activity in a variety of fields. After the World Court fight, in which he was the leader of the opposition in the Senate, came his blistering assault on the coalition tax bill; then followed a remarkable two-ringed performance, with mornings devoted to the quizzing of witnesses at the prohibition hearings—and how he did quiz them!—and afternoons to an attack on the Italian debt settlement; finally came the great slush fund exposure, in the course of which he again found time to give frequent battle on the Senate floor. There seemed to be no limit to his energy.

In the wake of the news created by Reed has come a flood of special articles and editorial comment. It has been discovered by one writer that he likes candied yams, by another that he is blessed with a highly efficient secretary, who is almost an assistant Senator, and by another (Charles Michelson in the Post-Dispatch and New York World) that he is probably a "secret reader," because his speeches contain so many bookish allusions.

Current editorial comment is concerned largely with the interesting possibility that Reed may become an active contender for the next Democratic presidential nomination.

What the Papers Are Saying.

What are the papers saying about him? We lift a clipping at random from a pile of more than 1000 assembled in the last three weeks. It is from the Reno (Nev.) Gazette and bears the heading, "The Candidacy of Mr. Reed." This writer is not flattering. He brands the Missouri Senator as a "time-server" and an "opportunist," and adds:

If he had been a courtier in the days of kings he might have figured in history as a diplomat more astute than Talleyrand or Matternich. He would have been gracious to all men and would have profited by his urbanity. For Correspondent Stewart narrates that Mr. Reed is favored by the wets and yet managers to hold himself in good standing with the drys, and votes against the farmers but is regarded as their friend.

Mr. Reed has suddenly placed himself in the public eye as the chairman and principal cross-examiner of the only live Senate investigation now in progress. He makes himself the center of interest and gets on the front page of the newspapers as the fierce foe of the Antisaloon League and the Women's Christian Temperance Union and then, theatrically, he refuses to question the antisaloon chief on the grounds that "people think and say I'm a wet, but I am not."

Of course if he's a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the presidency, then this sort of thing is easily explained.

The writer of this scathing piece is in error when he says that Reed declined to examine the antisaloon chief. He put Wayne B. Wheeler on the stand in the Pennsylvania campaign-fund investigation and went after him rough-shod.

Based on Syndicated Letter.

The Reno editorial is based on a syndicated letter from Washington which has been printed in scores of papers. The tone of the letter is different from that of the editorial. This is the way in which it sizes up Reed and the Reed boom:

Watch Senator James A. Reed of Missouri. All the signs are that he is gaining strength every day as a Democratic presidential possibility. Among politicians still in Washington, the increasing frequency of references to him, as such, is surprising. Here are some of the things one hears in his favor:

He has a tremendous personality. He has ability. He's an indomitable fighter. In his home State he has proved himself a wonderful campaigner and vote-getter.

Al Smith has all these qualities, but he's known somewhat too exclusively as a wet. So is Gov. Ritchie of Maryland. While Reed's a wet, he stands for numerous other policies which ought to take some of the curse off his wetness even in dry territory.

He voted against the Corn Belt's pet farm measure, but not because he doesn't believe in farm relief. He simply doesn't believe in a subsidy.

The New York Telegraph lauds Reed as "one of the ablest men in the party ranks," but adds that the boom for him is "vaporous." This paper thinks that if the boom should become formidable "there might be a repetition of the Madison Square Garden fiasco, which was so costly in months gone by."

The 'Champion Oppositionist.'

Of similar tenor is the comment of the Springfield (Ill.) Register on the acclaim given the Senator at the Kansas City homecoming dinner in his honor. Under the heading, "Handy With the Hammer," this newspaper says:

Almost anyone is willing to concede that Senator Reed has a clean-cut, incisive mind. He has great powers of analysis, logic and oratory. But with all his advantageous points it does seem that he has a habit of always looking for the dark side of a question. He is the champion oppositionist in the United States. But it takes much more than that to be a President. A hammer is not a popular label for campaign literature. The horn gets far more votes.

A typical opinion on the other side is that expressed by the veteran Democratic editor, B. J. Sheridan of the Western Spirit, published at Paola, Kan. In a recent editorial he wrote:

Jim Reed is the best bet for the Democratic nomination in 1928. He has the ability to be President, and has the honesty. Besides this, he is fearless. The country wants another Jackson or another Roosevelt.

This led the St. Joseph (Mo.) News-Press to describe the Western Spirit as the first "Reed for President" newspaper. The Kansas City Kansan, which is owned by Senator Capper, "seconded the motion" of the Paola editor, explaining that "Jim would be about as easy for the Republicans to beat as anyone the Spirit could name."

Admits Reed's Prestige.

The Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) News, though conceding that there has been an advance in Reed stock during the last couple of years, thinks that the chances for him to get first place on the Democratic ticket, with a united party behind him, are not bright. "On the basis of present probabilities," comments the News, "Missouri is likely to have no better success with its favorite son in 1928 than it did 16 years earlier."

The Cincinnati Enquirer, noting the Reed boom, remarks that "it would be some task to keep cool

"Direct Primary Needs Revision."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SUFFICIENT proof has been adduced to show our present system of direct primary needs revision, if the day shall ever come, that the people can elect whom they believe best fitted to serve them, irrespective of the influence of political bosses or the actual expenditure of money.

This revision, I believe, can be accomplished only by the enactment of suitable laws, controlling the actions of the various party committees, such as making it a misdemeanor to print private ballots, showing individual preferance of candidates by either scratching other candidates names, omitting them off the ballot, or using heavy types, designating the choice of the committeeman.

Also make it a misdemeanor to have anyone approach a voter on election days with propaganda intended to influence their votes.

Let the candidates speak at all the meetings they choose before election, let them extol their supposed virtues in print, press or word all they desire as long as it is done honestly and without political trickery, but force them to lay off of other candidates' names and reputation in print, letters or ballots.

In the last mayorality campaign the people voiced their displeasure with the upbuilding of powerful political machines; they wanted a Mayor who would serve them as a servant and not as a dictator, but seemingly it is impossible to get any one now to serve as such. No sooner is a man elected to office but his first acts are to start a personal machine for his private future use; that the people resented this is clearly shown in the last election.

Therefore let us make such laws or provisions that will eliminate machines in politics; let us eliminate the self-appointed dictators who tell us how we must vote to keep them in power. Let the people have a chance to vote according to their own conscience and belief.

Drunken Enforcement Officers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN THE "Appeal Case" of a prohibition enforcement officer, charged with driving an automobile while intoxicated, Judge Gayer discharged the defendant, with the following remarks: "The reformers and professional enforcement agents who sent you out on such work are to blame, not you."

The defendant testified in answer to questions by his own attorney that he had been given a list of ten places to visit on the date in question by his superior officer. That between the hours of 2:30 p. m. and midnight he visited each place in an automobile and with but one exception took a "drink" in each place. He testified that the "liquor" or "concoctions" that he drank altogether equaled about seven "full whisky glasses" but insisted he was not intoxicated when arrested 30 minutes past midnight.

It occurs to me that this one man's testimony provides the best ammunition the wet cause has ever had in St. Louis. And I am hoping that your paper will not hesitate to follow out the principles of its noble founder. JUSTICE.

Mexico's Religious Troubles.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SOME comment and exposition of Mexico's religious dispute seems timely. There are simple basic principles involved—usually not even referred to or considered of no account—which may be stated as follows: Has the State a right to legislate man's natural rights away and shall any one or all churches or religions be held under the iron-bound control of a State. Every man has certain inalienable natural rights—of property, of freedom, of conscience in religious matters—which no man dare take from him. These rights are fundamental.

A State has rights, not of itself naturally but those only which its citizens grant it freely and which are desirable to preserve order. Such a right for instance, is granted to the State to educate children, by their parents who alone have a natural right to determine how this shall be done. The State is only given the privilege with the parents' consent.

Mexico says that is all wrong and bends every energy toward expropriating religious property and denying its citizens religious freedom.

But then all this should be pleasing to our bigots and the parlor pink socialists and those not so pink and of a redder hue. The real full-blooded socialist is only logical and must deny the moral code when destroying the rights of others. For recent literature kindly refer to Russia which long ago carried out its program to its last final horror and insane conclusion.

THE TARIFF AND THE FARMER.

Evidence accumulates that the high-tariff tax bears heavily on the American farmer. The tariff increases his cost of production, increases his cost of transportation, increases the price of virtually everything that he buys for himself and family, decreases his foreign markets. Like other consumers, he pays to the protected interests a continuous toll. He buys in a protected market and sells in the world market; the resultant disparity between the prices he pays and the prices he receives is at the bottom of his economic troubles. The sound remedy lies not in a subsidy for the farmer, not in adding a new tax to the one we already have, but in downward revision of the discriminatory Fordney-McCumber rates.

In his speech at Chicago in December, President Coolidge laid stress on the point that there is no tariff on farm implements in the Fordney-McCumber act. That is true, but it gives a false impression. There is no tariff on finished farm implements, but there is a high tariff on iron and steel and practically everything else that goes into the making of the finished product. The effect of this duty is shown by a table which Congressman Strong of Kansas, a Republican, has placed in the Congressional Record, comparing the 1914 and the 1924 prices of farm implements to the farmers of his State. On all the 17 items in the list there was a large increase, in most cases over 100 per cent, from 1914, when the Underwood (Democratic) law was in effect, to 1924.

With these figures in mind, it is easier to understand the sharp decline in the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar, as revealed in statistics of the Department of Agriculture. In 1913 the farmer's dollar was worth 100 cents; in 1914, 105 cents, and in 1915, 103 cents. In a continuation of this study, the present Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Jardine, has estimated that the value in 1923 was 61.3 cents; in 1924, 62.4 cents, and in 1925, 60.3 cents.

As facts like these sink into the farmer's consciousness, it is becoming increasingly hard for the G. O. P. spellbinder to cozen him into the belief that the high tariff makes for his prosperity. The extent to which the farmer has been undeceived is indicated by the resolutions adopted last winter at the Corn Belt conference in Des Moines. Here is a part of what this meeting—a meeting, be it noted, made up almost wholly of Republicans—said about the existing tariff law:

> We do not concede that the Fordney-McCumber act is of great benefit to agriculture as a whole. On the contrary, the staggering burdens imposed upon the consumers of the country through the act fall as heavily upon the farmer as upon any other class. On the one hand the farmer pays his full share of the heavy tariff tribute upon practically everything he buys, while on the other hand the price of his great surplus commodities is fixed in the world market. * * * If the existing tariff is such a boon to agriculture, then how can the fact be explained that agriculture is at this hour staggering on the brink of complete collapse?

Does the tariff on farm products help the farmer? There is abundant evidence, again from Republican sources, that it does not. It is an economic axiom that the world price of a surplus product which is shipped abroad in considerable quantities, for competition with the output from other countries, tends to become the domestic price. Tariffs in such a case can give no aid. For this we have no less an authority than the late Senator Cummins of Iowa, who, when asked in the Senate if he thought the farmer was aided by the tariff on his products, replied: "I do not; and it is idle for even an enthusiast to assert that the prices of these products are directly affected by the protective tariff." Similar views of other Republican leaders might be quoted.

Among the recent expressions on the tariff in relation to the farmer is one by the strictly nonpartisan Institute of Economics, a research organization of Washington, D. C. In a book it has issued on "The Cattle Industry and Tariff" the conclusion is reached that "the duties now imposed on cattle and beef are largely futile from the standpoint of the industry, and bid fair to impose, both upon an important part of the industry itself and upon the consuming public, burdens that will far outweigh possible gains."

The gist of the whole matter is that the tariff not only has failed to protect the farmer, but has piled on him a stupendous burden. He has been short-changed by the Fordney-McCumber act. If the purchasing power of his dollar is to be increased, the oppressive rates of that act must come down.

MEXICO'S CONSTITUTIONAL INTOLERANCE.

We set forth below the religious provisions written into the Mexican Constitution in 1917.

It is these provisions that the Government now seeks to enforce.

They are so repellent, so alien to our own ideas of the right to worship as we see fit, the right to own, hold and dispose of property, and finally the right to free speech, that further editorial comment seems almost unnecessary.

There are nine major restrictions against the church and church institutions and clergy as follows. They are forbidden—

To own church real estate, or mortgages on same.

To own church buildings, or any other buildings.

To possess invested funds or other productive property.

To maintain convents or nunneries.

To conduct primary schools.

To direct or administer charitable institutions.

To solicit funds for their support outside church buildings.

Ministers of religion are debarred from publicly criticising the fundamental laws, the authorities in particular, or the Government in general. They may not vote, hold office, or assemble for political purposes. No religious periodical may comment on political affairs. Official permission must be obtained before opening a new temple of worship for public use. The State Legislature may determine the maximum number of ministers of religious creeds according to the needs of a locality. The government regulates public worship.

Is there any cause for wonder that the religious people of Mexico are in revolt or that Mexico is forfeiting the respect of other nations?

A WARRANTED INVESTIGATION.

Gov. Baker has acted wisely in ordering the State Auditor to check the automobile license accounts of Secretary of State Charles U. Becker.

Attorney-General Gentry, in an opinion handed the Governor, has charged that Becker acted without warrant of law in depositing license funds in banks of his own choosing instead of turning them over "promptly" to the State Treasurer. He has said that the State in this manner has been deprived of large sums, representing the difference between the 2 per cent paid by the depositories selected by Becker and the 3.2 per cent paid by those selected by the State Treasurer. The opinion of the Attorney-General followed the closing of the Citizens' Security Bank of Englewood, which received some $25,000 of the State automobile money and in whose affairs there appears to have been a deplorable intermingling of business and politics.

In the circumstances, a close and impartial scrutiny of the books of the Secretary of State is well warranted. If there has been an improper handling of the State license fees, amounting to more than $30,000,000 since the passage of the motor vehicle act of 1921, the people manifestly are entitled to know about it. If the law has been violated, corrective and punitive steps should be taken with the same promptitude that has marked the Governor's call for an investigation.

Employes of Becker's office have said that his selection of special depositories for the automobile funds was prompted by a desire to expedite business. This may turn out to be an adequate explanation of the course that the Attorney-General has condemned. Whatever the facts, they ought to be made known. Becker, it goes without saying, should welcome the inquiry.

THE MISSOURI TRADITION.

According to Samuel Tait, who writes of Missouri in the current Mercury, there is a Missouri tradition of political independence which runs uninterruptedly from Benton to Reed. It is characterized by a dogged persistence in the opposite direction. The men who have perpetuated it have been more mule-headed than the Missouri mule. They have been more stiff-necked than the Medes, more changeless than the Persians.

It all started with Benton. We have at this late lay a vague impression of Benton, but he seems by comparison to have made Reed almost agreeably acquiescent. For instance, he opposed the annexation of Texas. We can imagine how that struck the adventurous Missourians of his time, almost every one of whom had designs on Texas. We can guess what the merchants, whose principal trade route ran to Santa Fe and thus on to Mexico, thought of Benton. Yet Benton always won in Missouri. He would come home, carry the battle to his foes, fight a few duels over on Bloody Island, and go back to Washington with a new commission as United States Senator in his coat.

Stone took up the tradition where Benton left it. Stone was against going into the World War. He voted against the resolution declaring war upon Germany. That was political death for Stone. He had turned his back upon his State and his party. Unfortunately for the Missouri tradition, he died before he could come back and be re-elected with everybody against him.

Reed followed Stone. Mr. Tait thinks Reed strengthened the tradition, made it more picturesque. We think so, too. Reed fought Wilson and the League of Nations. He turned upon his party, and his party turned upon him. He had to get Republicans to help send him back to the Senate, but he went back. Now the Democrats are so proud of him they can scarcely recall Thomas Jefferson.

So there is, apparently, a respect in which Missouri is unlike the other states. The other states are like Senator Williams, who is not against us on anything; who wants us to tell him what we think about prohibition, so he can agree with us; who is no more like the Missouri mule than the Missouri mule is like Mr. Coolidge's electrical hobby horse. We are afraid that Senator Williams is not going to get his commission renewed. It is not the way the thing is done in Missouri. We have a tradition to maintain.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE PER CENT.

Since General-Admiral-Envoy Extraordinary Lincoln C. Andrews, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of the dry army and navy, has returned to these shores with the proud report that his effort to get British co-operation in his war on rum-runners was "125 per cent successful," we take it that "100 per cent" will no longer carry a punch.

"One hundred and twenty-five per cent"—now there's a phrase really red-blooded. It will be enough to damn any man as an anarchist to say hereafter that he is a mere "100-per-cent American." To express superlative excellence, to indicate that a person or thing is the bee's knees or the cat's eyebrows, one will have to do a good deal better than that. Nothing less than Andrews' extra 25 per cent will describe a wow.

Every he-man in the country owes a debt of gratitude to the General-Admiral for this enrichment of the American language.

THE SAINT OF THE POOR.

Poverty, dreaded by most men, has been called "the Muse's patrimony," "the source of human art" and the inspirer of the poet's song. But it was St. Francis of Assisi, whom all Italy has just honored by celebrating his 700th anniversary, who glorified poverty and made it the strongest of his religious motives. The Poverello (little poor man) of Assisi, who embraced poverty and spent his life ministering to the sick and the poor, enjoying at the same time a profound love of nature, and retaining his love of song even during his final illness, may be said to have trampled on the fear of poverty, a sentence in one of his prayers reading, "O poorest Jesus, the grace I beg of Thee is to bestow on me the treasure of the highest poverty."

He was, it is said, "essentially a preacher of the brotherhood of man and the ideal of service." That he composed a great hymn to the sun when blindness had overtaken him is generally unknown. "Paradise Lost" and other works were written by Milton after he had lost his eyesight.

Wealth can be acquired at too high a price, and happiness need not depend on it. The lives of such men are a rebuke to those who complain of ordinary hardships, ill luck and the general troublesomeness of daily life.

We don't have the terrible quakes
That raise such a hullabaloo

The people of distant Honshu.
But brief is their wail and boohoo;
They rebuild on a safeguarding plan;
They restore, they improve, and they brew

He's a fine and polite little man,
And can give us a pointer or two
In the brewing of beer in Japan.

We daily with ice cream and cakes
Or several sandwiches chew;
On Fridays eat catfish and hakes—
A custom our grandfathers knew;
We make our heimgemacht do
And joggle along as we can,
But it makes me feel awfully blue
And I sigh for the beer of Japan.

ENVOY.

Uncle Sam, you have mountains and lakes
And your land with its wealth leads the van,
But in one thing you're losing the stakes—
'Tis the beer they produce in Japan.

This department is of the opinion that when authors declare they write on trains and under all manner of uncomfortable conditions, they are stretching the delicate fabric of truth. The common herd, reading such bunk is supposed to think that the authors are martyrs to art, and that art is a fearful and wonderful thing. Our readers will be thrilled to know that our most brilliant ideas are the result of long hours of rest in an arm chair. Were there any inspiration in discomfort, we would poke a wasp's nest with a stick and then take notes.

The expression "Spartan courage" offends our sensibilities. Whatever qualities the Spartan had were drilled into him from childhood. A courageous man is one who, faced by the alternative of fighting or conveniently ducking, chooses to fight. We fail to see how one who is so thick-headed as not to think of running away is courageous.

We could work up a lot more enthusiasm for Senator Borah if only he did not plead against "nullification" of the Eighteenth Amendment south of the Mason-Dixon line, where the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments—. Well, anyway, under certain circumstances, we could feel enthusiastic about the Senator's campaign.

Another serious objection we have to prohibition is that when we read of a dry orator, we are at a loss to know whether it is the matter of the speech or the manner that is under discussion.

AESTHETIC DANCING.

Dancing is of two kinds—the modern, or catch as catch can and the Greek or aesthetic. Reformers object to the closeness of the holds in modern dances, but that is only because people like to dance. They are packed closer in a street car, and no reformer says anything. But nobody rides a street car for the fun of it. For the modern dance, you need a floor, a partner and music. For the aesthetic dance you need a yard of cheese cloth and a blue light. The blue light conceals the shape—or lack of it—of the performer, makes the thing "ART" and fools the police. The police formula is: Blue light, artistic nudity and aesthetics; white light, plain nakedness and the police court. Or, blue light, stage; white light, stag.

The modern dance begins with the music; the aesthetic dance begins with a damsel, clad in the cheese cloth, bounding onto the stage as though someone had honked a horn when she wasn't expecting it. Arrived on the stage, she turns around to get the fellow's number. Not seeing a machine, she does a variation of skipping the rope several times. This exercise may signify:

The creation of the world,
The fall of Troy,
The burning of Rome,
The discovery of America,
The defeat of the Spanish Armada,
Babe Ruth knocking a home run,
Anything else the program claims it is.

Her daily dozen finished, the lady faints. Then someone in a pair of running pants rushes out to pick her up and the audience applauds. Only for the fact that the orchestra pit forbids it, the audience would climb up on the stage to shake hands with the hero. For more ladies, add more cheese cloth. Anyone who likes aesthetic dancing is terribly artistic, very near-sighted, or easily pleased.

THE MODERN STYLES ARE SO CONFUSING.

Marshall Field said that it is only in wide public affairs, where money is a moving force toward the general welfare, that the possessor of it can possibly find pleasure. Until it has been proved that the purchase of Senate seats has anything to do with the general welfare, we are opposed to the practice.

The thing we have never been able to fathom is why a reformer, who would not dare to tinker with a watch, blithely will assume to regulate our immortal soul, about which he knows nothing and which we have been given to understand is more valuable than a hatful of watches.

We cannot understand the British attitude toward purchase of their art treasures. They admit we are a nation of "dollar chasers," but when we try to acquire a little culture, they object. What must we do—absorb culture only from the foreign lecturers?

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

BASIS OF RELIGIOUS AUTHORITY.

"THERE are about 150 things," said a young man the other day, "in the Old Testament that couldn't have happened." He understated it. . . . The basis of religious authority is again shifting. Intelligent people can no longer accept the whole Bible as it stands as having implicit religious authority. For we have learned through the study of history what the Bible is and how it came to be, and we have come to the point where each man must decide for himself in the light of his own best knowledge and experience . . . Each one of us exercises his personal judgment constantly as to what portions of the teachings of Jesus are valid for him, in these days, under the conditions in which he is placed. And he exercises that right of private judgment far more in regard to other parts of the Bible than he does with regard to the Sermon on the Mount. He uses his knowledge of history and of science and of comparative religion to check up, to allow for mistakes, to discount exaggeration, to recognize the human element through which certain great divine truths have been expressed and handed down. He does, in other words, exactly what Jesus did with the history of His people as He knew it—he applies to it the test of intelligent study, and reserves the right to interpret it in the light of the best judgment God has given him . . . The final basis for religious authority for each one of us lies in his own soul at its best, the spark of God within himself, whereby he recognizes truth and beauty, and comes to feel that he too, in his small way, may speak as one having authority.

SAVE THE FORESTS.

From the Portland (Maine) Express.

THE warning from the State Forestry Department that it may be necessary to bar campers and tourists from the big woods of Maine because of the conditions that make starting disastrous fires especially easy, should be taken seriously by all concerned. The woods will remain open to all just as long as possible and at considerable risk, but investment in them is altogether too heavy to be jeopardized foolishly. Because of the lack of heavy rains for some time past, the woods are very dry, much more so than people not familiar with them can appreciate. A campfire abandoned carelessly, a burning match or stub discarded heedlessly, may cost many thousand of dollars. Visitors are in the big woods through the courtesy of the owners and not by any right they possess . . . There is more real money in them than in many a bank, and fire in them is more dreaded than bandits in a bank. Many a bank could be cleaned out of all its cash with less loss than would be caused by one bad forest fire.

Americans Spend Heavily for Installment Purchases

—fostered by more than 1500 so-called finance companies—to substitute interest-bearing notes for the familiar open account, not only in retail but also in wholesale trade.

The mushroom growth of these finance companies in the last decade is one of the most interesting departures in our credit system. Profits amounting to hundreds of millions have been garnered by such companies and by the banks upon which they are more or less directly dependent. The profit has come out of the pockets of the man who buy on installment, representing a tribute over and above the cash value of goods bought.

Credit Cost Sometimes 40 Per Cent.

The aggregate of this toll cannot be accurately measured. In the case of an automobile the buyer, if he is so disposed, as few are, can figure his own credit cost, since cars are sold on definitely known factory prices. With other goods, particularly furniture, the credit cost, or part of it, is often concealed in a mark-up. Frequently the actual percentage of credit cost is amazingly high. In some cases it amounts to as much as 40 per cent.

John Doe buys a radio set priced at $125, paying $25 "down" plus $10 for "carrying charge." He owes $100, which is to be liquidated in six equal monthly installments. If his mind functions as does that of most casual spenders he thinks the $10 carrying charge means 10 per cent interest on his debt. Far from it! If the debt runs six months he is paying at the rate of 20 per cent a year. But that is not all. Principal is reduced monthly, so that his actual average debt for the six months is only $50, which means that strict accounting would show the annual interest rate again vastly increased.

It is only fair to present the other side of the picture. In the first place, the buyer is paying for a credit service which, however extravagant, he considers worth having. Strictly speaking, the total extra paid is not interest. From his point of view he pays $10 in return for having six months' use of his radio set without waiting to save the necessary cash cost during that period. Obviously, if he could borrow the sum at a cheaper rate he should, and would, do so.

Indirectly Lowers Prices.

More important, however, installment buying in many lines is the very backbone of mass production and therefore is indirectly responsible for economies benefiting both the cash buyer, who is in the small minority, and the credit buyer. This has been emphasized by Henry Ittleson, president of the Commercial Investment Trust, Inc.

"It is often stated," says Ittleson, "that the installment buyer pays high for his goods and hence lessens his purchasing power. This opinion forgets that although the installment selling method requires that the cost of the service be included in the price to the consumer, the larger sales made possible by this method lower prices.

"Automobile prices, for example, are 30 to 40 per cent lower than in 1913, and it has been estimated that without the volume of production permitted by time-buying, automobiles would command double their present prices. Even if the installment buyer pays for the time granted, he is nevertheless paying much less than if installment selling had never been practiced."

There are also at least two sides to the charge that the installment method encourages extravagance by those who should most practice thrift. It can be argued, with much reason, that obligatory periodic payments for desired articles is a form of thrift, since the average individual otherwise fritters away much money without tangible return. Discussion of this phase of the question appears academic, however, for in the final analysis thrift and extravagance are almost wholly matters of individual character.

So far as the aggregate effect of installment buying on national thrift is concerned, it would seem that the proof of the pudding is in the eating. We now have sufficient experience to say flatly that such a danger is slight, if it exists at all. All the usual indices of thrift and prosperity have revealed a steady growth despite the vast increase in installment credit.

Greatest Growth Since 1920.

Since 1920—selecting the period of greatest growth of the installment method—the number of savings bank depositors in the country has more than doubled, and such deposits have increased from $14,000,000,000 to more than $24,000,000,000. In the same period total life insurance in force has more than doubled. There has been a steady increase in the number of persons owning homes, and in the numbers owning stocks and bonds. Chain store systems and mail order enterprises, which sell for cash, report striking increases in the volume of their business.

But how is it that the country can spend $6,500,000,000 in installment purchases this year without otherwise reducing purchasing power to a noticeable extent? The answer is a double one.

Buying power is not constant, but steadily increases. Despite installment buying, we have vastly more to spend than we had a few years ago. According to a survey of installment buying prepared by the Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., total wages and salaries paid by all branches of industry in the United States in 1913 amounted to $19,450,000,000. By 1918 the total was $32,076,000,000. Last year it was estimated at $40,000,000,000. In manufacturing industries alone the increase is even more striking.

Furthermore, a $6,500,000,000 total of installment buying in one year does not mean as large a volume of debt as the figure appears to indicate. The important total is the actual amount of debt at any one time outstanding. Approximately 25 per cent, according to most estimates, is paid down in cash at the time of purchase. Thus, in installment purchases totaling $6,500,000,000 the debt created is estimated at around $4,700,000,000. And this is reduced periodically, so that the average debt outstanding comes down to approximately $2,700,000,000.

An Expert's Analysis.

"After all," says Ayres in his survey, "perhaps the most important fact, from the bankers' point of view, about the nation's installment debt is that it is a quick liquidation obligation. Already, all the time, it is more than half paid off.

"If everybody should all at once stop buying on installments, but should keep on paying, the outstanding debt would decrease with great rapidity. It would be reduced to one-half of its present size in four months, and to one-quarter in seven months. If installment buying should stop, but everyone should keep on paying what he owed, the total still due would be reduced by the end of three months to an amount equal to one-quarter of the original selling value of the goods. By the end of six months the balance owed would be down to one-seventh of the original value of the purchases.

"People who fear that next year's market is being ruined because this year the American people are mortgaging their future earnings will be reassured by these figures."

A volume could be written analyzing arguments that installment selling will help to bring on business depressions and will make them worse when they do occur. And a second volume could be devoted to arguments that installment selling will tend to prevent depressions and to make them milder when they come. No final answer can be reached—except through experience, and possibly not even that way—since the greatest economists have never been able to agree as to the basic cause of depressions. Ayres holds that installment selling will probably not be a big enough factor to "have much effect either way."

Who the Critics Are.

In a survey prepared by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation, expresses the opinion that criticisms of installment buying have emanated largely from manufacturers and trade associations whose products are not marketed under this plan. If the practice of selling automobiles on installment were discontinued, he believes only 35 per cent as many cars could be built, and that the result would be an industrial disaster.

"About 1,500,000 persons would be thrown out of employment," he continues, "and social distress would immediately seize upon the industrial region north of the Ohio River. Since the advent of the automobile this region has been one of the most prosperous sections of the United States, and many billions of dollars worth of its products have been distributed to the farthest corners of the earth.

"Well-informed persons know that this region is today practically supported by the automobile and allied industries. What would happen to the manufacturers of clothing, hardware and shoes if this great region were put on the rocks? How could the railroads, banks, mines and other industries of the country prosper under such a condition of paralysis at the chief industrial center of the country?

"What is true of the automobile is true in smaller measure of the piano, radio, furniture and other industries. With the withdrawal of installment credit mass consumption would shrink tremendously and business would face a debacle."

Erskine considers "the extension of banking credit facilities to consumers to be one of the greatest economic forward steps that financiers have devised in modern times. By it they have completed the economic triangle so that consumers as well as producers and distributers enjoy the privilege."

Other automobile executives hold similarly favorable views. The last annual report of the General Motors Corporation stated in part:

"Your officers firmly believe that proper credit merchandising results in an important economic gain to society. It develops a demand that otherwise would not arise and provides an incentive to work, thereby turning idle into productive hours and acts as a stimulant in the creation of additional wealth."

On the Other Hand.

On the other hand, take the opinion of George F. Johnson, president of the Endicott-Johnson Corporation, one of the largest shoe manufacturers of the country. This company, obviously, does not sell on installment. Writing the Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., Johnson says he believes that "urging the poor into debt, or 'installment buying,' is the vilest system yet devised to create trouble, discontent and unhappiness among the poor." He adds that installment buying "is just about a thousand times worse than the old 'liquor habit,'" and that his opinion is based on actual experience in handling thousands of working people.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust survey quotes opinions of 30 nationally known manufacturers, bankers, merchants and credit men. Nine of these generally condemn installment selling and declare it is not proceeding along healthy lines. The others are more or less favorable, although all sound various warnings against overextension, inadequate "down payments" and too long credit.

Professional credit men, acting as a safety valve midway between production and sale, are extremely critical of installment selling. About 57 per cent of the more than 30,000 members of the National Association of Credit Men are opposed to the principle of installment selling, while 90 per cent believe that as now conducted the installment system is carried too far.

A recent survey tabulates opinions of several thousand of these credit men. Of those commenting, more than 70 per cent criticised installment merchandising, as now conducted, on the basis of consumers' overbuying. About 65 per cent criticised the terms of payment, holding they were generally too liberal to be permanently safe. More than 60 per cent disapproved the sale of luxuries on installments. About 15 per cent saw danger in increased bad debts and more difficult collections.

Says It Promotes Extravagance.

J. H. Tregoe, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, says:

"There is no doubt in my mind that installment merchandising is perfectly sound and of social value in the sale of some types of commodities, but as now conducted in the sale of luxuries, it is overdone in the light of future production. Facts prove definitely that the installment plan has temporarily increased production in some lines of business to an unusual extent. However, this is mortgaging future incomes which cannot be used to buy goods that may be produced in the future.

"The credit structure of the country can very well stand the pressure of installment sales providing business remains on an even keel. But we must bear in mind at the same time that the public is paying a big price for its installment buying through a carrying charge that runs into perhaps $400,000,000 a year. This is created, of course, by investigation charges, interest and higher prices that are often put on consumers' goods sold on the installment plan.

"No one can say definitely what the installment situation is, for it would take a colossal organization to gather all the data. But sound economic sense tells us that in the event of depression the installment selling plan would inevitably crash in the face of retrenchment, unemployment and a reduced national income.

"Installment selling is, in my mind, encouraging extravagance, and it prevents the public from understanding the distinction between consumer's goods and production goods. By that, of course, I mean goods which add to the efficiency or income of an individual as compared with goods which are merely used up and provide nothing more than a little additional comfort or entertainment.

"Due to the intense competition in installment methods that have altered the older methods of selling on the installment plan, some business men have become lax in their methods of checking credit risks. It is being made entirely too easy to 'buy on the installment plan, and herein lies immediate danger as well as future danger that would appear in the company of depression."

Good Plan Within Limitations.

George W. Norris, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia and one of the foremost students of installment buying from the bankers' point of view, makes the following statement:

"I can see no element of danger in the installment business for those banks that deal with responsible concerns and apply ordinary credit tests. For merchants the problem is more complicated. They must realize that selling on this plan will generally involve a longer extension of credit than the ordinary charge account plan, and that they must carefully investigate the circumstances of the buyer and particularly his other commitments of this character.

"The most important aspect is what might be called the sociological aspect. The plan appeals especially to persons of limited means whose financial experience is likely to be equally limited. If they will confine their purchases to articles of necessity or great utility, making sure that they are buying them at a fair price and on reasonable terms and that their commitments are well within their ability to pay after allowance for such unexpected contingencies as illness or temporary unemployment, the plan has many advantages.

"The danger is that they may be led into the purchase of extravagant or unnecessary things or things the use of which involves continuing expense and may thus find themselves seriously involved. In view of the great recent increase in the trend of selling, I feel that all concerned in it and all others who have the general welfare at heart should do all that they can to educate the general public on the principles that should apply. If I were framing a series of dont's I would include these:

A Banker's "Dont's."

"1—Don't buy what you don't need.

"2—Don't buy an expensive article if a cheaper one will answer the purpose.

"3—Don't pay more than a reasonable advance over the cash price.

"4—Don't buy more things than you are sure that you will be able to pay for without skimping or worry."

In the conflict of opinions on this question it is significant that general agreement prevails in some respects. Every informed person believes that installment selling should be conducted under reasonable and very definite safeguards, such as have already been mentioned.

Furthermore, it is conceded that the banks hold the key to the situation, since they control by far the greater part of the credit extended to finance companies and to installment distributers.

Whether the banks are prudently handling the hundreds of millions advanced on such credit is both a matter of opinion and a matter which experience only can show. And this amounts to saying that the problem must work itself out, which is exactly true of most great economic questions.

RESCUED MINERS TO ABANDON PROFESSION

Made Pledge to Give Up Mining Forever If They Were Saved.

By the Associated Press.

SALEM, Ky., Aug. 14.—Four of the five men rescued after being imprisoned under ground 153 hours, are pledged to give up mining forever, and the fifth is expected to follow their example. Randolph Cobb, one of the rescued, gave details of a conference in the drifts of the Hudson company's zinc mine when death seemed beckoning.

The men, Cobb, U. B. Wilson, Roy James and Harry Watson talked it over and decided never again to venture under ground in the event their prayers should be answered.

Their pledge was renewed yesterday. George Castiller, who was too weak to participate in the conference back in the mine trap, will seek some other means of livelihood, it is believed. Castiller, as well as the others, was much improved today and is expected to be fully recovered in a short time.

What Price, Peace?

There are still "wars and rumors of wars."

Regardless of the, as yet futile, efforts for world peace, Nations are still waging their relentless activity for more conquests, more possessions, more power and at the same time preaching PEACE.

When the supposed "brains" of their respective countries who represent them in matters of State are resorting to questionable methods to obtain more wealth, what can be expected of us ordinary individuals?

Reed of Missouri and His Future

with Jim, but quite easy to keep excited with him."

"Is He a Coming Hero?" asks the Tulsa World, and without committing itself to a prophecy, comments on the remarkable change in sentiment toward the man who six years ago was denied a seat in the national convention of his party. The World continues:

What has wrought this change? The superb political strategy and masterful generalship of one of the most skillful politicians the land where practical politics was invented knows!

The political capital Reed has already made for the party that rejected him at Frisco is far greater than any man ever provided who contributed to his humiliation on that occasion. We say that not in approval of his methods, but out of sheer admiration for his skill as a Bourbon politician of the best—or worst—type.

Seen as Notable Luminary.

The Detroit Times sees Reed as a luminary "which glows with notable brilliance." It expresses a widespread opinion of the Missouri Senator when it adds:

He is that rare example of political and personal courage, a Democrat who dares to be democratic. He does not pussyfoot. He does not compromise. Whatever his views are, you get them in language, the plainness of which you cannot misunderstand. Such forthrightness is refreshing, regardless of whether you agree or disagree.

The positive impression which Reed has made on the country is reflected in the various descriptive epithets applied to him. To the Peoria (Ill.) Journal he is "the effervescent Senator from Missouri," and "a snorting warhorse." A writer in the Houston (Texas) Post-Dispatch, characterizing him as "the prosecuting lawyer of the Senate," says that "his natural attitude is one of rampant antagonism, and very few men in public life have the ability and courage he displays." Over a news dispatch telling how "the worm will turn and sit in the throne of the king," the Denver Post says in a headline that "Senator Jim Reed, once Pariah, is now hero of Democratic party."

The news article so labeled is written around the theme that while some Democrats will never be able to forget Reed's international policies and his opposition to Wilson, they are now willing to bury the hatchet and follow Reed in matters where his leadership demands recognition."

"May Become Formidable."

The Yonkers (N. Y.) Herald, reprinting Charles Michelson's character study of Senator Reed, says that should Reed consent to strive for the honors of the Democratic presidential nomination, he "may become a formidable factor."

A Washington correspondent of the New York Telegraph writes that "Reed is rapidly becoming the Borah of the Democratic party" and that "he is receiving presidential mention to an extent that would have seemed preposterous a few years ago when he was denounced by Woodrow Wilson and was thrown out of the Democratic convention at San Francisco." The writer sums up:

Aside from Al Smith, Reed probably is the most conspicuous Democrat in the country. His weakness as a presidential possibility, as politicians analyze it, is the enemies he has made by his outspoken methods. Reed never trims or straddles. While this has helped him in Missouri, it creates powerful enemies. . . .

Reed overshadows any Democrat here. Whether or not he ever becomes a serious presidential possibility, he is the best show in the Senate. The dash and sparkle he gives to that body is alone enough to keep him in the good graces of those who find politicians stupid and politics a bore.

"Has Nerve to Fight."

The Wichita (Kan.) Beacon, in a discussion of "Jim Reed's Boom," asks what is the secret of Reed's popularity and answers its own question as follows:

Perhaps because he is one of the few Congressmen who have the nerve to stand up and fight, toe-to-toe, blow-for-blow. He blurts out what is on his mind.

The Johnstown (Pa.) Democrat eulogizes the Missouri Senator and puts his presidential prospects in a rosy light. Part of its tribute is as follows:

The Missouri Senator is an abler, a more brilliant and a more resourceful man than Folk ever was or could have been. He is perhaps the greatest trial lawyer in America, and as an orator he is without a rival in any party. He has tremendously heightened his fame since he began to dig into the muck heap of Republican electoral corruption. . . .

That Senator Reed will loom large on the political horizon in 1928 goes without saying. He would have been a serious factor in the Madison Square Garden convention but for the bitter antagonism of the klan and the Antisaloon League in his own State. But he has trampled these enemies under foot; Missouri will be behind him in the next national convention; and he will command strong support in other quarters. Should he make a fight for delegates in Pennsylvania, it seems probable that he could gain a fair percentage of them.

The West Palm Beach (Fla.) Post is hardly less enthusiastic. It describes the Reed boom as "the most prominent among Democrats of the country." To the usual catalogue of Reed's points of availability as a candidate—his ability, his power as a campaigner, his fighting quality, and so on—it adds that "he comes from the right part of the country; he is not in danger of falling into the Atlantic Ocean, like some of the rest, nor into the Pacific, as is the case with McAdoo."

A dispatch to the Los Angeles Record says that "Congress adjourned with more politicians and newspaper observers talking about Jim Reed in connecton with the Democratic nomination than about any other candidate."

Coming back to the less friendly observers, we find the Tulsa Tribune declaring that Reed is "a spectacular firebrand which destroys itself." The Bonham (Tex.) Favorite, reflecting that most booms have a way of exploding prematurely, and the Peoria (Ill.) Star, indulging in sarcasm at the expense of "Nosey Jim Reed and his senatorial committee of Democrats and Bolshevicks."

Assailed by Some Papers.

The Pittsburg Gazette-Times dismisses the Reed boom by recalling that he was thrown out of the Democratic national convention of 1920, while the Easton Press, of the same State, damns the Missourian as one of those "United States Senators who have been exhibiting their lupine characteristics by attacking with more lung-power than brainpower, Secretary Mellon, Senator Pepper and Pennsylvanians in general."

"What a relief it is," said the Philadelphia Dispatch, during an interlude in Reed's campaign-fund investigation, "to have that hippodroming Jim Reed person even temporarily off the newspaper front page!"

Pictures of Reed have filled some thousands of square feet of newspaper and magazine space. The favorite is that which shows him with a cigar cocked in his mouth. A typical descriptive paragraph reads: "With a stogy continually in his mouth, Senator Reed draws admission after admission from the leader of the dry forces. Spectators get as much of a thrill out of watching the stogy as they do listening to the examination."

"Slush Nemesis," "Grim-Faced Cross-Examiner," and "The Best Cross-Examiner in the Country" are other samples of the title writers' work.

Such is the Reed "press." The articles quoted in this digest are but a small fraction of the thousands in which he has figured during the current phase of his career. He is, beyond a doubt, the most talked-about man in the United States today.

FLYING WITH THE AIR MAIL TO CHICAGO

of complete darkness each morning and night with no lights below to chart them and no lights on their ship to take some of the peril out of a forced landing. "It would be better if we had them," was their only comment.

On Time, and Next Plane Starts.

Now in the darkness ahead punctured only by the lights of Chicago suburbs in even rows, there burst a great blaze of light. Maywood field, the division point of the mail service, has heard our approach and lights up a safe harbor. Red lights mark the minor obstacles such as telephone poles. White lights outline the area. Two great searchlights that revolve in a complete circle point a welcoming eye up toward us. A great ground flood bathes the entire field with its glow. Nelson banks sharply and plunges down. We settle onto a cinder runway as softly as a duck upon it feeding ground. Nelson brings the plane about and taxies toward another great bird which seems to await our coming. Men run out and unceremoniously begin to jerk the mail bags from under the passenger who had cushioned them about him after that lake air bump. Into the other plane they go, one of the great new Douglas type with which the Government is equipping its main air artery.

Love pulls his watch and shows its dial. It is exactly 7:30. "On time to the very minute," he comments, but he is drowned out by a tremendous roar alongside. The waiting plane takes the air and heads out into the darkness, its tail like a cigar end vanishing in seconds. Our eastbound mail is on its way to New York.

Cleveland is its first stop. There another rapid change of planes and the hazardous night task of soaring over the Alleghenies is on.

Now another plane resting over there roars into action and mounts. His taillight vanishes into the night—the west Pacific mail is on the wing. Omaha first—Cheyenne in the morning. Then Salt Lake and finally the leap over the Rockies and the coast before nightfall.

Aviation Field Resembles Union Station.

Several hundred people crowd about our ship and stare curiously and admiringly at this slight figure of Nelson, who strides silently and brusquely past them, into the office to get his receipt that marks the end of duty.

Chicagoans gather each night to see the air mail come and go and to hear the brief, terse comments of those silent, grave men—the pilots. The news of the air mail flies along from coast to coast as on a telegraph wire. "—— had a nasty bump" or "not so good tonight." For two hours each night Maywood Field resembles the union station of a busy city. Here comes the planes—from the West—from the East—from the Twin Cities—from Detroit—from St. Louis, all within a brief space, and then, the departures. Speed—precision—regularity—night and day—rain—wind—lightning—snow—the mail must go At this instant every minute of night and day the mail is aloft from coast to coast. The mail does go

Nelson's boyish face relaxes over the biggest beefsteak we can get. The air—two hours and 50 minutes of the air—will produce a prodigious appetite. The air—the restful air, where 100 miles an hour seems like the lazy drift of a boat on a quiet stream—where beautiful earth slides evenly and slowly by. The air—the soothing, drowsy air that gives a curious sense of security, if you can sense the feeling of confidence which the glance of a good pilot seems to warm in your veins.

Muses Nelson: "I didn't like to take you without a parachute. If anything had happened I couldn't have opened it. I'd have had to stick with you."

The tradition of the air!

From Timothy Cole's Wood Engraving of a Portrait by John S. Sargent

Newspapers, like individuals, come in time to have a certain reputation, which is determined by character and usefulness. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch has been published for 48 years, and men whose own characters are well-known to the country tell upon this page what they think of it. ¶ No other such appraisal of an American newspaper, so far as we know, has ever been made. The men who testify here were asked what they think of the Post-Dispatch, and this is their answer. To have earned these tributes is a great achievement, certainly the greatest to which a newspaper could aspire. ¶ The sum of what is here said is that the Post-Dispatch is the greatest free newspaper in the United States. One of its admirers says it is the Manchester Guardian of America, which is to liken it to the most-heralded and most widely-applauded newspaper published in the English-speaking world. ¶ All the utterances upon this page are excerpts. They constitute, as a whole, what likely is the greatest tribute ever paid to an American newspaper.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch is a free newspaper. There are few enough free newspapers in the world today, so the Post-Dispatch has distinction. Its distinction is somewhat professional, for it is a handsome paper; somewhat ethical, for it is an honest paper; and somewhat literary, for it is a bright newspaper. And these things are enough for one newspaper.

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE
Editor Emporia Gazette

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch has conspicuously reflected the great transformation in the treatment of news by the American press. Its readers enjoy a wealth of material which is of high historical value. It is a great metropolitan daily.

ROLAND G. USHER
Prof. of History at Washington University

I like the open-mindedness of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the vividness of its news and the virility of its editorial page. It is a different newspaper, and merits a place in the first rank of the newspapers of the world. I like the way it prints the news—all the news. I like its liberalism and the skill with which its position is maintained. It is a newspaper that invites to reading by the craftsmanship of its makers, and when read it is found to have been worth reading.

WALTER WILLIAMS
Dean of the Missouri School of Journalism

There is nothing more inspiring than the unafraid champion of a great cause. To bring the government back to the people, to make it once more a government by the people instead of a government imposed upon them—that is a great cause, and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch has been its consistent, unafraid champion.

ALBERT C. RITCHIE
Governor Maryland

I hail the St. Louis Post-Dispatch as a consistent and fearless fighter in the ranks of the lovers of liberty. Our country has need of a hundred voices resounding from ocean to ocean and from Canada to the Gulf in the spirit and even in the very words of Patrick Henry and James Otis, of Samuel Adams and Thomas Jefferson, in order that our countrymen may be roused to protect that inheritance of liberty which is far more valuable to them than land or any riches.

NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER
President Columbia University

I am pleased to express my appreciation of the loyal support given by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch to the purification of the public service. It is contributing materially to the formulation of sound views on public questions, and was one of the few journals that at the outset of the oil inquiry realized the malign character of the transactions exposed.

THOMAS J. WALSH
United States Senator from Montana

The
POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I KNOW that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

Joseph Pulitzer

April 10, 1907

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch has been the voice always heard in behalf of free speech, a free press, the right of peaceable assemblage, and all those inestimable rights now too often undervalued and too often challenged. It has maintained with an ability that admits of no superior the great principles of free government. I have observed that it never loses sight of the principle involved, the right that is in jeopardy. It makes the cause of the individual, however obscure, the cause of liberty.

WILLIAM E. BORAH
United States Senator from Idaho

I have known and read the St. Louis Post-Dispatch for over twenty years, and I have always felt that it was entitled to be ranked among the great newspapers of the country. I have particularly admired its courageous aggressiveness in protecting public interests, the force and definiteness of its advocacy and its fairness in giving the other side.

HERBERT S. HADLEY
Chancellor Washington University

For nearly fifty years the St. Louis Post-Dispatch has been fighting to keep the Bill of Rights alive and inviolate—as much for the poor and lowly as for the rich and mighty—as free from innovations by radicalism as from abridgement by reaction. It has been true to its platform, and true to its founder.

W. H. LAMAR
Vice-President Thomas Jefferson League

In its defense of freedom of speech and opinion, and in its championship of minorities, the Post-Dispatch has earned an enviable place in American journalism. It has never hesitated to espouse unpopular causes when it believed them just. It has never hesitated to condemn our Government when it believed the Government to be wrong. It has been intimidated neither by clamor nor by the club of authority. It has demanded that we extend equal treatment to weak nations and powerful nations, the same consideration for Mexico and Haiti as for England and France. It has insisted upon decency and justice to those without power or influence—the Anna Lerners and the Karolyis of the world. I have habitually observed that its editorials, instead of setting a pattern for the news reports, have followed them. This is as it should be; this is honest journalism. I welcome the opportunity to express my admiration and respect for a great newspaper. It is the Manchester Guardian of America.

GEORGE W. NORRIS
United States Senator from Nebraska

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch has been a powerful element in the revival of transportation upon the Mississippi river. The public service it has performed in this cause can scarcely be estimated, but I venture to assert that a large part of the present support for inland water transportation can be directly traced to its influence.

ROBBER, WHO DRUGGED HOTEL GUESTS, BREAKS FROM JAIL

Also Liberates Six Other Prisoners From Lockup at Hickman, Ky.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HICKMAN, Ky., Aug. 14.—E. L. King, alias Emmett Howe, Tuesday night drugged and robbed hotel guests five hours after stealing a new automobile at Clinton, broke jail here early today and liberated six other prisoners. He told the prisoners on the third floor of the county jail that he would get them out and all could go who wished, but if any who remained called to the jailer he would kill them. Six went with him, four remaining, later giving the alarm.

King tore up his bunk, took therefrom a strip of iron, pried open the first lock on his cell and then pried back the tire of the outside lock that automatically locks all the cells, thus releasing the prisoners. Then they dug through the brick rear wall under a window. King yesterday told the prisoners he could get out of any jail and had escaped from the Oklahoma penitentiary and three other jails. He asked for a violin a few days ago but was denied it. He told prisoners he could take strings from a violin and cut his way out of any jail.

Two Girls, 14, Missing.

The police are searching for Dovie Irene Morriss, 14 years old, of 6332 Bartmer avenue, and Irma Schouse, 14, of 6437 Suburban avenue, who disappeared Monday morning, leaving notes to their parents, saying that they had run away because they were dissatisfied with home conditions. Their parents say that the girls were "movie struck," and that they had rebelled at efforts to keep them at home evenings.

CHURCH AND LABOR TO OCCUPY SECOND DAY OF EXPOSITION

Semi-Religious Ceremonies Will Be Held at Forest Park Grounds on That Day, Which Will Be Sunday.

SECRETARY OF LABOR WILL BE SPEAKER

"Exposition City" Is Nearly Complete and First Exhibits Probably Will Be Installed This Week.

The second day of the Greater St. Louis Exposition, Sunday, Sept. 5, will be devoted to a combination of religious and labor ceremonies at which Secretary of Labor Davis will be the principal speaker.

Singing for the religious exercises will be led by an orchestra and the Royal Mountain Ash choir of Wales, one of the entertainment features of the exposition. The following committee will be in charge of the religious exercises: Archbishop Glennon, Monsignor Tannrath, Dean William Scarlett and the Revs. Henry Alfred Porter, Russell Henry Stafford, Ivan Lee Holt and Dwight J. Bradley and Rabbi Leon Harrison.

Secretary Davis originally planned to visit the exposiiton on Labor Day, but he was forced to change the time of his coming and requested that some religious program be arranged if he should speak on Sunday.

"Exposition City," in Forest Park, a 45-acre tract built up with gay pylons and towers, exhibition booths and bright lights, now nearly is completed, and the work of installing the exhibits probably will begin this week.

The opening of the exposition will be marked by a "trademark" parade of floats through the downtown section. A special organization of exhibitors has been formed to take charge of this event.

Officers of the Parade Association are Edward Langenberg, chairman; Milton E. Bernet, first vice chairman; E. F. Hagerman, second vice chairman; Louis Rickler, secretary, and C. H. Boedeker, treasurer. Offices will be opened tomorrow in the Loew's State Theater building.

DAVISON APPROVES TRAINING WORK AT SCOTT FIELD

New Assistant Secretary of War Departs for Rantoul After Inspection.

Scott Field, near Belleville, and the system of aeronautics for lighter-than-air craft taught there were inspected and approved Friday by Assistant Secretary of War F. Trubee Davison, who came by airplane from Toledo and departed by plane yesterday for Rantoul, Ill., to inspect the army plant there.

After inspecting all the airports in the Middle West he will go to Texas for similar inspections. He said this is more satisfactory than studying cold data at a desk in Washington.

Secretary Davison was accompanied by Gen. J. E. Fechet and other officials of the Army Air Service, all of whom expressed satisfaction with conditions at Scott Field, which is under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel John A. Faegelow.

In 1916 Secretary Davison served in an American ambulance unit in France, and when the United States entered the World War he trained for a pilot's license in the navy. Injuries suffered in a crash prevented his going overseas. He is a son of the late Henry P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co., who was head of the American Red Cross work during the war, and from whom Secretary Davison inherited $4,500,000.

HIGHWAY ASSOCIATION TO PASS ON SAFETY MEASURES

Group Will Meet Tomorrow at Sedalia to Discuss Conference's Suggestions.

The Board of Governors and committees of the Missouri Street and Highway Safety Association, will meet at the Terry Hotel in Sedalia tomorrow to pass upon bills incorporating recommendations of the Missouri conference on street and highway safety, held at Jefferson City May 10 and 11.

Gustav Vahlkamp, legal counsel of the Automobile Club of Missouri, and secretary of the Legislative Committee of the Missouri Street and Highway Safety Association, is the author of the bills to be considered.

Vahlkamp's bills incorporate recommendations that (1) a State road patrol be created; (2) that drivers' licenses be issued without mental or physical examination of applicants; (3) that the State speed regulations be changed to restrict the speed of automotive vehicles in business districts to 15 miles per hour, in residence districts to 25 miles per hour, and to 45 miles per hour under all other conditions.

Cornelius Roach, former Secretary of State, will act as chairman of the meeting.

90-DAY SENTENCE OF FEDERAL PRISONER IS STAYED AGAIN

John Kukorola of Centerville Station, Ill., who was taken into custody a week ago to serve a 90-day sentence in jail, imposed in May, 1922, and suspended after 12 days by Federal Judge English of East St. Louis, was liberated yesterday on payment of a $500 fine, assessed when he was sentenced. He was ordered to report back to the court, before Judge Lindley, on Nov. 12, for further disposition of the case.

Kukorola has an invalid wife and eight children. District Attorney Baker recommended that he be liberated on payment of the fine.

The case of Kukorola was one of several disclosed in an official investigation of affairs in the court of Judge English, against whom an impeachment proceeding is pending in the United States Senate.

St. Louisans In Social Whirl at Eastern Resorts

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 14.

NO event at the North Shore, nor in fact in New England, is comparable to Race Week at Marblehead. Since Aug. 7 the lovely landlocked harbor has been teeming with visiting yachts flying the pennants of many yachting organizations, and hundreds of yachts from the lordly ocean going steam affairs to the kindergarten boat..on bob at their anchorage in the bay. Racing morning and afternoon has occupied the attention of every one and a long list of social affairs at the yacht clubs, at the homes of the summer residents and on board the yachts has made this the gayest week ever known at the North Shore.

On Friday of this week more than 250 yachts took part in the racing. Marblehead is the only yachting center which has two clubs and its kindergarten class, in which children as young as 7 years are taught to manage their small craft of the Brutal Beast class, had its part in the racing events.

The fourth annual golf tournament was held at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, during the week. Nearly 300 spectators watched the contest. The winner made the course with a score of 60, and among others with high rating was G. S. Hicks Jr. of St. Louis, with a 67.

Motor Tours of Europe Popular With Americans

PARIS, France, Aug. 4.

SO POPULAR have automobile tours of Europe been this summer that many of the larger agencies report difficulty in getting sufficient cars for their patrons—and this, despite the fact that increasing numbers of Americans bring their automobiles with them.

The most popular tours out of Paris are those through the Chauteau district of Central France, along the Loire River, into Normany and Brittany, with stops at Deauville, Frouville, Dinard and Mont Michael, and to the old battle front of Northern France, with visits to Verdun, Rheims and Chateau Thierry.

Brussels is the starting point for many tours through Belgium and Holland, and the Black Forest of Germany has a network of excellent automobile roads. Former restrictions on automobiles in some Swiss cantons have been removed and many parties now motor from Paris through France and Switzerland to Naples or Venice.

One party leaving Paris included McMillan Lewis of St. Louis, Sargent Dumper of Newark, N. J.; Nelson Mackie of Newark, Frank Partridge of Maplewood, N. J., and William Cameron of Pittsburg, Pa. They will tour Switzerland, Italy and Germany before returning to Paris, about Sept. 1.

The Rev. Ivan Lee Holt of St. Louis is at the Hotel Saint-James et d'Albany here.

Every Dress Worth Far More Than $25!
Many Dresses Worth Half Again As Much Regularly!

ANOTHER one of those Dress events for which Sonnenfeld's is so justly famous! Six solid weeks of preparation by our combined stores were devoted to this one. In planning it, we were not only determined to secure the best values obtainable . . but every Dress had to be of the finest type . . a foremost Fall style . . . a marvelous example of Fashion in every respect. To assist us, scores of America's leading Dress designers granted tremendous concessions on the very "cream" of their stocks, while we ourselves have disregarded profits almost entirely, in order to make it profitable for you to buy your new Fall Dress a trifle earlier in the season.

Grandmother's Age
Looks like a girl of 19
By Edna Wallace Hopper
Mine is a grandmother's age. My life has been spent in the limelight. Yet I am still a stage star, still a beauty, still a girl. Thousands who see me daily marvel at my youthful bloom. Countless young girls envy my hair and complexion.
I sailed on Steamer Homeric, June 12, 1926, for my 35th trip to France. I go there every year to keep in intimate touch with the latest beauty discoveries.
I have searched the world for beauty aids. The best I found were produced by French experts. I became by their help a famous beauty, gained a glorious career. They have preserved my beauty, kept my youth, as all who see me know.
Now I am placing these helps at every woman's call. Toilet counters everywhere supply them in my name. Every girl and woman who desires may use exactly what I use, and at a modest cost.
My Beauty Aids
White Youth Clay—Purges the skin of impurities. Combats lines and wrinkles. Brings a new complexion.
Facial Youth—A liquid skin cleanser. Cleans to the depths taking grime, dirt, dead skin and clogging matter with it.
Youth Cream—To soften, whiten, feed and beautify the skin. Cold cream and Vanishing types. Both are unsurpassed.
Quindent Tooth Paste—Utmost in a dentifrice. Whitens teeth—purifies breath.
Beauty Talc—Fine as vapor.
Fruity Shampoo—To cleanse, restore lustre, beautify hair and make it glisten.
Youth Hand Lotion—For hands, face, arms, chapped skin, sun or windburn and all roughness. Heals chapped lips.
Wave and Sheen (Greaseless Hair Dressing)—A many-purpose hair beautifier. Gives instant results. Brush down for smooth, sleek appearance. Comb upward for fluff and wave. Use curlers for fixed enduring curl.
Cream Deodorant—Refined under-arm cream. Best I have ever found.
Liquid Nail Polish—For youthful tint and lustre. Imparts a brilliant gloss.
Hair Remover—For superfluous hair on any part of body.
Eye Bath—For tired, aching, inflamed eyes, to preserve lustre and brilliancy.
Freckle Cream—Banishes freckles quickly.
Eyebrow-Eyelash Beautifier—Indispensible toilet requisite.
Lipstick—True to nature. Exquisite case.
Vanity Rouge Compact—Incomparable for beauty and daintiness.
Beauty Soap—For those who demand the best.

Cables 1-Word Greeting 12,000 Miles.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 14.—A message of good will stated in a single word has been cabled half way around the world and will be read before the national encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans, which opens here tomorrow. The word "felicitations" is the greeting of Col. Carmi I. Thompson, national commander of the veterans, who is now in the Philippines as a special representative of President Coolidge, and Emilio Aguinaldo, leader of the island insurrection in 1900.

FEW PLANES CRASH IN EUROPE

Only Four Fatal Accidents Since 1919, in Passenger Service.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Traveling by airplane apparently is not nearly as dangerous as it is commonly believed. The annual report of civil aviation states that, since 1919, air transport flying has amounted to 4,563,000 miles and there have been only four accidents causing the death of passengers.

During the year ended in March, there were only five accidents and not one had serious consequences beyond damage to aircraft. Passengers in British machines increased from 13,478 in 1924 to 14,675. Flying for hire, or "joy-ride" flying, showed a big increase, the number of passengers in this branch of aviation being 67,329, the largest on record.

Syndeps Powders will take away the excess pounds

Here is a refreshingly different way of reducing your weight—do it while you sleep! That sounds interesting, doesn't it? Wouldn't you like to try it? Then here's the way . . .

Instead of simply going to bed tonight and letting your body store up its daily portion of excess fat, take a cooling, refreshing glass of water with one Syndeps Powder in it just before you retire. Then your system will build up its regular amount of necessary energy but the fatty tissues will not be stimulated. And thus, if this simple treatment is used faithfully, a marked reduction in your weight will be noticed in a very short time.

Do not compare Syndeps Powders with ordinary so-called reducers. Syndeps Powders are carefully compounded from a scientific formula. They bring about a reduction in weight in a rational, slow, but positive way. They will not cause you any discomfort or interfere with your daily habits.

Simple and Pleasant

We feel sure you will be pleased with the results which Syndeps Powders will bring. Users everywhere are. We conscientiously urge you to get a box and try them. Remember fat is not only annoying but dangerous—and now it is needless. There is no reason why your figure should not be normal. Syndeps Powders will make it slender and attractive.

Get a box and start reducing tonight. All druggists have the $1.00 box (6 for $5) especially Wolff-Wilson, Walgreen's.

Syndeps POWDERS WILL MAKE YOU SLENDER

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 14. Tom Johnson, who in Seattle confessed to more than a dozen murders and many robberies, arrived here today in custody of officers, to be tried for the murder of Leonard Erdall, former University of Minnesota football star. Johnson led police to the scene of the Erdall slaying during an attempted holdup, and there reenacted his version of the shooting. He also went through complaints to police of holdups and robberies last winter and pointed out 18 holdups as the ones he committed. In 25 years, he said, he had stolen more than $80,000.

BUILDING FOR SNAKES TO COST $125,000

Zoo Board Explains Public Safety Demands Expenditure of So Large a Sum.

Convenience, safety and comfort of the public were prime considerations in designing the $125,000 Reptile and Small Mammal House for the Forest Park Zoo. This is the explanation of officials as to why so much money is to be spent for a "building for snakes."

The plans, prepared by John E. Wallace, the Zoo's architect, were approved by the Zoological Board of Control last week and bids for the construction will be called for in about three weeks. Seven or eight months will be required to erect the place, which will be paid for from general Zoo funds.

It is anticipated that this will be one of the most popular attractions at the gardens. The collection of reptiles was begun last spring, two pythons being the most notable acquisitions, and these have been a source of unusual interest to large crowds of visitors in the temporary snake quarters in the Ostrich House.

Designed in Spanish Style.

In appearance, the new building will harmonize with the Primate House, which it will adjoin on the west. It is designed in Spanish style and will have walls of buff stucco, trimmed with tile and embellished with terra cotta figures of reptiles and animals. The site is on a slope on the south side of the grounds. Area of the structure is to be 105 by 160 feet.

From the entrance on the south side the visitor will behold the whole interior, the striking central feature of which will be an artificially constructed swamp for turtles, terrapin and other amphibians. This will hold a position similar to that of the central monkey cage in the Primate House. Broad aisles will surround the inclosure of the swamp. A glass conservatory immediately north of this space will contain pools for alligators and crocodiles, in a tropical setting.

There will be 32 small display boxes for reptiles around the walls, with settings suitable for the snakes of various climes they will hold. Photographs of real country, on larger transparencies, will serve as backgrounds.

Plans for Display Boxes.

Four large display boxes will have glass fronts 12 feet wide and 11 feet high, while they will be eight feet deep. Twenty others will be somewhat smaller than these. Lights will illuminate these cages and the walls will be painted to simulate the reptiles' habitats.

A platform will be placed at either end of the building to hold boxes for the smaller displays, surrounded by flowers.

To the east end of the structure will be a detached room for 33 wire cages for small mammals, for which there are now makeshift quarters.

Directors Will Decide Monday Their Stand on Open Sunday Question.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 14.—The Sesquicentennial Exposition will be open tomorrow as usual, pending a decision on the open Sunday question by the directors Monday night.

After the opinions by Judge Edwin O. Lewis and Thomas D. Finletter, that operation of the Sesqui with its paid admission and Gladway was a violation of the law of 1794, Mayor Kendrick announced that the question was of such vital importance that the decision would be left to the 55 directors.

Officers of the exposition's administrative building said today there was some sentiment in the board to close the Gladway, where most of the amusements are concentrated, on Sunday, as a concession to the opponents of the Sabbath operation. They felt, however, that the majority of the directors would decide to keep the Gladway open until the proceedings brought by Attorney-General Woodruff in Harrisburg were decided. The Attorney-General's action was taken on instructions from Gov. Pinchot.

Menawhile, the Methodist Men's Committee of 100 is formulating a plan which Thomas D. Taylor, its chairman, declared would bring about a closed exposition on the Sabbath. He declined to reveal details of the plan or to say whether it involved court action.

$500 Watch is Recovered.

Learning that two youths were trying to pawn a valuable watch in a Market street shop yesterday, detectives arrested them. They said they had been discharged as ushers at a movie theater and were trying to borrow money on the watch to go to Evansvville, Ind. One of them explained that he had found the watch in the theater Thursday. At the theater it was said Mrs. William F. Otto of 1519 Cass avenue, wife of an Alderman, had reported losing it. She identified the watch, which she values at $500, and refused to prosecute the youths. The watch is set with 32 diamonds and 22 sapphires.

Trachoma Hospital in Kentucky.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Aug. 14.—Miss Anba Nimmo of the Government trachoma hospital at Rolla, Mo., has arrived at Richmond, Ky., 26 miles south of here, to take charge of the new Kentucky trachoma unit recently established there by the Government. Dr. H. Sory, who has been superintendent of the Rolla institution, will be transferred to Richmond in October and will have active management of the hospital, which will have facilities for handling all trachoma cases in Kentucky.

15 NUNS, DRIVEN FROM MEXICO, VISIT HERE

Fifteen nuns of the Community of the Good Shepherd at Saltillo, Coahuila, Mexico, who left that country in obedience to the Government's enforcement of religious restrictions, are nearing new homes, after enjoying the hospitality of St. Mary's Infirmary, 1563 Papin street.

The refugees arrived in St. Louis Friday morning and spent the day and night with the sisters here. They departed yesterday for Wheeling, W. Va., where some will stay at a convent, the others proceeding to another convent at Toronto, Ont. They hope the restrictions will be modified soon to permit their return to Mexico.

All the nuns spoke Spanish, and one spoke English also, and acted as interpreter here for Mother Superior Margarita, who headed the party. Reporters were told that the convent at Saltillo cared for 40 orphans, until it was closed two weeks ago, together with two other convents, the Saltillo Cathedral and six other churches there. The nuns say they were told by army officers enforcing the regulations to leave the country.

After placing the orphans and convent treasures, including altar pieces, in the safekeeping of sympathetic townspeople, the nuns borrowed apparel to replace the religious robes which they were forbidden to wear in public. Thus they traveled by railroad to Laerod, Tex., where they again acquired robes of their order and then came on to St. Louis.

BRIDGES FINISHED ON NO. 21 THROUGH REYNOLDS COUNTY

Good Time Now Possible to Fishing Places on Current and Eleven Point Rivers.

All bridges and culverts have been completed on Missouri State Route No. 21 from Ironton to its junction with No. 16 near Van Buren. This does away with the necessity of fording creeks and marks the end of the hog-back automobile bridges which have troubled city drivers. Also the long detour south of Centerville has been eliminated.

This means that, in spite of the numerous grades and the rough places on No. 21 between Ironton and Centerville, good time may now be made from St. Louis to the fishing places on the Current and Eleven Point Rivers.

There are still some dirt stretches on No. 21 south of Centerville, and these will be mean traveling during and after rain. Some of them, indeed, would be very bad if thoroughly soaked. It is hoped that the graveling of No. 21 will be finished as far as No. 16, and possibly as far south as Grandit, before winter.

At present No. 21 is dirt, which looks as if it would be impassable after heavy rain, from the junction with No. 16 to the point where it intersects No. 42 east of Doniphan. But in dry weather the trip over No. 3 to Farmington, then via Doe Run and Middlebrook to Ironton, and down No. 21 to Van Buren, Grandit and Doniphan is probably the finest scenically that can be taken out of St. Louis. BRIDGES FINISHED ON NO. 21 THROUGH REYNOLDS COUNTY

At present No. 21 is dirt, which looks as if it would be impassable after heavy rain, from the junction with No. 16 to the point where it intersects No. 42 east of Doniphan. But in dry weather the trip over No. 8 to Farmington, then via Doe Run and Middlebrook to Ironton, and down No. 21 to Van Buren, Grandit and Doniphan is probably the finest scenically that can be taken out of St. Louis. It gives access to the Current River near Ellington, at Van Buren, near Grandit and at Doniphan, while the Eleven Point River may be reached from Van Buren and Doniphan. The Eleven Point River, by the way, is said to be one of two Missouri streams in which rainbow trout may be caught.

PART OF HIGHWAY UP · LOFTY ARIZONA PEAKS WILL BE OPENED TODAY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., Aug. 14.

TOMORROW the new road up the lofty San Francisco peaks is to be opened for some 12 miles to a height of 11,300 feet. This road is 20 feet wide and has no grades worse than 8 per cent. It can be reached from the National Old Trails route from St. Louis to the Grand Canyon and Los Angeles. It is hoped to complete the road by late fall to a height of 12,000 feet. Then it will be possible to drive a car up the mountains to a point whence there is a view into six states, including nearly 200 extinct volcanic mountains and cones, the crater of the San Francisco Peaks and the Painted Desert. It will be one of the notable scenic highways of the world.

STEELVILLE ROAD GRAVELED

The entire distance of 8.4 miles from Cuba to Steelville, on Missouri route No. 19, is now graveled and in good condition, the State highway engineers report.

Bids will be received Aug. 25 at Jefferson City for grading to a width of 30 feet 4.4 miles of route No. 8 eastward from Steelville and for bridging a branch of Yadkin Creek and Whittenburg Creek on this route. No. 8 formerly was route No. 62. It runs from Potosi to Steelville, and is one of the most attractive drives scenically in this part of Missouri.

ROAD GRAVELED TO BEAUFORT

The State highway engineers report that the 11.7-mile stretch of U. S. route No. 50 (Missouri State No. 12) is now all graveled and in good condition from Union to Beaufort.

VARIED SCENERY ON MOTORING TRIP INTO BLACK HILLS

Custer Battlefield Highway Equal to Any Other in U. S. in Historic and Scenic Appeal.

BY ROBERT H. HALL,
Press Bureau, Automobile Club of Missouri.

No motor route in America offers more diversified scenery than does the Custer Battlefield highway to the Black Hills of South Dakota, the Devil's Tower, the Custer battlefield, where the Sioux Indians annihilated a detachment of Federal soldiers, and Glacier National Park. The scenery ranges from rolling prairie land to great caves, lofty hills, rugged canyons, snow-crested ranges and glaciers, and mountain girt lakes. It begins at Sioux City, Ia., and goes via Sioux Falls, Chamberlain, Rapid City, Gilette, Sheridan, Billings, Roundup, Lewistown, Belt and Choteau to Glacier.

Motorists from St. Louis can follow U. S. highway No. 40, via St. Charles and Columbia to Kansas City, then go north via St. Joseph, Omaha to Sioux City, a distance of 540 miles. From Sioux City the Custer Battlefield highway stretches for 1350 miles through Iowa, South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana to Glacier Park.

In the Black Hills Region.

The Black Hills, once one of the richest gold mining regions of the world, are the highest mountains east of the Rockies in this country. They cover 9000 square miles, are rugged and picturesque, and Harney Peak, the highest mountain in the range, reaches an altitude of 7216 feet above sea level. They contain numerous canyons, water falls and lakes, one of these latter, Sylvan Lake, lying at an altitude of 6500 feet. Many miles of all-weather roads wind through the Black Hills, in whose heart is one of the largest State parks, known as the South Dakota Game Preserve. The park teems with wild animals, some so wild that the average tourist never sees them, others so accustomed to human beings that they are nearly as tame as domestic animals.

Knowing the history of the country, one can hardly fail to be inspired by the thriving little cities that seem to rise magically from nowhere in these black hills.

Lead, for instance, with her buildings cropping out of a bare mountain fall, and Deadwood, larger and more modern, yet still steeped in tradition. Lead, the home of the Homestake Mine, one of the greatest gold producers on the continent, averaging something like $8,000,000 yearly in bullion: Deadwood, famous as a stage-coach station in the gold rush days of '76, once grown so coarse and unruly that the Vigilantes failed in their self ordained task of redeeming it.

Indian Reservations.

There are three Indian reservations in the State, all within a hundred mile radius of one another and in proximity to the Custer Highway. Just east of Pierre, and immediately north of Chamberlain, on the route, one finds the habitation of the Brule Indians, cousins of the Sioux and confederates of the latter trible in the memorable fight with Custer. Then, just north of this point and across the muddy Missouri River, is the joint reservation of the Crow and Creek tribes, allies of Custer and employed by the paleface chief as scouts to guide his expedition into the land of the Sioux.

Northwest of these reservations is the great reservation of the Cheyennes. This Indian habitation is most accessible by leaving the highway at Cottonwood and striking northward via State Highway No. 30 and 63.

One can spend several profitable days at the Cheyenne reservation. Not only is it one of the largest Indian reservations, but these Indians are the most intellectual of American plains Indians, except, perhaps, the Sioux, and are most colorful people. With few exceptions, the tribe has adhered to its old mode of living, its dress, its rituals, and its love for the open spaces.

There is of interest in South Dakota also a national park which should by all means be seen. This is Wind Cave National Park, near the southwestern corner of the State, midway between Hot Springs and Pringle. It is most accessible from the Custer Battlefield highway at Rapid City, over highway No. 61.

To Wind Cave.

Wind Cave, so named because of intermittent air currents of varying velocity passing in or out of the cave at irregular intervals, was discovered in 1881 by a deer hunter who came upon a small opening in a great limestone formation when hunting deer.

The cave consists of passageways and chambers of various sizes and can best be compared to a huge sponge. Its size and extent are not known.

The predominating interest in Wind Cave centers in the masses of calcite, aragonite and quartz, and in geodes, stalactites, stalagmites and a peculiar box-work formation. There are three principal divisions. The first, into which the entrance descends, is a long, narrow tunnel leading approximately southwest. This extends about 1900 feet to an elaborate chamber called G. A. R. Hall, which is about 330 feet below the surface. Many other chambers are passed in getting to the G. A. R. Hall. A few feet beyond this hall the trail ascends by stairways to the upper level of the cave, and thence through various other chambers to the Garden of Eden, which is the end of this route.

From a point called the Crossroads on this division, a branch trail leads abruptly northeast into another great chamber called the Assembly Room. The trail here joins the third division, leading upward into the Fairgrounds, a wide irregular chamber about 100 feet higher than adjoining portions of the cave. It is reached through a hole in the roof of what is called the Ticket Office. The Fairgrounds chamber covers acres and is 10 to 40 feet high.

A part of the park area, approximately 4000 acres, has been set aside as a national game preserve. Here bison, elk, deer and antelope are confined.

The highway enters Wyoming at Beulah, in the northwest part of the state, and passing Devil's Tower, meanders through Moorcroft, Spotted Horse and several other minor towns and shortly enters the thriving city of Sheridan. Then it makes a hasty exit in a northerly direction and enters Montana.

HIGH SPEED AUTO ROAD NETWORK IN EUROPE PROPOSED

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—What is the future, so far as speed is concerned—and that after all is a prime factor—of motor bus, motor truck and general automotive transportation between large cities where highway congestion is becoming more and more aggravated? The question may be answered, indirectly, by the following quotation from a consular report received from Berlin by the United States Department of Commerce:

"There is a movement in Germany for construction of speedways running directly from one large city to another and reserved for high speed cars. As these roads are to be used only by a limited class of drivers, they cannot be built with public money. This scheme is to embrace all Europe, and already a society has been incorporated in Italy to undertake this work.

"Deliberations already have taken place regarding the Hamburg-Milano route, which is planned to go via Hanover, Thuringia, South Germany and Switzerland. Later, lines to the Ruhr district, Berlin and Czecho-Slovakia are also planned. The main arteries of motor travel are being planned for the whole of Germany by the German Construction Union (Deutscher Sthassenbauverband). To establish about 5000

Notable Improvements In Packard Single Six

Club sedan model of the improved Packard six which is being shown by the Berry Motor Car Co.

PACKARD SIX MADE FAR MORE POWERFUL

Engine Now Develops 80 H. P. —Refinements in Bodies— Several New Features.

Superior performance, greater beauty, greater comfort and added protection of precision, are claimed by the Packard Motor Car Co. for the Packard six through improvements to the car which have just been announced. The new Packards are being shown by the Berry Motor Car Co.

In appearance a refinement in beauty is noticeable but, in keeping with Packard's policy, there is no drastic change to make it a new model. The feature most noticeable by the driver is the increase in power and the resulting unusual performance. The company says the improved six will out-perform in traffic and speed any Packard car ever built, except the Packard eight.

Engine More Powerful.

Because of the growing tendency of motor car owners to cover great distances and to spend more and more time in their cars, the utmost in comfort is demanded and Packard asserts some of the present changes incorporated into the six with this in mind have brought maximum ease of riding.

Lines of the enclosed bodies have been lowered somewhat and the roof line has been extended beyond the windshield to form a permanent visor. Head lamps are the same in appearance as those used on the Packard eight. Other changes in body lines, it is declared, have enhanced the beauty of the car, which before had been a winner in a number of European beauty contests. Many refinements are found in the interiors.

A combination of new motor head with a changed form of combustion chamber, new intake and exhaust manifolds, new spark and valve timing and redesigned carburetor, has resulted in an increase of nearly 40 per cent in power, giving the six now more than 80 actual brake horsepower. Because of the increase in power, the clutch has been made more rugged. A new form of rear axle gears, which are said to be as revolutionary as spiral bevel gears when first adopted years ago by Packard, has been adopted. Besides taking care of the greater power, the new gears are declared to make the rear axle perfectly noiseless.

New Alloy Pistons.

The same bore and stroke as used before, 3½x5 inches, are found in the motor, but the crankshaft has been made considerably larger. An improvement also has been made in the oil rectifier equipment with which, in Packard cars, impurities are distilled out of the motor oil, preserving its lubricating qualities and thus reducing wear. Cylinder walls and journals of the crankshaft now are honed by new machines which give them a glass-like surface.

After months of experiments the company found a way to make aluminum alloy pistons so that they can be fitted to within two thousandths of an inch and eliminate piston slap. They are made with Invar steel struts which, with a new system of slotting, control expansion and contraction.

Lessened weight of reciprocating parts increases the power of the motor and, with the larger crankshaft, makes for greater quietness.

Through a new type of combination oil filler and breather, together with an absolutely tight valve chamber cover, it is said the owner of a Packard car will be able to keep the motor as clean as a table top. As before, all except brightly finished parts of the motor have a heavy coating of enamel.

As a safety factor, effectiveness of the four-wheel braking system has been increased in direct proportion to the increased speed and performance of the car. They are positive in action with no possibility of variation in affectiveness.

Another safety factor is the front springs which have been so designed that should the long top leaf, to which the frame is fastened, break, a second long leaf would take up the weight of the car.

Such a wide variety of body types is offered that the choice of any owner is met. In addition, there is the practically unlimited opportunity offered through custom designed and custom built bodies by the best-known custom body builders in America. In the standard types of bodies there are several choices of paint combinations. Due to the vogue of smart open cars, a sport phaeton and a roadster are included in the body types with several color combinations.

VARIED SCENERY ON MOTORING TOUR INTO BLACK HILLS

the highway in Wyoming, though the Big Horn Range, just west of Sheridan, is captivating to the eye.

Why Devil's Tower, a basaltic obelisk rising 1280 feet from the banks of the Belle Fourche River should be found in a comparatively level country, has not been satisfactorily explained by geologists. One theory is that it was spewed from the bowels of the earth by volcanic action.

Eight hundred feet in diameter at its base, it tapers in a graceful convex to a diameter of 375 feet at the top, this portion being a tableland of about half an acre. All attempts to scale the walls of this Mato Teepee, as the Indians were wont to call it, have failed.

From Devil's Tower, the journey is steadily upward. One can see far to the west the snow-capped ranges of the Big-Horn Mountains.

The Big Horn Mountains are visible only a short distance into Montana. Even as one is exerting oneself to catch a last lingering glance of them his attention is diverted to another lofty range coming slowly into view to the east.

All the way from the Wyoming line, 50 miles north to Hardin, there is spread before the eyes the enchanting panorama of the Rosebud Mountains, so-called because of their rosy tint, which varies from a deep red hue to light pink.

Halfway between Wyola, the first Montana town on the highway, and Hardin, one passes the Custer Battlefield National Cemetery. Here, in a green, wild, happy country rise the yellowing shafts of stone which mark the burial places of the soldiers of Custer's army.

Then comes Billings, not so long ago a hardbitten cowtown, now one of the most prosperous of Montana cities. Here is the junction of the Custer Battlefield Highway and the Yellowstone Trail, which follows the meandering Yellowstone River to Yellowstone National Park.

From Billings the highway strikes north to Lewistown, thence in a norehwesterly course to Great Falls and northwest to Glacier National Park with its mirror lakes, its lofty peaks and glistening glaciers and primeval forestland.

Of the trails that traverse the west, none is so strange, nor thrilling, nor more beautiful, than the "Memory Lane" of the Sioux, the Custer Battlefield Highway.

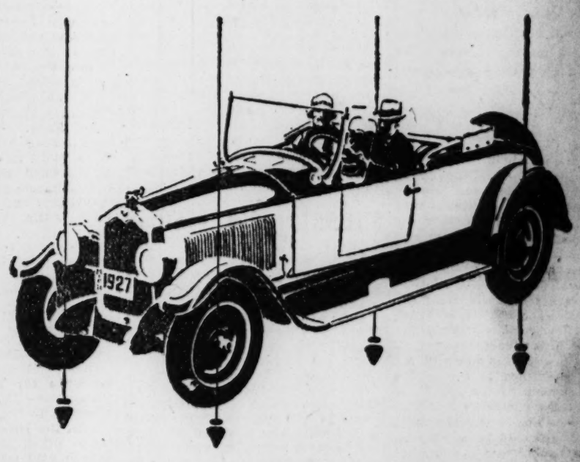
balanced wheels for smoother safer driving

The GREATEST BUICK EVER BUILT

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT BUICK WILL BUILD THEM



Wheel balance is the latest accomplishment of Buick engineers—and one of the greatest.

There is now no unbalanced weight anywhere in any of the four Buick wheels.

The result is amazing road-adhesiveness.

It is easy to understand how perfect balance would smooth out the rhythm of rapidly moving wheels.

The 1927 Buick is a masterpiece of engineering thoroughness. It is the Greatest Buick Ever Built! If you haven't driven it, arrange to do it today.

More Color and Better Lines for Hudson Sixes

NEW HUDSON MODELS APPEAR IN ST. LOUIS

Coach Now All-Steel — Gasoline Mileage Increased— Line More Colorful.

With a more colorful appearance and pleasing lines, a new line of Hudson "Super-Six" cars went on display today at the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., Hudson-Essex distributer, and at the showrooms of its associate dealers.

Under this arrangement, the standard line of Hudson cars consists of but three models, all inclosed. They are the coach, now of all-steel construction, the brougham and the sedan. It is understood that Hudson is still building open cars for the export market, and that thees may be had on order. But the short list of cars now announced is in line with the Hudson-Essex policy of specializing on inclosed cars to obtain highly economical manufacture through limiting efforts to models which have a wide popularity.

Gasoline Mileage Increased.

Prices have been advanced on the cars, but the Hudson organization is confident that the greatly improved appearance and underlying value will more than offset this, the first Hudson-Essex price increase in several seasons.

The Hudson motor has been slightly changed, which results in a better standard of gasoline consumption than formerly. These alterations are in the manifolding, and so improve distribution of fuel to the cylinders that pick-up and power are retained while gasoline mileage is increased.

The "Super-Six" motor has been under development for nearly 11 years now, and its patented crankshaft is said to remain the only shaft inherently balanced to prevent vibration. The general idea of anti-vibration devices, even the newer ones, is to dampen out the effects of vibration, rather than to prevent it before it starts, as is the Hudson idea.

Description of New Models.

The new all-steel coach is an elaboration of the coach idea. The body itself is said to be "as rigid as a steel building," finished in Nipponese blue with woolen whipcord upholstery. Body and wheel striping is flamingo carmine. Mounted on the super-six chassis, it gives unusual impression of stability and safety under all riding conditions.

The brougham has an all-aluminum body. The seating room has been increased by widening the rear seat three inches and providing 1½ inches greater headroom. The front seat is adjustable an inch forward or back of normal position, for the convenience of owners. Upholstery is in brown mohair. The equipment includes silk curtains, cowl lights, a dome light, trunk rack, automatic windshield cleaner, rear vision mirror, stop light, a motometer and radiator shutters. The upper panels are lacquered in Wellington gray, the lower in Kensington gray. Body and wheel striping is French gray.

The seven-passenger sedan also has an aluminum body upholstered in brown mohair. It follows traditional Hudson appearance in general line, but is improved through building the sun visor continuous with the roof. The color combination calls for the upper body panels in Alpenstock green and the lower in Panama green, while the body and wheel striping are in Virginia cream. Equipment includes silk curtains, arm rest slings, cowl lights, dome light, radiator shutters, motometer, automatic windshield cleaner, rear vision mirror and stop light.

Work Done by Race Car.

At the average speed of 100 miles an hour for 500 miles, the wheels of a racing car turn 336,000 times while the engine revolves 1,596,600 times with 6,336,400 explosions.

BUS SERVICE FOR PATRONS PLANNED BY 18TH ST. GARAGE

A novel bus service for its patrons is planned by the Eighteenth Street Garage, and is to be put into effect around Aug. 23. The company has bought Hurr eight sedans, each specially fitted to carry eight passengers and painted a distinctive cream color. Persons storing their cars in the garage will be taken in the special cars to their places of business and will be picked up in the afternoon and taken back to the garage at Pine and Eighteenth streets. It is planned to include this service in the $10 a month storage charge.

St. Louisan Wins Promotion.

W. E. Martens, a former St. Louis newspaper man who turned to the automobile business, has been appointed manager of the White Motor Co. branch office at Wilkes-Barre, Pa. He has been selling White trucks in New York and Connecticut.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS ON CHEVROLET CAR

Smoothness of Operation, New Duco Colors and Refinements Featured.

New features and mechanical refinements increasing ease of operation and driving comfort, and new Duco colors, characterize the "smoothest Chevrolet" just announced.

"A motor even more remarkable for smoothness of operation, and new colors that reflect the latest and most harmonious blending of smart lines and artistic hues, are revealed in this car. The new features are announced in the middle of the greatest sales year in Chevrolet history," says the factory statement.

Among new features are: A new cross member, strengthening the motor support at the transmission housing, thus still further reducing vibration and at the same time adding ruggedness to frame and chassis; a redesigned cam shaft with cams scientifically rounded to eliminate noise; gas and spark controls mounted with horn button on top of the steering column, affording not only easier control in driving, but also giving a more artistic appearance; an improved universal joint with trunnions operating in separate bushings to give longer wear and to afford easier access; a new battery and battery support, and a sturdied tie-rod between the front fenders which permits more rigid support of the headlights and better focusing.

A notable feature is the stop-light switch which has no wire attached to the brake pedal and no pull-back spring on the switch, thereby ending failure to function properly. The new switch is of monarcing lever type and is operated by the brake rod.

The new battery has a solid rubber case and handles built in as a part of the case, thus eliminating metal handles which are subject to corrosion. The new type carrier holds the battery in such a way as to eliminate strains on the battery case and consequent liability to break.

The sedan is finished in Algerian blue, the coach in Thebes gray; the landau in Alpine green, the coupe in Dundee gray and all open models in Biscay green.

All models have rear view mirror, and there is a handy pocket in the right front door of closed cars. The landau, sedan and coupe have disc wheels. Ballon tires are standard on closed models. The wood wheels on the coach, touring and roadster are now finished in Duco.

Chevrolet Frame Made Stronger

BUICK AGAIN WINS FIRST CHOICE OF AUTO SHOW SPACE

For the ninth consecutive year the Buick Motor Co. has won the most coveted honor in the automobile industry—first choice of display space at the national automobile shows for 1927 in New York and Chicago. The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce award goes annually to the member company which does the greatest volume of business in dollars and cents the fiscal year preceding the annual auto show. Buick first won this honor in 1919, and has held first place every year since. Every automobile company of size, except the Ford Motor Co., belongs to the N. A. C. C.

E. T. Strong, general sales manager of the Buick Motor Co., announces retail deliveries in the fiscal year 1926, ending July 31, of 240,424 cars, surpassing the best previous sales in any fiscal year by 69,375 cars.

This sales total places Buick far in the lead of all manufacturers selling cars priced at more than $1000, and exceeds the sales of all other makes but a few in the low-priced group.

Production in the same 12 month period was 240,512 cars.

Strong said in his statement that the sale of nearly a quarter of a million automobiles in the quality field indicated why Buick was able in its 1927 model to offer so many revolutionary improvements without an increase in price.

While the sale of 240,000 cars at a price averaging around $1500 has never been approached in a single year by any manufacturer, Buick is preparing for even larger sales. Production capacity of the plant has been increased to 1200 cars a day, so that, if necessary the company can produce more than 300,000 cars per year.

The railroads clear the way for express trains and in every phase of transportation save automotive, definite means are taken to speed up certain carriers. The motor bus or speedy truck, or the private automobile, is subject to every whim of the drivers who amble along at a more modest and at the same time a more irritating pace. The roadway is just so wide, and a bus capable of gliding along at 45 to 50 miles an hour without sacrifice of safety is not equipped with wings to enable it to hop over the picnic party enjoying the scenery at 15 miles an hour.

LANDAU SEDAN ADDED TO PONTIAC SIX LINE

First Addition Since This General Motors-Built Car Was Introduced.

A landau sedan listing at $895 has been added to the Pontiac line as a companion car to the two-door sedan and coupe models. This is the first addition to the line since the Pontiac was introduced. It is being shown by the Mississippi Valley Motor Co.

This model has a Fisher body finished in sedge green Duco with the upper structure and fenders contrasting in black. The rear upper quarter is trimmed in dull finish leather and landau bows set off the D-shaped quarter windows. Double beading similar to that on the other Pontiac models is employed, the lower molding extending from the radiator entirely around the body.

Upholstery is velour, harmonizing in color with the exterior finish. Shirred pockets are provided on the inside of the front doors, while the windows are fitted with quick acting regulators.

Standard equipment on this model includes rear roller shade, dome light, robes rail, cowl lights, rear view mirror, automatic windshield cleaner, nickeled-plated radiator shell with Indian head radiator emblem. Other features are Fisher "VV" one-piece windshield, sun visor with nickeled support bracket and nickeled headlight rims.

DODGE CAR DELIVERIES STILL BREAKING RECORDS

All previous records of retail deliveries by Dodge Brothers dealers in the United States have been eclipsed by figures for the last days of July. For the seven week days from the opening of business July 24 to July 31, 12,015 new motor cars and trucks were placed in the hands of owners. On one day, Saturday, July 31, deliveries totaled 3093, almost half of the number delivered in the whole of the best week last year.

For the period from June 24 to Aug. 1, 41,886 motor cars and trucks were delivered. Compared with 35,700 in the previous five weeks this year the gain is 6186 units or 17 per cent. Against deliveries of 23,245 in the five weeks ending Aug. 1, last year, the gain was 18,641 or 80 per cent.

For the first time in the history of Graham Brothers more than 1000 of their trucks and motor coaches have been delivered in a single week at retail by Dodge Brothers dealers in the United States and Canada. The record of 1041 in the week ended July 31 follows closely the record of 896 delivered during the week ended July 3 and is more than twice the figure for the best week last year. Compared with the corresponding week of 1925, when 347 were sold, the gain is 694 trucks or 200 per cent.

FORD HAS PRODUCED MORE THAN 14,000,000 ENGINES

Another million mark in Ford production was passed July 21 when motor No. 14,000,000 came off the assembly line at the Fordson plant of the Ford Motor Co. Some idea of the enormous production of Ford cars may be obtained when it is recalled that it was only a little more than two years ago, June 4, 1924, that the ten-millionth Ford was produced, an event which was celebrated by driving the car across the country from New York to San Francisco on the Lincoln Highway. In the 25½ months elapsing since that time Ford output increased 4,000,000.

The first model T Ford was turned out Oct. 1, 1908, and it was not until seven years later, Dec. 10, 1915, that the first million was reached.

FIRST PIERCE-ARROW CAR TO SELL UNDER $3000

The first Pierce-Arrow enclosed car ever sold under $3000 is announced today. It is the series 81 custom-built, two-door coach, which has been reduced in price from $3150 to $2995 at Buffalo. This car has the close coupled style of a coupe, with roominess for its five passengers not exceeded by many four-door sedans. The full aluminum body is mounted on a framework of northern white ash, all joints being laminated, which eliminates squeaks and rattles. The interior is finished in a rich, soft woolen. Velvet carpets pad the floors. Silk toggle grips, mahogany vanity and smoking cases, a carpet covered footrest—are features. The exterior is offered in six color options.

RICKENBACKER LOW-GEAR FEAT

A Rickenbacker brougham, privately owned, was sealed in low and radiator and oil cap also were sealed by police of Portland, Ore., thus preventing addition of water or oil. Then this Rickenbacker made the Mount Hood loop over the Harlow Pass route in 8 hours and 52 minutes. The car attained an altitude at Over Pass of 4675 feet above sea level. The average speed was slightly better than 19.53 miles an hour for the 173-mile circuit. The car had already run over 30,000 miles. Ralph Staehli, secretary of the Automobile Dealers' Association of Portland, went along as observer. He watched mechanics take off the cover plate on the rear end and certified that the gear ratio was standard.

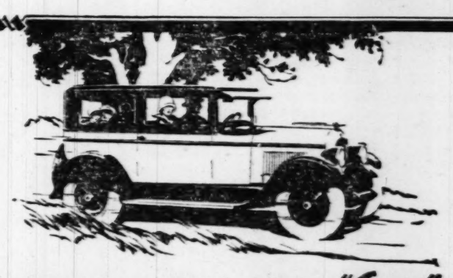
Standardized Quality



CHRYSLER "60"

The Finest Low Priced Six in the Industry

There is scarcely a motor car of importance today that does not reflect in either design or practice the influence of Walter P. Chrysler and his engineers.

This is because in the past three years the organization of which Mr. Chrysler is the head has pioneered more improvements in the automobile than had been brought forth in the preceding decade.

The result has been quality beyond comparison and now Mr. Chrysler further emphasizes this quality—makes it more than ever outstanding in all price classes—by his plan of Standardized Quality.

Mr. Chrysler is the first and only large scale manufacturer building four cars under one name and one management in one group of unified plants on a standardized quality basis.

This standardization of quality is the result of an extraordinarily complete coordination of engineering and manufacturing facilities and resources.

It brings Chrysler superiority in speed, power, beauty, comfort, roadability and long life within the reach of practically every purse.

It enables every motorist to buy in any of the four general price classifications, with complete assurance of receiving all the brilliancy and dependability of service for which Chrysler has established a reputation throughout the world.

Compare the lighter, lower-priced six Chrysler "60" with any car near it in price.

In it you have, unit for unit, the same Chrysler standardized quality comprehended in the Chrysler "70" and Imperial "80"—in features, in materials, in craftsmanship, in rigid inspection and test, in characteristics of dependability and long life.

Sixty miles, and more, per hour; unprecedented get-away; gas economy of 22 miles and more per gallon; Chrysler's striking beauty; astonishing riding ease and roadability; the safety of Chrysler four-wheel hydraulic brakes; oil-filter and air-cleaner; full pressure lubrication; seven-bearing crankshaft; impulse neutralizer; road levelizers front and rear; roomy, luxurious bodies.

There isn't a low-priced six on the market that will begin to give you as much for your money.

See it for yourself; drive it; put it to any test. That is all we ask. We know the new Chrysler "60" will sell itself to you—that you'll be satisfied with nothing else.

CHRYSLER PREDICTS LARGE SALE OF SMALL CAR HE PLANS

A tremendous undeveloped market exists in the small car field for an automobile that is larger, more roomy, much better riding and exceptionally durable, according to Walter P. Chrysler, president of the Chrysler Corp.

The person who prefers to drive a small car is entitled to every consideration that can be given him. It is possible to build the qualities of comfort, roominess, easy riding and long life into a small car. The possibilities of such a car are so tremendous that one can actually be built in great quantities at remarkably low cost, if the manufacturer has the capacity and organization to do it.

"Cars built to a single standard of higher quality, with modern science engineering, improved springs and generally improved riding comfort, are bound to enjoy a conspicuous success for their producer.

"There is a ready-made market of 100,000 cars the first year for the company which produces that type of car. We are going to get it. Unless we are far astray in our judgment of what the American public wants in the so-called small car field, it will appreciate such a car to the extent that it will make it an outstanding success from the first day it is given opportunity to ride in that type of car."

VACUUM GEAR SHIFT PASSES STRENUOUS TEST ON ROADS

A Chrysler "70" phaeton, equipped with a vacuum gear shift, made by the Vacuum Gear Shift Corporation, Larchmont, N. Y., recently completed a test drive from Boston to the automobile races at Atlantic City (N. J.) Speedway, and back to Larchmont, N. Y. Throughout the trip the right hand of the driver was manacled to the steering wheel, yet he was able to shift gears on the sharp, curving, steep hills on the Boston Post road and in the dense traffic in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, along the White Horse Pike to the Speedway and other cities along the route without removing his right hand from the wheel.

MARMON CAR PRAISED BY BRITISH AUTOMOTIVE CRITIC

"That big, fast car traveled as all cars should, and some day will. Its road adhesion at from 50 to 60 miles an hour was perfectly wonderful," Edgar N. Duffield, British motor critic, writes in "Auto," an English magazine. He was telling of his experience with a Marmon. The springs and frame, gravity-center location and steering, acting in concert, made it the 'safest' fast car I have ever driven.

"I knew at the time that whole trunks of its design were bound to be stolen. They were. I can identify several of them today."

SAYS NO PRICE CUT IS CONTEMPLATED ON STUTZ

The Benjamin Motor Co. Stutz distributers, has received a letter from Edgar S. Gorrell, vice president of the Stutz Motor Car Co., touching on the probability of a drop in the price of the new safety Stutz. The letter reads in part as follows: "Within the past 30 days dealers have told me that they have been asked whether Stutz expects to reduce its price. We are providing an automobile which should be listed at $4500, and are providing it at $2995. Furthermore, although we are efficient in buying and manufacturing, the cost of material and labor is greater in the Stutz than it is in any other high-grade car that I know of that sells for $4500 or less. We do not exclude every possibility of a price reduction. On the other hand, there there is every possibility of a price increase. If I were forced to bet on price, I would bet that if there be any price change at all it will be an upward change of no small size, and that it may come within the next 60 days."

BYRD'S AID TO BE ENGINEER ON TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIGHT

Lieut. George O. Noville, who was flight engineer for Lieut. Commander Richard E. Byrd on his North Pole flight and Commander Byrd's second officer, has been appointed to a similar position for the Fonck Trans-Atlantic flight. Lieut. Noville at the request of the manufacturers of the giant Sikorsky airplane, has been loaned to the expedition by the Vacuum Oil Co. for whom he is an engineer. It will be Noville's task to handle all preparations for lubrication and fueling of the plane. Lieut. Noville says, that the same oil that was used in Commander Byrd's plane, Mobiloil "B", will be used in the Sikorsky plane.

SAYS RAILWAYS LOSE LITTLE THROUGH BUS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LANSING, Mich., Aug. 14.—"That motor coaches did not knife greatly into the earnings of steam roads and interurban traction lines, is quite sure to be one of the findings as a result of the 13 current hearings by the Interstate Commerce Commission on highway transportation," says Carl Parker, manager of bus sales, Reo Motor Car Co.

"That the rise of the highway transportation business and the fall of rail passenger revenue and the increase in ownership of private motor cars are merely a coincidence, is the opinion held by those close to the highway transport situation.

"I doubt if it can be shown that duplication of passenger service by busses will account for as much as 10 per cent of loss of revenue by railroads.

"After the passenger business was once taken from the rails by the automobile, it was partially recovered by busses. But only a small percentage, almost invisible, was not lost directly to the bus.

"When the fact once becomes officially established, it is probable that steam and electric officials will find it convenient and consistent to be pro-rail without being quite so anti-bus, in the same way that the bus industry has always maintained a pro-bus attitude without finding it necessary to adopt an anti-rail policy.

"Some of the earlier pioneered bus lines have suffered this same competition of the privately owned motor car, and as automobiles increase in number there will be a great deal more of it.

"Competition today is measured by frequency and flexibility of service and the type of public carrier which survives is the one where frequency and comfort best compete with the personally owned automobile.

"I have talked with hundreds of bus buyers this season about the purchase of new equipment, and not one single operator has spoken of fighting the rail lines. On the other hand, virtually every operator sought equipment comfortable to the extreme, to induce the motorist to leave his own car at home and use the bus. Also he was seeking equipment priced low enough, quality considered, to enable him to provide enough busses and establish a frequency of service which when combined with comfort, reliability and safety, would hold his patronage, once the automobile owner had sampled the bus service.

"Busses have never been the competitor the railway men once judged them to be. Today busses offer the railway the only means of recouping the business lost to the automobile."

Carrying Film to Its Premiere

J. H. ANDERSON of the Studebaker Corporation, and L. L. Putnam of the Paramount Film Corporation, being greeted by Acting Mayor Neun at the city hall when they arrived in the Studebaker standard six sport roadster in which they are taking the film of Marshal Nielan's movie, "Diplomacy," to New York for its premiere Aug. 22. Henry Weber of the Weber Motor Car Co., is standing beside the car at the right. They said they left Hollywood July 13, three days behind schedule, but had made up the loss of time. They traveled north to Seattle, then over the Yellowstone Trail to Spokane, south to Pendleton, Ore., and over the Oregon Trail to Salt Lake City, then over the Lincoln Highway to Cheyenne, south to Denver and over the Victory Highway to St. Louis, visiting Studebaker dealers and Paramount picture exhibitors en route. They beat train time two hours from Seattle to Spokane, they said, averaged 26 miles an hour for 4423 miles to St. Louis, and ran in high gear all the way except for necessary stops.

AUBURN SALES SET RECORD

The Auburn Automobile Co. of Auburn, Ind., in the first six months of 1926 broke all its production records. Indications are that the last six months will be even better. "We have only the brightest outlook for the next six months' period," E. L. Cord, president, declared. A new Auburn 8 7-passenger sedan has the longest wheelbase of any American-built car.

AUTO CLUB MANAGER SENDS ROAD REPORT

Morse Finds Highway No. 40 Marked to Colorado—Warns of Detour in Kansas.

The first advices to St. Louis as to the progress of road marking in Kansas is contained in a letter from Matt F. Morse, general manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, now on a 7000-mile tour of the western half of the United States, to the Joint Touring Bureau of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the Automobile Club of Missouri. Morse states that the Federal highway through Kansas to the Colorado line is now entirely signed with U. S. No. 40 markers.

A peculiarity in the posting of these signs, which Morse comments upon, is the marking at Ja fork four miles west of Manhattan, Kan., of Federal No. 40 north and Federal No. 40 south. At this fork, No. 40 splits into a north and south division, joining again at Colby, Kan. Either of the highways leading from the Manhattan fork may be followed by the motorist.

Morse reports that a severe rainstorm for 100 miles east of Denver late last week resulted in muddy roads in certain sections of Eastern Colorado. Out of Salina, Kan. Morse reports, there is a 22-mile dirt detour where the hazard of becoming bogged is ever present.

Arriving in Denver, Morse called upon the A. A. A. club there and found "one of the finest tourist camps in the West in operation." Members of affiliated A. A. A. clubs have all the privileges at the camp.

Leaving Denver, Morse will strike northwest to Seattle and Portland, thence following the Pacific highway south to Los Angeles and returning to St. Louis over the southern route through Las Vegas and Trinidad.

Morse will obtain for the Joint Touring Bureau and for the Auto Club Tour Bureau most complete information on conditions on all roads he traverses during his trip. He will be gone several months.

SALES OF HUP EIGHTS IN 19 MONTHS TOTAL $50,000,000

Purchase by the public of $50,000,000 worth of Hupmobile eights in the first 19 months following that car's appearance on the market constitutes a record for cars in the fine-car field, C. D. Hastings, president and general manager of the Hupp Motor Car Co., declares. The car that brought the total to $50,000,000 was purchased Aug. 10.

"In 1925, more Hupmobile eights were bought than all other cars of its type together. This year the public is doubling its purchase of straight eight cars," Hastings said.

Shipments and retail sales of Hupmobiles in the first seven months of 1926 exceeded those in the entire year of 1924, and are within 6000 cars of the total in 1925. July marked the shipment of the 30,000th Hupp six and the 20,000th Hupp eight.

PAVING OF ROAD ALONG RIM OF GRAND CANYON HURRIED

Paving of the road along the rim of the Grand Canyon from El Tovar to Grand View is being pushed with the hope of having it asphalted before snow flies. This road follows the edge of the canyon and affords numerous gorgeous panoramas. The Forest Service plans to extend it to Desert View, where the Fred Harvey System has a chalet. The panoramas of the Painted Desert and the Grand Canyon and the canyon of the Little Colorado River are famous.

RECORD SIX MONTHS SALES OF PAIGE AND JEWETT CARS

Shipments of 27,015 Paige and Jewett cars the first six months of this year established a new high record for the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co., whose previous best record for six months was made in the first half of 1923, when 24,936 cars were shipped.

The increased shipments are a reflection of the recognition won by the new Paige models, the brougham and the cabriolet roadster.

TEN YEARS WITHOUT REPAIRS

Charles W. McLaughlin of Donora, Pa., reports that he bought a 1916 Chandler touring car in the fall of 1915 and has driven it 135,652 miles without ever having it in any garage for any repair work. This remarkable durability record came to light when he wrote to the factory for new head light reflectors. In his letter, McLaughlin remarked that while he had received excellent service from his car for 10 years, it had not as yet been necessary to spend a penny for repair work or adjustments.

FLIES TO FACTORY TO BUY CAR HE HAD HEARD ABOUT

Capt. O. H. Quinn, of the United States Air Service, dropped from the clouds on Marysville the other day. A flying from Langley Field, Va., to the home of the Wills Ste. Claire. Having heard about the engineering in the Wills Ste. Claire, he had decided to investigate. So he hopped into a plane and flew to see one made. Capt. Quinn toured the factory, tried a car on the road and followed his ride with an order for a roadster, which he drove back to Washington, while the plane was flown back by the officer who had accompanied him.

OLDEST FRANKLIN STILL IN ACTIVE SERVICE IS 1904 CAR

The oldest Franklin in the hands of an owner is a 1904 roadster, belonging to Evan J. Roberts, Flushing, N. Y. Records and photographs show that Roberts' car was purchased in 1904 by Dr. William S. Brown of Flushing, who sold it to Roberts in 1905, since which it has been licensed every year and is still in active service.

A still older Franklin, but not in the hands of a private owner, is a 1903 roadster, in the possession of Cowles Tolman, Franklin dealer at New Haven, Conn.

1 in every 4

During the first six months of 1926 one in every four buyers of new automobiles bought a General Motors car. During 1925 the proportion was about one in five. During 1924 it was about one in six.

THIS steady addition of new friends for the products of General Motors has a double significance.

1. It is proof that the grouping of strong companies in one big family is economically sound. Large scale operations do make possible important economies in research, in purchasing, in manufacture, in financing, and in sales; and these economies do benefit the buyer, in greater value and lower costs. The public has recognized this principle and profited by it.

2. Increased public patronage involves increased obligation. General Motors is responsible for the welfare of its 152,000 employees and their families, its 20,000 dealers throughout the world, and—indirectly—for the 6,000 companies which furnish it with supplies and materials—at least a million men, women and children to whom its public good is a personal concern.

As the volume of production increases there must be a corresponding increase in the values offered. The new series of cars just presented does embody larger values; it is a direct reflection of the fact that more than 1,075,000 General Motors cars were sold at retail during the year just closed. The added quality has been built in where it counts most in comfort and safety and long life. With great pride we invite you to inspect these new General Motors cars.

MAKES SUGAR FROM SAWDUST

Chemist Reports 65 Pounds From 100 Pounds of Dry Material.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Sawdust sugar may soon be sweetening Britain's afternoon tea.

Dr. W. R. Ormandy told the Congress of Chemists in London that a process of winning sugar from sawdust has now been developed to a stage where he believes it has commercial possibilities. In one experiment 65 pounds of sugar was obtained from 100 pounds of dry sawdust. At present, 25 per cent of the timber cut in the world is wasted in sawdust, Dr. Ormandy said.

THINGS THAT IMPRESS MOST AMERICANS SEEING ENGLAND

Motor Cars Lack Bumpers, Trains Start Smoothly, Policemen Answer Queries.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Points in English life which have especially impressed Americans visiting England for the first time this summer, says The Landmark, the monthly magazine of the English-Speaking Union, are:

The absence of spring bumpers on motor cars, back as well as front, which are general in America.

The number of beggars in the streets of London.

The wearing of buttonholes by Englishmen.

The little gardens attached to nearly all London houses.

The unhurried quietness of an English crowd, even those traveling in the underground in the rush hours.

The deep green of the trees.

The "please" and "thank you" of the bus conductors.

The all-prevailing knowledge of the London policeman.

WOMAN NOVELIST TAKES UP FLYING TO GET INSPIRATON

Joan Sutherland Goes Sinclair Lewis One Better; He works Best on Ocean Liner.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Joan Sutherland, the novelist, has engaged a private air lane and is making flights of several thousand feet in the air to find a suitable atmosphere of inspiration for her work.

This goes Sinclair Lewis one better. He insists he can work best on an ocean liner.

Miss Clemence Dane finds it impossible to work on her country estate in Devon because the cackling of the chickens disturbs her. She has to flee to her London home in Holland Park to do serious literary work.

Compton Mackenzie and several other British novelists seek the seclusion of the Channel Islands when they want to write.

Miss Sheila Kaye Smith says she finds a hotel room an excellent place for work as the impersonal character of the surroundings enables her to concentrate.

FORCED TO STUDY MUSSOLINI

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

ROME, July 20.—Mussolini's biography, which is to be part of the course of study in Italian schools, has been prepared and is now available in Rome book stores. The first paragraph translates as follows: "Remember, little Italian boys and girls, that if today you can pray and sing hymns in church, if you are taught faith and courage, if your native country is respected and adored the world over, and you can be proud of being Italians; if peace, serenity and well-being are found in your homes, if rich harvests cover the fields, if people are busy in thriving factories, if you remember it is a blessing to be able to work, if you know that your life is safe and your happiness is made sure—then always remember, little Italian boys and girls, that all of this you owe to fascism and Mussolini."

Study of the biography is henceforth to be compulsory. It is distributed free.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Royal families grow large in West Africa. Princess Marie Louise, cousin of King George, visited one King in Africa who was the father of 180 children, but only 80 of them were living.

This venerable potentate was the King of Yendi, and the Princess' visit to His Highness is described in a volume of her letters which has just been published. The Princess traveled 2500 miles in West Africa last year, chiefly by horse and motor car.

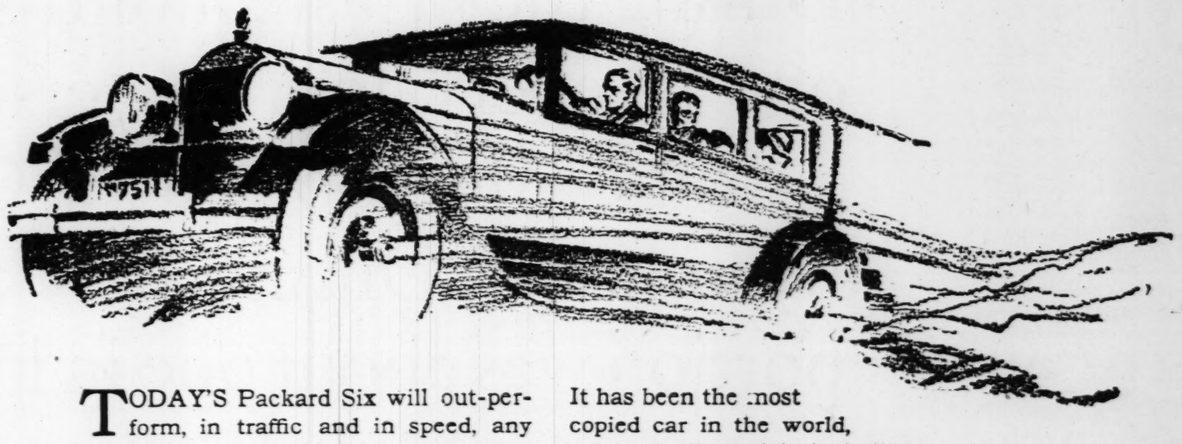
INTRODUCING

The Improved Packard Six



TODAY'S Packard Six will out-perform, in traffic and in speed, any Packard car ever built with one exception.

The exception is today's Packard Eight—The Boss of the Road.

The Packard Six has long excelled in beauty, in comfort and in distinction. In simplicity and in economy. Greater than ever in all of these, it now also excels in performance.

Those who drive the improved Packard Six will let others pass as a matter of courtesy, never of necessity.

In car beauty contest or contest on the open road it will more than hold its own against any Six, or any Eight, excepting cars of racing type.

Most useful and most appreciated of all, however, will be the car's agility and ease of control in crowded traffic.

For more than six years the Packard Six has been an inspiration to engineers.

It has been the most copied car in the world, mechanically and in body lines.

99 PER CENT MADE BY SCOUT TROOP 33 IN CAMPING

Grades of 98 Each Made By Troops 42 and 14 at Lions' Den Last Week.

Troop 33 was the high troop in winning points for good camping at the Lions' Den last week, obtaining a grade of 99 per cent. Troop 42 and Troop 14, Webster Groves, tied for second with 98 each, and Troops 15 and 163 followed with 97. Each of these troops put on a well-planned camp program. Troops 33, 38, 185 and 189 also were in camp last week.

A baseball diamond has been laid out at the Lions' Den and several games have been played between the various troops. Other intertroop and interpatrol games proving popular are "Capture the Flag" and "Hare and Hounds," the deep woods affording good places for stalking and trailing.

SCOUT TROOPS EXPAND IN SUMMER MONTHS

Organization, Developed in Face of Parental Antagonism, Cited as Example.

That a Boy Scout troop not only does not have to suspend business during the summer months, but may greatly increase its membership and activities, is proved by Troop 24 of the Tenth and Rutger Street Mission, a branch of the Sidney Street Presbyterian Church. The scoutmaster of the troop, F. Eugene Richter, organized the troop last February with only two boys, but through his own and his patrol leader's efforts the membership has now reached 32, a goodly proportion of whom are first and second class scouts. And the work was hampered by an adverse attitude of parents, mostly foreigners, violently opposed to the Boy Scout movement because of the fear that it was military and, therefore, anti-union.

To start overcoming this objection was the first task necessary. In order to do this, Richter, who became scoutmaster at the request of the parent church, of which he is a member, visited the parents of every scout and prospective scout of his troop, explaining to them exactly what the organization stood for. By this method he has obtained not only their approval but their active support.

Two Factors of Success.

The success of the troop he attributes to two factors: summer hikes and, more important, patrol spirit. At least two hikes, either day or overnight, are taken each month, Cliff Cave being the favorite camping place. The hikes are of two kinds, and are alternated. One each month is devoted exclusively to test-passing, especially stressing outdoor tests. The other is given over to nature study, the boys making collections of leaves, wood and rocks, and points being given for collections made. Lizards and other reptiles are also collected if the scout satisfies the scoutmaster that he is equipped to keep them. No reptile, animal or bird may be killed. Points are also given for finding and identifying any new tree, rock or living creature.

The points are counted for the boys' patrol in an interpatrol contest, which has been found to be one of the best means of stimulating interest and maintaining patrol spirit. These contests run about four months each, and prizes are awarded to the winning group at the conclusion. Points are also given for attendance on time, inspection, bringing a new member, for passing tests and for securing merit badges. Five points are deducted for a boy not passing inspection, with the result that the scouts are the best-appearing boys in the neighborhood.

Patrol Hikes Encouraged.

Patrol hikes are encouraged, as they lead to self-reliance and to recognized responsibility on the part of the patrol leader. The troop has no assistant scoutmaster, his place being supplied by the patrol leaders, to whom Richter gives most of the credit for the progress of the troop. These boys, Clarence McFarland of the Crows, John Heckel of the Wolves, Paul Dunlavy of the Eagles and Paul Tucker of the Panthers, direct most of the details of the organization, pass tests and lead their groups in the demonstrations which are staged at each meeting. Demonstrations are used exclusively at Troop 24, the scoutmaster believing them to be of far more value than lectures. The idea of teamwork is further strengthened by interpatrol games and stunts given at meetings and on hikes.

Parents' nights are also held, the last one being July 23, to celebrate the winning of the interpatrol contest by the Crow patrol. At this a model meeting was first held, followed by potato-peeling and sock-darning contests and demonstrations of first aid and signaling, a contest in feeding sick people and stunts. These included the troubles of an old Ford owner by the Crows and "Hi Diddle Diddle" by the Eagles and Panthers. The Wolves gave a lurid melodrama of a Princess and her caveman lover, the action centering around a red-headed scout who took the part of a rosebush.

Camp Irondale Notes

Despite the fact that the Fifth section of Camp Irondale was the "good time" section, with many special programs interfering with the regular camp work, Art Werder's Wolves, winners of the section intertroop contest, established a new record for points won, obtain an average of 45.7 a boy. The Bears' last section had broken the previous record with 40.5 points a boy. Cabin Number 11, under John O'Laughlin, obtained the highest total for one cabin.

Landis Devine, an Owl, came to camp not even a tenderfoot, but has passed his tenderfoot tests and earned awards in all five crafts. He had a sufficient number of points to qualify as an Honor Camper, but did not pass the Nature Trail, a necessary requirement.

Albert Davis and Carl Irwin both became first class scouts during their stay at camp last section.

Bill Forsyth became a first class scout and then passed the swimming merit badge, scoring 56 points, the highest total made by a scout in camp this season.

Clarence Rex earned five merit badges for gardening, carpentry, personal health, public health and swimming. He also was the first scout to meet the requirements of the Honor Camper award, and was voted to be the first to wear the camp insignia.

John O'Laughlin received merit badges in carpentry, public health, and personal health. George Heligman obtained the swimming badge and became a star scout.

GIRL SCOUTS TO END FIRST WEEK AT CAMP

New Section to Occupy Tents at Jefferson Barracks Tomorrow.

The first week of the Girl Scout camp at Jefferson Barracks comes to a close today, the 70 scouts attending breaking camp this afternoon, to make way for the next section beginning tomorrow. The girls have spent the week on a camp site, lent to them by the Commander, near the Red Cross Building, under the leadership of Miss Eleanor Piper, the local director. The time has been spent in learning and practicing scout activities, and in recreation.

The camp is on the top of a hill, with the Mississippi at its foot. The tents are arranged along "Company Street," the Pioneers being next to the entrance, followed by the Nature Unit and the Woodcraftsmen. Each tent, except that occupied by the officers, has room for seven girls, there being only two in the officers' tent. A large tent, lighted by candles, at the foot of the hill, serves as a dining place.

The units are further subdivided into patrols, those of the Nature Unit being named after birds and animals, and the others choosing appropriate names. Contests are held daily between the patrols of the units, and special privileges, such as the lighting of the council fire, are given to the winners. A tent inspection is held every day, counting as a contest.

Hold Daily Contests.

The use of a swimming pool has been given the campers by the Barracks officials, and swimming is done every day. The girls are divided into three classes of swimmers, distinguished by their caps. Blue caps are deep water swimmers, green caps can swim the width of the pool, and tan caps signify that the wearer is just learning to swim.

One of the features of the last section was a tour of the historical points of the barracks, under the direction of Col. Polls, one of the officers.

Of the five girls of Troop 17, who are planning to attend the last section of the Girl Scout camp at Jefferson Barracks, beginning Aug. 30, two, Dora Missler and Frances Wemer, are earning their way by helping take charge of the local Girl Scout office while the regular officers are in camp. They and Elsie Gollub and Betty Wolfmann, two of the other three, intend to pass their second-class tests at camp. The fifth camper, Betty Gollub, is already a second-class test scout.

Visiting in England.

Miss Margaret Shepley, the captain of the troop, and the only "Brownie," or Junior Girl Scout captain in St. Louis, is in England, visiting Girl Guide and Brownie troops, and studying their methods. According to a letter received by one of the troop, she recently attended a Girl Guide festival.

Grace Richardson's owl patrol took charge of the last meeting of Troop 2, Webster Groves, last Monday, staging games and contests. Patrol Leader Dorothy Ferguson of the Beavers won a string-chewing contest, receiving a novelty cap as a prize. Refreshments were afterwards served.

Five girls of the troop are planning to attend the next section of the Girl Scout camp at Jefferson Barracks, beginning tomorrow. They are Lorraine ePters, Ruth Powell, Harriet Wolf, Betty Dunn and Marjorie Roseborough.

Melva Russler of Troop 23 is the girl in charge of the local Girl Scout office in the absence of the regular officials. She is being assisted by two girls from Troop 17.

5000 INDIANS OF 50 TRIBES TO ATTEND KANSAS POWWOW

By the Associated Press.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Aug. 14.—Once again the monotonous roll of Indian drums, the war cries of Indian braves and the aroma of simmering buffalo meat will float on the breeze across the Kansas prairie.

In October, 5000 Indians, representing more than 50 tribes, will gather in Lawrence for the four-day homecoming and dedication program of the Haskell Indian Institute.

A modern Indian village will be set up on the Haskell reservation and the four days will be crowded with features, including a world's championship war dancing contest, a buffalo barbecue and a gigantic parade, which will culminate in an intersectional football game, Oct. 30, between Haskell and Bucknell University of Lewisburg, Pa.

"In connection with the celebration features attendant to the large gathering, the attention of mature Indians will be called to the opportunities offered their children through education," said Clyde M. Blair, superintendent of the institute.

"The older Indians are losing their antagonistic feeling toward education and are anxious for their young people to attend college if possible."

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—An oil company has made a big hit with motorists who complain of "road hogging" truck drivers by hanging the following sign on the back of its motor trucks: "Our drivers have been instructed to pull over to the side to allow passenger cars to pass. Please blow your horn." The automobile club has publicly thanked the oil company.

DISTRICT ACTIVITIES OF SCOUT TROOPS

NORTH DISTRICT.

Charles Kohner and Charles Kern of Troop 207 passed their cycling merit badge last Sunday, riding to Alton, Ill., and back for the final test. Seventeen members of this troop went on an overnight hike to the Lions' Den the week-end before. The troop has discontinued its regular meetings for August, but will resume in September, at which time a supper will be held for the purpose of raising money for the troop treasury. Four of the scouts —Charles Kohner, Russell and Philip Wiegand and Herman Graffe —have signed up for the next section of Camp Irondale. Scoutmaster Weege is also planning to attend.

Twenty-eight scouts of Troop 122, with their scoutmaster, A. Frank, Assistant Scoutmaster George Charlewood and Troop Committeemen M. Biby and R. E. Porschen, went on an overnight hike to the game preserve of Frank L. Dittmeier near Gilmore, Mo., 45 miles from St. Louis, last week-end.

The scouts arrived at camp at 9 o'clock and immediately pitched the tents and built campfires. Assistant Scoutmaster Charlwood and Committeeman Biby were cooks for the hike. During the morning four of the boys got lost in the woods, being found only after a search lasting until 4 o'clock. When found by Committeeman Porschen at Peruque, 12 miles from camp, they were sitting under an apple tree eating sardines and crackers.

The afternoon at camp was devoted to test passing and swimming instruction, Paul Mayfield, John Hanna, John Boland and R. Backus passing swimming and J. Overman and R. Porschen passing tracking. Stunts were held around the campfire at night and wrestling and boxing matches staged. After camp songs and yells, taps was sounded at 9 o'clock.

After 5 o'clock breakfast the troop attended mass at Dardenne, Mo., about six miles from camp, Father Strieve delaying the service until the troop arrived. He also asked the troop to furnish the mass servers, and in the afternoon paid a visit to the camp. About 25 visitors from St. Louis also arrived in the afternoon. Dittmeier then treated the campers to ice cream and cake, and issued a standing invitation for them to visit Camp Gilmore whenever they choose. Camp was broken at 6 o'clock.

South District.

Fifteen scouts and two officers of Troop 15 of the St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran Church, went to the Lions' Den reservation for a day of fun and test-passing last Tuesday morning, arriving at camp about 10 o'clock. The morning was spent in test-passing and instruction, while the afternoon was turned over to games and swimming. The boys also helped Camp Director Shippey pile some lumber before going swimming. They started for home on the 8 o'clock bus.

Thursday was red-letter day for eight members of the troop, the boys receiving medals for the merit contest which closed a week ago. The scouts receiving the "[illegible] cent duty" pins are Norman [illegible]fler, Arnol Fischer, Emil [illegible] Edward Traber, Milford [illegible] Edward Cox, Frederich [illegible] Kermit Winters. The Weather Bureau is seconding the motion of Capt. Germain of the British ship, Reginolite, regarding the exchange by radio of weather information in the Pacific, particularly in the area off Southern Californio and Mexico, where practically no radio weather bulletins are exchanged by ships as is done in the West Indies region. Until land stations in the southwest corner of North America are established, it is believed that ships might take up the duty of broadcasting storm warnings to the mariners in that neighborhood.

BIG FARM PROGRAM IS NOW ASSURED

Many College and Commercial Stations Will Broadcast for Rural Listeners This Winter.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Broadcasting facilities representing millions of dollars of investment, have been placed at the disposal of the Department of Agriculture and the co-operating agricultural colleges for broadcasting to farmers interesting, concise and pertinent information as fast as it is available, according to Sam Pickard, chief of the radio service, Department of Agriculture, who recently returned from a 10,000-mile official automobile trip covering the eastern half of the country.

During this time he conferred with college authorities, directors of commercial radio station, and farmers. Without exception, both the small and large commercial stations, as well as the college broadcasters, in the East, South, and Middle West, expressed themselves as anxious and grateful for the opportunity to co-operate to the fullest extent in disseminating farm information.

Pickard reports that the agricultural college officials were alert to the possibilities of radio as a vehicle for effective extension work, and that they feel the trend in programs should be directed away from the academis lecture toward the dramatization of facts. They recognize that competition on the dials now makes it necessary to present the type of personality and program material which will hold the listener's attention.

The elaborate farm program in preparation by the Department of Agriculture will be syndicated to a group of approximately 100 broadcasting stations throughout the United States this fall. In many instances the department's material wil be sent to agricultural colleges for adaptation to the local conditions before being released to the commercial radio stations for broadcasting. In States where college talent was not available for this purpose other satisfactory arrangements were made.

The chief of the radio service believes that every college with a station and a good wave length has a million-dollar franchise. He laments the fact that many institutions are putting far less money, thought and talent into their college stations than they merit. He points out that in this new endeavor the college is in competition with broadcasters spending large sums of money for talent, and that if the agricultural agencies expect to compete successfully for their share of the millions of listeners, they dare not bore the radio audience with mediocre programs.

Shortly after his return to Washington, Pickard left for Atlanta, Ga., to assist in the dedication of WSB, the powerful station of the Atlanta Journal, to the service of the southeastern farmers, on the occasion of the inauguration of the department's radio programs and market news service.

RADIO IN THE SCHOOL

Radio is rapidly taking its place in the equipment of public schools and even entering the curriculum itself. All public schools in Atlanta, Ga., are being equipped with receivers suitable for use in instructing and entertaining the scholars. Local broadcasters plan to put on special programs for school children.

From Connecticut, it is reported that practically all rural school houses are to be furnished with radio receiving sets, while broadcasters in that neighborhood are being urged to transmit suitable programs for the school boys and girls.

Radiograms.

Radio is to be used for the transmission of orders for movements of trains in the yards of the St. Paul Union Depot in St. Paul, Minn.

Radio listeners throughout the United States number around 20,000,000, who spend in the course of a year something like $350,000,000 for receiving sets and equipment.

Radio is under martial control in Brazil. Neither transmitting nor receiving sets may be operated without a Government license. The obtaining of such a license is a matter of red tape, long-winded manipulation and politics. Hence the Brazilian fan, rather than go through all this formula, installs a set in secret and takes a chance.

The United States Navy radio system is one of the most comprehensive in the world. The Navy radio net consists of 135 land stations, more than 400 ship stations, and installation and equipment is estimated to be $25,000,000. These stations transmit 900,000,000 words anunally. Along the coast of the United States and on island possessions there are 40 high-power transmitting stations, which are capable of flashing messages from 800 to 6000 miles.

Charging Battery at Home.

When using a battery charger at home never allow the specific gravity of the electrolyte to drop below 1200, as shown on a standard battery hydrometer. The practice of allowing it to drop below 1150 will soon ruin a battery.

SUPERVISOR PREDICTS GOOD RADIO SEASON

Improvement in Transmission, Higher Power and Better Receiving Sets Are Factors.

Prospects for a good radio season this year, are forecast by Chief Radio Supervisor W. D. Terrell, of the Department of Commerce. There is but one "if" in his prophecy; that is "if the Government has the same control of broadcasters that it had last winter." In other words, Terrell believes that natural conditions will be improved, but he is willing to guess just how far some of the ambitious broadcasters will go in their efforts to improve their own transmission while there is literally no Government supervision. He gives most stations credit for seeking to perfect both transmission and programs, but as some of them appear to be going about it unscientifically, by a hit-or-miss system of selecting transmitting channels, regardless of the number of proximity of other stations on the same wave length, he won't predict whether conditions will be improved or made worse.

Manufacturers, he believes, are also making strenuous efforts to improve both trahsmitting and receiving apparatus, which should help under normal conditions. On the other hand, he seems optimistic that not many new broadcasters will venture into this field before Congress meets, and that while a number of established stations are experimenting with new channels, some have returned to their old wave lengths and others are staying put fearing they cannot better their positions without incurring the wrath of the fans.

There remains almost a month before the regular radio season opens early in September, when static begins to tire and reception is scheduled to improve, during which time, the broadcasting channels may cease to skip about and settle down to hard work for the season which continues normal until the end of April.

BROADCAST CHANGES

During the past week the Department of Commerce licensed three new broadcasting stations in Chicago, New Orleans and Joplin, and listed eight changes in normal wave lengths.

One of the most interesting changes was the jumping of station KTNT, owned by Norman Baker, to a higher wave length, and the reported increase of power to 1000 watts. It will be recalled that Baker of Muscatine, Ia., has long been the champion of the smaller, or so-called Class A stations. Now he has apparently decided to join the more elite B class, although no distinction is now made, and power is not limited by the radio officials of the Government. Operating on 333.1 meters, KTNT may find interference with WBZ and KQW, since it is about midway betwen these stations.

WJZ, the 50 KW-station of the Radio Corporation, has officially changed its location from New York to Bound Brook, N. J.

NEW JAPANESE STATION

The new Government radio station at Garambi, Japan, is now exchanging messages with Hong Kong, South China; the Philippines and South Sea stations, according to advices from Consul Vault at Taiwan. Although there is as yet no local broadcaster on Taiwan, three are authorized for erection at other places in Japan. Broadcast reception from Tokio, Osaka, Nagoya, Vladivostok, Darien, Shanghai, Hong Kong and other points is had with good receivers on Taiwan.

Use Back of Knife.

In cleaning copper wire from which the insulation has been stripped, scrape with the back of a knife blade, not with the sharp cutting edge. If this is done there will be a saving of a good edge and at the same time making a better job of the cleaning, for the dull back edge has less tendency to pare the soft copper wire than the keen one has.

Safety in Soldered Joints.

Because connections have a bad habit of working loose, every effort should be made to keep them tight, and, in many cases, they should be soldered in insure staying tight. A bad connection either means a noisy set or weak signals.

See that none of the turns of either of the coils have become smashed together or short-circuited in any way. By substantial packing this condition is guarded against as far as possible.

FADA DEALERS MEET

Beck & Corbitt, exclusive distributors of Fada radios and speakers, had their annual meeting of local and out-of-town dealers at the Coronado Hotel last Tuesday. George Niekamp, vice president and sales manager of Beck & Corbitt, was chairman of the meeting. He called the meeting to order, welcoming all dealers and talking on Beck & Corbitt's 75 years in business in St. Louis. Roy Wenzlick of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch merchandise and research department spoke on "What Advertising Can Do," and on general business conditions and outlook for the fall. L. S. Chatham, general manager of the F. A. D. Andrea Inc., gave an interesting talk on the history of Fada company, also explaining the technical side of radio engineering. E. P. Bergere, F. A. D. Andrea representative, demonstrated the new model Fada sets to dealers. Luncheon was served.

To Overcome Static in Summer.

Static is practically eliminated in receiver using one of two stages of radio amplification by running an aerial in the cellar and suspended from the joists of insulators. Burying a wire in a trench a foot under ground will also reduce static. Either an insulated or bare wire may be used, but the insulated wire will, of course, be more efficient. The buried wire is perhaps the better of these two methods because in many cases the joists of the first floor are above ground level and are still in the static field. In either case, the aerial need not be over 25 feet long, because a small pick-up is desired, and long aerials, with correspondingly large pick-ups, will be sure to gather considerable static charges.

For the Notebook.

Adding new electrolyte does not charge a storage battery.

Copper is most commonly employed in the winding of inductance coils.

Because a building absorbs energy, do not run a lead-in from the front of the house to the rear.

The efficiency of a storage battery is measured by the ratio of an output to the input, generally in ampere hours.

Batteries will last much longer when used intermittently for short periods of time, rather than when used continuously for long periods.

Directional Property of "Loop."

A loop antenna is supposed to intercept maximum signal stength when it is pointed toward the transmitter, but this directional property is affected by the surroundings.

Guy Wires Need Good Anchorage.

Never anchor the guy wires of an aerial to anything that is at all unstable, such as chimneys which have loose bricks, or to rain spots. The guy wires should be No. 14 iron wire, or heavier.

CHINA TAXES LISTENERS

Mukden, China, is to have a $30,000 broadcasting station, Consul Ward advises the Department of Commerce. Users of receiving sets there, he says, will be taxed from 25 cents to 50 cents a month, dependent on the type. The new station is expected to create a demand for receivers. Previously the use of these modern entertainers was prohibited in South Manchuria, except in the local railway zone, but now the ban is lifted.

Radiator as "Ground" Connection.

When it is found that a cold water pipe is not available to connect the ground wire of the receiver, use the screw holding the valve handle of the hot water radiator near the set. The wire may be fastened by loosening the screw, winding the wire around several times and then tightening it to normal position.

Much smaller parking space needed—the Whippet will park at a 14-foot curb

It turns in a 34-foot circle—that's less than the width of a city street

Steering mechanism has been especially designed for quick, easy parking

At last—the answer to America's critical traffic problems

This New Car Offers:

30 miles on a gallon of gasoline—55 miles an hour—5 to 30 miles in 13 seconds

4-wheel brakes—stops in 51 feet from 40 miles an hour

Turns in 34-foot circle—easiest car in America to park

5 feet 8 inches high—lower gravity center—greater safety

European-type body—more room than any light car

TODAY—America has a revolutionary new-type, high-speed light car—designed and built to meet modern traffic conditions.

A car engineered specifically for parking at jammed curbs—for lightning get-away at congested traffic crossings—for instant stopping in pedestrian-crowded city streets.

This new-type car is a challenge to all former engineering practice. It casts aside every old tradition. And marks the most important light-car engineering improvement in America during the last 16 years.

This new car has a low European-type body. With height and length in true symmetrical proportion.

It is 5 feet 8 inches high . . . not as tall as the average man. Yet it provides more room and comfort than you've ever found in any automobile of this class before.

It has a high-torque, 31-horsepower motor of small bore and long stroke—the same engineering principles used in the fastest racing cars of America and Europe.

Its center of gravity is extremely low, with ample road clearance . . . thus giving a sense of security you have never found in any light car before.

Two engineering ideals combined in the new-type car

It is a complete new car . . . designed and built as a unit . . . not an old-fashioned reconstructed chassis.

For over three years, Willys-Overland engineers in Europe and America have been developing it. Over 360,000 miles of road tests proved the practical advantages of this car before its release for production.

Here's a car that will do 55 miles an hour in the hands of the average owner . . . with all the reserve power that this implies.

You can drive this car as fast as you like with the utmost ease of control . . . for no light car ever hugged the road like this before.

In traffic it gets away with lightning pickup . . . stop-watch tests show that it accelerates up to 40 miles an hour—18% faster than other light four-cylinder cars.

The Overland Whippet will climb the gruelling grades of the Cove Mountains, of Pennsylvania, in high.

In all your life you've never driven any car like this before. Its wonderful activity . . . its flashing bursts of speed . . . and quick acceleration . . . have never been available in any car of this type.

Smart European-type body design

The distinctive body lines of the Overland Whippet frankly resemble the smartest automobiles of America and Continental Europe. Stand in front of this car and you can imagine yourself on the Boulevards of France.

Low-swung . . . rakish . . . graceful as a whippet . . . that's the only way to describe it.

Complete symmetry of design has been achieved with compact external dimensions.

Measured tests show that the Whippet will stop in 51 feet from a speed of 40 miles an hour

Note the long, low, graceful European-type body lines of the Overland Whippet Sedan

Due to its unique body and dash construction there is actually more leg room than in any other car of this price class.

All seats are placed in a comfortable reclining position so that you have complete relaxation as you ride. No more sitting bolt upright . . . you ride in this car, not on it.

30 miles on a gallon of gasoline

Here at last is an automobile that will run 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline . . . well over 1,000 miles on a gallon of oil . . . with extraordinary mileage on tires . . . and the smallest tax rating of any car in America today.

Imagine if you can what this saving will mean to the average owner in a single year.

It cuts present operating costs just about in half. Doubles the value of every dollar you now spend for upkeep.

Exhaustive tests so far indicate that the average year's operating cost of the Overland Whippet should save you from $75 to $150 in gas, oil, tires and mechanical upkeep.

Money that goes back into your pocket. Money you must add to the list price of any less economical car you consider.

Based on these figures, it is easy to see how standards of automobile value must change.

With this new factor of economical operation, list prices do not mean the same today. Resale values of less modern and less efficient cars are bound to suffer.

New standards of mechanical design

The new principles . . . the new ideas . . . the new standards of design in the Overland Whippet are bound to change your whole conception of light car mechanical features.

Its high-torque motor of 3¼-inch bore by 4¾-inch stroke, is by far the most efficient light car engine made in America . . . It actually develops more horsepower per cubic inch of piston displacement and pound of car weight than any other light 4-cylinder engine.

Millions welcomed it—thousands bought it—the Overland Whippet has become a sensation from coast to coast in its first six weeks

It has an 80 foot-pound torque . . . this means greater pulling power . . . the ability to master hills without shifting gears.

Because of this greater efficiency, the motor of the Overland Whippet costs more to build yet less to maintain than any other light car engine made today.

It is the only 4-cylinder light car that combines 4-wheel brakes, full worm steering gear and adjustable steering wheel.

Greater accessibility for inspection and repairs is another feature. The Overland Whippet has all of the engine refinements characteristic of the most expensive cars.

New chassis features

The worm and gear irreversible steering mechanism is typical of this car's quality and is especially designed for full balloon tires and 4-wheel brakes.

Timken bearings are used throughout the front and rear axles.

All 4-wheel brakes are 11 inches in diameter, of the mechanical internal type. They provide 192 square inches of braking surface . . . far more per pound of car weight than any other American light car built today. Each is completely encased, thus not susceptible to weather conditions.

Underslung semi-elliptic Vanadium steel springs add immeasurably to its riding and driving ease.

Designed and built without restrictions

The engineers who designed this car . . . and the men who built it . . . have worked without restrictions.

Nothing has been spared that would improve its engineering or its quality.

The Overland Whippet is not a 1 or 2 year car.

Instead, it has been honestly built to give years and years of satisfactory service . . . to deliver thrilling and trouble-free performance for thousands and thousands of miles.

This new-type car has such costly equipment as a one-piece windshield, cowl ventilator, quick-acting crank-type regulators on doors and windows.

A beautiful cut velour trimming is used for seats and cushion backs . . . with sides and head-lining to match.

A dome-light and a handsome walnut-finished instrument board add to its unusually attractive and complete interior equipment.

No more sitting bolt upright—seats are placed in a naturally restful position

To millions of American women this car will bring an entirely new pride of ownership—a new delight in its comfort and refinements.

You can compare the Overland Whippet with all other American light cars on the basis of price alone. But from the standpoint of engineering, performance, comfort and quality, it has established an entirely new criterion by which all other light cars must be judged.

The Overland Whippet is furnished in three body styles . . . Sedan $735; Touring $645; and Coupe $735; all prices f. o. b. factory. Prices and specifications subject to change without notice.

In 13 seconds

Stop-watch tests show that the Whippet accelerates 18% faster than other light 4-cylinder cars

Come, see this car. Take this advertisement with you and check the things we say here against what you find. We have purposely understated every fact. We have told you the story of the Overland Whippet without exaggeration.

With the introduction of the Overland Whippet, it is not sound judgment today to consider the purchase of a less modern car.

A new trend of automobile design is dawning in America. Other light cars of similar design will follow this one.

But today Overland . . . and Overland alone . . . offers you these unique engineering attainments.

In fairness to yourself, see this car.

Municipal Opera in Last Week

"Babes in Toyland," by Victor Herbert, to Bring Most Successful Summer Season in Forest Park to a Close Next Sunday Night.

FOR the twelfth and final week of its eighth and most successful season the Municipal Theater Association will revive, beginning tomorrow night, "Babes in Toyland," the melodious and colorful extravaganza by Victor Herbert that was presented in 1920.

"Babes in Toyland" ranks as one of Herbert's most entertaining works. Its music is spirited and exalting, while its story possesses both novelty and loveliness. An additional merit of the work is that the cast is extensive enough to provide parts for all of the Municipal Opera cast and for a number of the St. Louis choristers who from time to time have been elevated to speaking and singing roles. The ensemble will be augmented by a group of local children.

The score of "Babes in Toyland" contains some of Herbert's best known melodies. It is in this extravaganza that such favorites as "Toyland," the "Toy Soldiers' March," "Slumber Deep," "My Castle in Spain," "Rock-a-Bye," and "Mary, Mary," occur.

"Fra Diavolo" is tonight's offering at the Municipal Theater.

FRENCH GO TO HEAR OPERA, AMERICANS TO SEE SINGER

So Says Mary McCormic, Who Prefers Parisian Rapier Criticism to U. S. Bludgeons.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 14.—"If I am to be insulted, I prefer the rapier to the sledge hammer," says Mary McCormic, America opera star. "That is why I like French criticisms better than American."

The Chicago singer occupies an apartment overlooking Boulevard Pasteur. Besides the flowers there are personal touches, one an autographed photograph of Gabriel d'Annunzio. D'Annunzio, in a scrawling hand wrote: "To Mary Melody McCormic, melodiously Gabriel D'Annunzio."

Discussing the difference between American and French audiences at the opera, Miss McCormic said, "In Paris the audience is interested in the opera, while in America the star is the principal interest. Parisians go to hear the music, while Americans go to see the singer."

Miss McCormic is under a year's contract with the Paris Opera, but expects to depart for the United States in December for a concert tour.

MANSFIELD DIRGE FOR VERSE

Poet Fears Sun of Poetic Declamation Has Set.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—John Mansfield, poet and novelist, addressing those who gathered for the yearly verse-speaking contest at the Oxford Examination Schools, bemoaned the preference of the new generation to sit in a dark chamber watching flashy films rather than to listen to poetry beautifully declaimed.

Poetry in this form was nearly done for, he mourned, but it would persist to some degree in spite of everything.

"So long as there remain two enthusiasts and a plank, there will be a poetic stage," he declared.

HAYS TO MANAGE ST. LOUIS

With the opening today of the fall season at the new St. Louis Theater, Everett H. Hays, 42 years old, who has had an extensive career in the vaudeville and motion picture fields, assumes the managership of the theater, succeeding Clarence S. Williams, who has been appointed resident manager of the Hennepin-Orpheum in Minneapolis. Hays comes here from Chicago, where, in the past four years, he was manager, successively, of the Majestic, the Riviera and the Tower theaters, all Orpheum Circuit houses.

General Rehearsals for "Carmen" Start Wednesday

Chorus Has Already Been Prepared for Opening in Forest Park Stage a Week From Tomorrow Night.

ALL of the "Carmen" principals will be in St. Louis by Tuesday and general rehearsals of principals and chorus will begin Wednesday in preparation for the opening night of the Grand Opera Association's summer season on Aug. 23.

The chorus has already completed four weeks of rehearsal of the Bizet score. The first stage rehearsal for the production was held yesterday at the Municipal Theater with Giuseppe Cesati, assistant conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Co. and coach of the chorus, directing the singing, while Alex Puglia, the stage director, supervised a general rehearsal of stage grouping.

During the coming week the chorus will rehearse nightly at the Musicians' Club at 3535 Pine boulevard while the principals will rehearse in the afternoons at the Hotel Chase ballroom and in the evening with the chorus at the Musicians' Club.

Vittorio Verse of the Metropolitan Opera Co., will arrive tomorrow from Milan, Italy, to take charge of the rehearsals while the singing artists will come to St. Louis from various points where they have been vacationing or spending summer vacations.

Marta Wittkowska, who sings the title role, will come from Cincinnati where she has been appearing in the six weeks' open air opera season. Lorna Jaxon, who will alternate with her, is on her way from Asheville, N. C., where she has been singing leading roles in the grand opera festival.

De Gaviria, who will sing the role of Don Jose, will come from New York, where he has been studying and Riccardo Martin, who will take the role on alternate nights will come from Colorado Springs where he has been resting in preparation for his winter season with the Chicago Civic Opera Company.

Elda Vettori, who has been studying in New York in preparation for her Metropolitan debut next fall, will be here Monday to prepare for her appearance as Micaela and Joseph Royer, who sings

A Full Confession

By J. P. McEvoy.

(Author of "Americana.")

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.

LET me say right off the bat from an overflowing heart that revues are not written. They are distilled from the life blood of the baffled author. This baffled author—speaking now of J. P. McAvoy who wrote "Americana"—started out with a script four inches thick, overflowing with screaming sketches, scintillating songs and excruciatingly comic interludes. After the first day of rehearsal, every waste paper basket in the Belmont Theater was overflowing with excruciating sketches and scintillating songs—which like little Hairy Apes somehow "didn't belong." Either they could not be staged without the assistance of the Fuller Construction Co. or else they could not be cast without the aid of Max Reinhardt. This left a two-inch sandwich of mad, deliriously comic stuff which as the days of rehearsal wore away—and don't let any one tell you that they are not wearing—shrunk and shriveled until nothing was left except one lone sketch called "Rollo and His Pa." Even "Rollo and His Pa" had all kinds of ingenious operations bestowed upon it by a confused author. Close scrutiny of this little opus will disclose large patches of grafted skin, scars of a Caesarian section, a lifted face and a new set of dorsal vertebrae of a refined but irrefragible substance.

I wish my great unseen audience would arise at this point and ask me what I did to replace these cluttered wastebaskets stuffed with discarded brain children. I could tell you that practically everything in my revue at the Belmont was written on the backs of envelopes, on tops of pianos during rehearsals or dictated to a bevy of harried secretaries and squealing dictaphones.

The opera "Cavalier Americana" was written in Henry Souvaine's kitchen out in Southport on the bottom of a wooden salad bowl, and the music was composed by Mr. Souvaine on the same piano Lizst used as a boy. It came over here on the Mayflower—I may be a little mixed in my dates, but that's nothing.

"Second Thoughts — on — First Nights"

By Wells Root

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.

THERE is this in common between the summer weather and the summer shows on Broadway; that from season to season the constant first-nighter mercifully forgets how all but unbearable they both can be. Given any hot night and any hopeless play in late July or early August and you will find the same group gathered in front of the theater, limp but voluable in their pathetic surprise and indignation.

They were thus gathered last week on the baked sidewalks of Forty-eighth street, gasping a little in the steaming breath from the pavements, mopping their more or less scholarly brows and wearily indifferent to the plaintive whine from the patient ushers: "Curtain going up, please." They were all seasoned first-nighters; they had been there before at almost the same date and perhaps in front of the same theater last year and the year before that. And yet, in this same mood, there was only one conclusion that seemed to comfort them. It was the reiterated assertion that this was the hottest night, the worst play and altogether the most appalling early season ever known to Broadway.

IN this they were obviously sincere and just as obviously in error. The Weather Bureau disposed of the first theory; this night wasn't even hot enough for headlines, it was merely fair and warmer. While the play, though indisputably awful, was no worse than dozens of such desperate, faltering entrants who arrive with the first delirious, heat-crazed weeks of any season.

IF you are an explorer of Broadway from out-of-town and, on such a night, a constant first-nighter explains just why this is the worst opening a season has ever known, you must humor him with soothing agreement, but inwardly you may reserve judgment. These last two weeks have undoubtedly been trying—if it isn't the heat or the humidity, it's the plot and the acting. But, as one who survived "Flesh" on a humid August premiere not so many seasons ago, we can testify that every opening of every season in the worst known to history and accounts for the hunted look on the faces of summer first-nighters.

FROM the fringe of late July and early August openings, the score stands something like this:

One experiment in revues ("Bare Facts") where the Triangle Theater from the depths of its Greenwich Village cellar, jeers amiably at the brighter lights on Broadway further uptown.

The perennial plot (called "Pyramids" this time) in which a wife saves her husband's honor at no small damage to her own.

Two farces: One "A Blonde Sinner" in which the author tries to combine mystery plots, Long Island refinement and music cues with indifferent success, and another called "Honest Liars" of which the most illuminating comment was in a press notice announcing that a new last act had been written and adding that "the authors are pleased."

Another revue ("Nic-Nax of 1926") which needs only the passing of diplomas to make it a perfect class day entertainment.

One more imitation of "Abie's Irish Rose" ("My Country") which shows lively signs of repeating the success of its eternal predecessor.

SOME of these were obvious liabilities from the start; others were received with mixed emotions, at least they are still staying on so somebody must like them. The one triumphant arrival, on which the box office and the critic's columns were for once united, is the hilarious, colorful and faintly malicious revue which has slipped into the Belmont and crowded that theater beyond the bonds called "intimate."

"Americana" is such a hit that it will, in all probability see another summer through which it will again survive such details as melting asphalt and smothering humidity. This in spite of the fact that it is made up almost entirely of satirical sketches and that satire has always the implied criticism believed to be fatal to Babbitt at the box office. Certainly it has something of the spirit of its borrowed title: "Americana," that laconic and devastating department of newspaper clipping in "The American Mercury" which throws such a cruel and incredible light on the American scene. And just as certainly it is hilariously enjoyed by the figures in that scene on the other side of the footlights. It is significant that most successes of

Behind the Screens

H. B. WARNER will portray Jesus of Nazareth in "The King of Kings," Cecil B. de Mille's forthcoming picturization of the life of the Great Master. In addition to Warner the cast includes Joseph and Rudolph Schildkraut, Victor Varconi and Majel Coleman. A number of other players will be added as rapidly as they can be secured for the many roles in this production, with interest at the present time centered on De Mille's search for a Mary Magdalene. Although De Mille has made more than 50 screen tests of actresses, stars and unknowns alike, he has not yet found an actress who he believes completely fills the requirements of this role.

Colleen Moore's dark Dutch bob has made its last appearance before the motion picture cameras for at least three months. Long golden tresses will be worn by the star of First National in "Twinkletoes" which is now being produced by John McCormick. "Mr. Burke constantly refers to 'Twink's' golden hair in the story," says Miss Moore, "and bobbed hair hardly seemed to fit the character of the little dancer, so he thought I'd better become a blonde, too." Thomas Burke's "Limehouse Nights" story supplied the picture in which Miss Moore is now working.

Production of "Four Feathers," the next Richard Barthelmess starring vehicle for First National, has started under the direction of Sidney Olcott. The screen story is based on the A. E. W. Mason novel with which the adapters have combined material taken from "The White Black Sheep," an original especially written for Barthelmess.

"Ladies at Play," as announced by John McCormick, general manager of West Coast production for First National, is the new title for the picture featuring Doris Kenyon and Lloyd Hughes and formerly called, "A Desperate Woman." The latter was the name of the stage play by Sam Janney which Carey Wilson adapted and which Alfred E. Green is directing.

A FULL CONFESSION ON PLAY WRITING

fell out of an old suit of clothes which came back from the cleaner's by mistake. The authorship is uncertain. My wife claims I wrote it. I am inclined to believe the cleaner did. I cannot remember.

World travelers who got as far as left of the Comic Supplement claim "Americana" is filled with debris of this famous debacle. This is largely the enthusiasm of travelers returning home with tales of a far country, dimly seen and vaguely remembered. One piece of a skit, one song complete and 14 bars of another—it may be 15 or 16—are all that remain of that polychromatic potpourri which dazzled Washington, dumfounded Newark and gave my good friend Mr. Ziegfeld a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

I have been requested, I cannot remember by whom, to say something about how to write a revue.

I have tried in the above vague, general and tenuous remarks to set down a few of my own fleeting impressions. I really cannot remember having written "Americana" at all. Fitfully, as out of the night, come flashes of lucidity. I can remember someone suggesting "Why not have a tabloid paper number?" and then there was a loud ringing of bells in my ears and the sound of rushing waters and I looked up into the face of Miss Wilkins, who is either the night nurse or the day nurse. She was taking my temperature with professional abandon. "Lie back and relax" were her words. "Everything is going to be all right. It is a beautiful little boy." When I came to again, I was back in rehearsal and one of the figures in the Tabloid Paper drop was crying "Check from Otto Kahn Received; Saves a Girl from Sin." That night we played two matinees.

"The Student Prince of Denmark" has an even more intricate genesis, but I can't remember now what it is. I am inclined to let bygones be bygones, or if that is not feasible to offer a prize for the best solution. Either way there should be an idea for a Liberty cover in it.

Finale.

And now I wish to say to young aspiring dramatists who yearn for the fallow fields of the revue—it is a hard life. Many are called but few are chosen. Inspiration is nine-tenths perspiration. All is not gold that glitters. Do one good deed every day, for the movies are still in their infancy. Life is real and life is earnest and the grave is not its goal. To you from falling hands we throw the torch, be yours to raise it high; and so onward and upward to the sun-kissed heights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

WITH all affectionate regard for the refreshing memory of "The Potters" you are brought to the conclusion that this is the sort of thing McEvoy does best. Though, when faced with the diversified talents of this playwright, poet, columnist and philosopher, it is a bit baffling to make any distinction. Some of his minor activities are entirely out of our critical province; he collects St. Bernard puppies, for instance, and breeds canard ducks and for years he has been writing the verses for Christmas cards, valentines and those tender tokens of remembrance designed for shoppers with an anniversary complex.

While you are pawing over the tumbled Christmas card counters in search of noble sentiments, you may come upon the picture of a church heavily frosted with snow, with a star of Bethlehem above and underneath, this message:

"Old fellow, if I could grasp your hand
For about a minute, you'd understand
Without any fixed up card from me
What a bully good Christmas I want yours to be."

This would be McEvoy. Somehow we begin to understand how several weeks work on cherry thoughts like these, would drive almost anyone to the caustic reflections in "Americana."

Charles Galagher, who sings Zuniga, has just closed a season in the revival of "Pinafore" at New York and will be here Tuesday, as will Elizabeth Kerrg the Frasquita of the summer opera, who has been at her home in Chicago. George Cehanovsky, who sings Dancairo, comes to St. Louis after a summer of study for his appearance with the Metropolitan this fall.

One of the features of rehearsals this week will be short addresses to chorus and principals by prominent St. Louisans. Among them are Senator Williams, Congressman Hawes, Acting Mayor Neun, former Mayor Kiel, Carl F. G. Meyer and William T. Findly, respectively president and secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Director of Public Welfare Sullsbury and Commissioner of Parks and Recreation Pape.

Eczema on Hands For Nine Years Cuticura Healed
"About nine years ago eczema started breaking out on my hands and fingers in a rash. It itched badly and when I scratched it, it would burn and eruptions formed. When I put my hands in water it was worse. At night I could not rest or sleep on account of it. The trouble lasted about nine years.
"I tried almost everything I could think of without any benefit. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a short time I could see that my hands were better. I continued using them and in about two months I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. L. J. Baker, 1818-11th Ave. A, Moline, Ill.

Behind the Screens

who had the principal feminine role, is vacationing at Saratoga Springs.

Anna Q. Nilsson has left Hollywood for a quick visit to her old home in Sweden. Miss Nilsson has just completed the title role in "The Masked Woman." After a short visit with relatives in Sweden she will return to California to resume contract work with First National.

"The Man of the Forest" will be Zane Grey's next story to be filmed by Paramount. Jack Holt will play the lead and John Waters will direct. It is scheduled to go into production on Oct. 22, shortly after Waters finishes "Passing Strangers." Jim Tully's story of tramp life in the harvest fields. "Passing Strangers" will go into production about Aug. 23, according to present plans.

After several title changes made necessary by alterations in the story, Corinne Griffith's next picture will be known as "Syncopating Sue." In "Syncopating Sue," the star takes the part of a piano song plugged in a music shop. Eventually she becomes a great actress. The supporting cast includes Tom Moore, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Marjorie Rambeau, Lee Moran, Joyce Compton and Sunshine Hart.

Priscilla Dean's next feature will be "Jewels of Desire," an original story by Agnes Parsons. Paul Powell, one of the film industry's pioneer directors, whose most recent contribution to the screen was "The Prince of Pilsen," will direct "Jewels of Desire."

Harry Allen, who created the role of "Bertie" in the original stage production of "The Better 'Ole," has been engaged for a similar characterization in "Corporal Kate."

Conrad Nagel has been named for the romantic masculine lead in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's all-color version of Jules Verne's fantastic "The Mysterious Island." Edward Christianson, who is directing the picture, is working Lionel Barrymore, Sally O'Neill, Warner Oland, Roy d'Arcy, Karl Dane and others in the cast in scenes in which Nagel does not appear, pending his the completion of "Tin Hats," in which Nagel is working at present, opposite Claire Windsor.

The younger generation is "carrying on." While Dolores and Helene Costello are continuing in the way of their father, Maurice Costello, earliest of the matinee idols, young Ralph Bushman—who looks just like his dad, Francis X. Bushman—is gathering further acting honors for the Bushman family. His work in "Brown of Harvard" won him a bigger chance in Peter B. Kyne's "The Understanding Heart." With young Bushman in this picture is a cast including Joan Crawford, Rockliffe Fellowes, Carmel Myers and Richard Carle, one of musical comedy's star comedians.

George K. Arthur, screen comedian, has signed a new long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Arthur's type of comedy has made him successful in such pictures as "Lights of Old Broadway," "Irene," "Kiki" and "The Boy Friend.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR SCOTLAND IS KEPT BUSY

Job Combines About Four Portfolios and He Is Constantly Under Fire of Questioners.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—"A sort of political and administrative pooh bah," is an English newspaper's characterization of the Secretary of State for Scotland, Sir John Gilmour. His duties are of a far more varied character than those of any other minister. He combines the functions of a Minister of Education in regard to Scottish educational matters, a Minister of Agriculture in connection with Scottish farm affairs and a Minister of Health so far as Scottish health matters are concerned.

All this is in addition to the various minutiae in other branches of Scottish administration to which he has to attend. Almost every day the House of Commons is sitting he is bombarded with questions from inquisitive Scottish members on such widely varied subjects as the reasons for the dismissal of an officer from the police force; how many men are employed in the Lochaber waterworks construction, and why the Carnwath Parish Council is refusing to extend relief to able-bodied destitute persons.

All told, the Secretary of State for Scotland has a job on his hands that would seem to go far toward justifying the paragrapher's appellative.

SYNDICALISM DENOTES HARMONY IN ITALY

Special Radio to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1926.

ROME, Italy, Aug. 14.—Italy's program of industrial reform has been sketched in an exclusive interview with Giuseppe Belluzzo, newest member of Premier Mussolini's Cabinet, who was chosen six months ago as Minister of National Economy to direct the operation of the new syndicalist laws. Belluzzo began by explaining items in the Italian terminology which he thought might confuse American readers.

"In political economy textbooks 'syndicalism' is defined usually as economic rule through violence," he said. "I hope Americans do not think Italian syndicalism is violence. It is nothing of the kind. In its Italian use the word merely denotes governmental organization of all the industrialists, agriculturists, business men and workers in a series of categories. Ten of each group of employers and employes, alike, work out their own salvation, for the Government absolutely forbids strikes and lockouts. Arbitration of disputes is compulsory.

Supplanted by Productive Class.

"I may say that capital and labor have disappeared from modern Italy. Everyone is simply a part of the Government organization. Instead of the terms 'capital' or 'labor' we employ the phrase 'productive class.'"

Belluzzo then cleared up another terminological error when he pointed out that Italian syndicates were controlled through a department of the Government that has been termed the Ministry of Corporations.

"Quite naturally this use of the word 'corporation' does not correspond with its use in the United States," he said. "It would be more proper to translate it into ministry of government trade unions' or even 'ministry of work.'"

Nine-Hour Day Spreading.

Belluzzo has made a striking record since he took office. He pointed out as significant the first application of the nine-hour day to certain industries; second, to the stringent curtailing of building; third, restrictions on the use of white flour and reduction in the size of newspapers to six pages, and fourth, the projected closing of restaurants and cafes at 10 p. m.

"Is the nine-hour day generally applied?" he was asked.

"No, one cannot initiate so vast a reform in a minute," replied Belluzzo. "Thus far it has been successfully applied in certain districts."

"Are the workers happy under the nine-hour regulation?" was another question.

"Individual happiness is not the problem," replied Belluzzo. "The problem is efficiency in the great new world state the Fascist Government is creating."

"Do you think the nine-hour day is fundamentally good economics?"

"Yes, for the time being."

Reception of Economic Reforms.

"How has the country greeted the economic reform?"

"With the ministry of corporations controlling the activities of the syndicalist groups, we have formed an ogranization founded on discipline and patriotism which the workers have accepted enthusiastically—because they understand the interests of the nation—of the new Italy—are the interests of all."

"Are the new economics proving really economical?"

"The economic program of the Fascist Government is developing ever-growing hours of daily work. Otherwise, there is co-operation between the 'productive classes' for further efficiency."

In conclusion Belluzzo said that he hoped Americans would look upon the new Italy with understanding and sympathy.

"Italy is the only country remaining in Europe," he said, "where Americans can be happy and comfortable."

FLAPPER SEALS DO COURTING

U. S. Official Reports on Love-Making in the Pribilofs.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 14.—Lawrence Richey, an assistant to Secretary of Commerce Hoover, has found the true flapper—the seal. He has just returned from a visit to the Government seal reserve in the Pribilof Islands of Alaska.

The female seals do the courting, he says. "Every year the male seals take a stand on the shore and wait," he explains. "Then the females look over the field and choose the ones they want. The popular boy may have a harem of 125 which he jealously guards. Some are only pursued by 25 or so, which seems enough, at that."

'ALLAH ALSO IS MERCIFUL'

Caid's Explanation When Asked Why He Drank Champagne.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 14.—All faithful Moslems must be teetotalers. The Koran forbids the use of even light wines and beer. During the recent visit of Mulai Yussef, Sultan of Morocco, to Paris, a Parisian society woman was surprised when she saw one of the Sultan's most trusted caids, beside whom she sat imbibing champagne.

"Doesn't your religion forbid you to drink wine?" she asked. "Allah is great," replied the caid. Then as he picked up another glass of the sparkling liquid and quaffed it he added: "Allah also is merciful."

WISCONSIN HEIRESS TO BUILD $20,000 HOME FOR ANIMALS

'Lady Bountiful' of Humane Society Gave Up Social Whirl to Care for Stray Dogs.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 14.—Love for animals which 20 years ago outweighed the prospects of a pleasurable social life, gave the Wisconsin Humane Society a "Lady Bountiful" in Miss Lenore Cawker, rich heiress, who this year promises to give Milwaukee a new home for stray animals.

The new home, which Miss Cawker will build entirely out of her own funds, will cost approximately $20,000. It will provide for two automobiles, a truck, an ambulance, and an operating room, besides the space devoted to the entertainment of stray animals.

Miss Cawker, when a young debutante, read of the cruel treatment of animals in the city pound, and the proposal to build a high fence to keep children from seeing the animals killed. Miss Cawker visited the pound and, immediately turning from social duties, she threw her entire energy into the work of the Wisconsin Humane Society. Among her first acts was the opening of a home for animals in her father's spacious stables.

AMBASSADOR THEATER OPENING DEFERRED

Public Inaugural Now Set for Aug. 26, a Week Later Than at First Planned.

The new Ambassador Theater at Seventh and Locust streets will be opened to the public at 11 a. m. Thursday, Aug. 26, instead of Aug. 19 as originally planned. The postponement is to allow further time for decoration.

The first performance, however, will be given at 8:15 o'clock Wednesday night, Aug. 25, for invited guests only. There will be dedicatory exercises that night. The program includes a speech of welcome by a representative of the Mayor and introduction of notables of the motion picture industry.

Among those expected to attend are Adolph Zukor, president of Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation; S. R. Kent, general manager of the same company; Robert Lieber, president of First National Pictures, Inc.; Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists; Harry Warner, president of Warner Brothers; Sam Katz, president of Publix Theafer Corporation, and many theater owners.

During the afternoon preceding the premiere, these and other representatives of the film industry, city officials and an army detail will parade through the downtown district, while an airplane exhibition is going on above the theater.

The exterior of the 17-story Ambassador Theater and office building is in the American skyscraper style. The interior of the theater is decorated in the spirit of the Spanish Renaissance. The ornamental chandeliers in the lobby are expressive of the Moorish influence on Spanish art. In the auditorium with its 3000 seats the designers have employed baroque coloring, and in various niches have placed statues and figures symbolic of the carnival spirit.

Skouras Brothers, operating the Ambassador, will present First National and Famous Players-Lasky pictures, Publix Theater stage shows and artists of their own booking. The theater will be open from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. The admission scale will be the same as at other first-run motion-picture houses here.

SAYS MODERN BRIDES SEEK TO LEARN GOOD COOKING

Home Service Head of Wisconsin Gas Companies Tells of Requests for Assistance.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 14.—Contrary to pictures of "flapper brides" and stories of the frivolity of young people, the modern bride wants to give her husband the kind of food that will make him forget his mother's.

This was the declaration of Mrs. Katherine Delaney, chairman of the home service committee of gas and electric companies in Wisconsin. Her conclusion was reached, she said, after studying a large number of questions, submitted to home service workers by young married people.

"Frills of the girls," she said, "and sticky oiled hair of the young men are merely the froth on the substantial characters of modern young people. The blushing bride of yesterday has given away to the more capable bride of 1926.

"Most of the requests for cooking information received by the various home service directors concern the more inexpensive and nutritive dishes. The new brides are persistent in their requests for 'real good bread receipes' and nearly always ask for information concerning some kind of cake that their husbands must be particularly fond of.

"It is particularly noteworthy to tabulate the fact that the cheaper dishes are in demand, for it proves without doubt, that the younger couple is striving to get along on their $1,800 or $2,000 yearly income. Much of the talk about the frivolity of the younger generation seems foolish when such facts are brought out."

COAT MADE BY A FORMER PRESIDENT GIVEN TO STATE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 14.—Tennessee soon is to have on display in its department archives perhaps the only coat in the world made by the executive head of a great nation. This coat was made by Andrew Johnson, one time tailor at Greeneville, Tenn., then Governor of Tennessee and the seventeenth President of the United States.

In 1854, Johnson made and presented to Judge W. W. Pepper of Springfield, Tenn., a black broadcloth coat. On July 14, Judge Pepper's son gave the coat back to the State as a memorial of the work of the two men.

To preserve the coat, John Trotwood Moore, State librarian and historian, is having a special glass case made.

"If living today, President Johnson would be eligible for membership in the ranks of organized labor," Moore said, in discussing the relic. "Perhaps no other State or country has so unique a relic."

Owns the Robert E. Lee Whistle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAIRO, Ill., Aug. 14.—The whistle used on the steamer Robert E. Lee when she won from the Natchez the greatest race ever held on the Mississippi River is the property of Capt. John F. Klein, a Cairo steamboat owner.

AMERICAN WOMAN PRAISED FOR AIDING ART IN GERMANY

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—"Only an American woman could do a thing so magnanimous," comments the Vossische Zeitung, writing of the traveling international modern art exhibit sponsored by Mrs. E. H. Harriman of New York. The exhibit is being shown for the first time in Berlin and also for the first time includes the works of German artists, in addition to American, French and British. It is housed in the former palace of the Crown Prince.

"The noble hearted heiress," the newspaper continues, "has found a way to weave anew the bonds of peace and friendship among intellectuals of this war-wrecked world."

"I could not work at all and had to take to my bed with a high fever due to intestinal indigestion, gases in my stomach and pain in my right side. I had spent my last cent for doctors and medicine, which gave me no relief. I was in despair. A lodge brother gave me a bottle of MAYR'S and the first dose relieved me. Thanks to this medicine I am now in the best of health." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. ST. LOUISAN FIRST TO PRACTICE ORTHODONTIA

Now Straightening of Teeth Is Recognized as Science All Over World.

Twenty-seven years ago, Dr. Edward H. Angle, a St. Louis dentist, whose office was at 1107 North Grand avenue, first announced that he was practicing orthodontia as his specialty. Thereafter, he devoted himself to improving and popularizing the treatment of children for irregular and crooked teeth.

Other dentists had practiced this work as a side line, and the word "orthodontia," coined from the Greek word for "straight" and the Latin word for "tooth," had found its way into the dictionaries. But Dr. Angle is credited with having assembled the knowledge on the subject, and with having developed the practical use of various appliances for governing the position of the teeth and the conformation of the jaw.

Several St. Louis dentists, and later some from other cities, studied with Dr. Angle the technique of his newly developed work. At that time, systematic instruction in orthodotia was not given in any established institution.

An Established Science Now.

Now, all dental colleges teach the principles of orthodontia to undergraduates, and some of them give advanced courses to graduates in training for this specialty.

Tomorrow, when the International Orthodontic Congress convenes in New York, more than 800 members of this profession are expected to be present. Five languages are to be spoken on the program, English, French, Spanish, Italian and German.

Dr. Angle now lives in Pasadena, Cal. He is not expected to attend the New York meeting, which will be held at Hotel Commodore.

To the public, orthodontia has become known as an expensive process, as viewed by general standards of medical and dental payment. The practitioners say the rates of charge are justified by the length of time required for the treatment, extending over several years, and the delicacy of the orthodontist's task, which has a lifelong effect on the patient's facial appearance. In recent years some work of this character has been done without charge, or at reduced charges, for poor children.

Foregin Societies Represented.

The New York gathering will continue through Friday, with Thursday afternoon devoted to golf at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club. Societies co-operating in the congress are the American Society of Orthodontists, New York Society of Orthodontists, Rocky Mountain Society of Orthodontists, Southern Society of Orthodontists, Southwestern Society of Orthodontists, Eastern Associates of Graduates of the Angle School, Alumni Society of Graduates of the Dewey School, Alumni Society of the International School, European Orthodontological Society, British Society for the Study of Orthodontics, Societe Francaise d'Orthopedie Deno-Faciale and the Deutsche Gesellschaft fur Zahranzliche Orthopaedie.

LONDON RACE TIPSTERS MUZELED BY NEW LAW

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—A muzzle is shortly to be applied to exponents of a peculiarly British form of industry—the business of the oratorical tipster on the races. These human loud speakers have been holding forth in numbrs for some time on the outskirts of London's popular open-air debating ground, Hyde Park, and their noisy and voluble career has finally ben adjudged a nuisance.

The muzzling ordinance is embodied in a Government bill in Parliament which provides that any persons delivering a speech or address imparting information concerning betting or racing, "or advertising that such information can be obtained elsewhere" shall be liable to a five-pound ($25) fine.

The office of works was rather apologetic in commenting on this measure—an abridgement of the traditional British liberty of speech. An official expressed dislike at "making rules that interfere with the liberty of the subject," but explained that in this case there had been an undoubted abuse of liberty, as the number of tipsters had so increased as to constitute an annoyance to the public.

2,000,000 MORE WOMEN THAN MEN IN GERMANY

Birth Statistics, However, Show Number of Boy Babies Exceed Girls by Seven Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—The antics of the stork in Germany are baffling savants who are interested in seeing to it that for every Eve there is also an Adam. Because of the losses in the war, census reports just published show that women exceed men by 2,000,000 in a population of 62,348,700.

But birth records indicate that for some unexplainable reason seven per cent more boys are being born than girls. In Hamburg the percentage is 10.5. Scientists believe the figures may lead to some solution of the age-old mystery of the predetermination of sex. Some have ventured the prediction that the sex of a child is influenced by psychological forces, since German mothers as a rule want a preponderance of boys in their families.

BOOKSELLERS ORGANIZE TO ENLARGE READING RANGE

Hope to Draw Scattered Retail Outlets Together With Publishing Groups.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—One of the Old World vehicles of bringing literature into fuller appreciation by the American public has been launched as the American Booksellers' Association.

This organization is working to bring into closer contact the widely scattered retail outlets and the three or four geographical groups of publishers. Through this means the bookseller will be better trained and a wider range of literature placed before the public.

The association here is patterned in many respects after Le Maison du Livre at Paris. The latter organization, which stands on a square condemned by the City of Paris and given over to its use, maintains a centralized office through which all booksellers make contact with all publishers and through its reference department aids in the finding and perpetuation of all worthy books.

Much of this work already has been started by the association in this country, which has extended its activities to aiding booksellers in using the reference volumes now extant and co-operates with the National Association of Book Publishers and General Federation of Women's Clubs in maintaining at least one university course for booksellers.

The need for this work was illustrated by the association by comparison of the business in this country with Germany. While about 12,000 titles were published here last year, Germany with one-third the population of the United States, absorbed three times that number of titles.

MYSTERY OF FIGURES 3852 HELPS AMUSE MARRIED PAIRS

Add Year of Birth, Age, Year of Marriage and Number of Years Married—Total, 3852.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—Berlin's dog days find married persons indulging in a new-fangled substitute for the cross-word puzzle. This is probing into the mysteries of the figures 3852.

Some one discovered that these figures invariably come from adding the following: The year of one's birth, one's age, the year of marriage, and the number of years married.

The puzzle, which is bewildering to most people, rests on the obvious fact that 3852 equals twice 1926, and that the year of birth, plus present age, always equals 1926, as does the year of marriage plus the number of years of the duration of the marriage.

NEW ARCHITECTURAL COURSE

Pennsylvania U. to Admit Only Those Displaying Aptitude.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 14. — A selective school of architecture, reviving the practice of masters of the Renaissance to restrict advanced courses to students demonstrating special aptitude in architecture, will be instituted at the University of Pennsylvania in September.

"For years the University of Pennsylvania has maintained at high standard the traditional method of teaching architecture," said Dr. W. P. Laird, professor of architecture and dean of the School of Fine Arts, in commenting upon the new undertaking. Now the university has decided to undertake a unique step in the history of architectural instruction. Hereafter architectural students will be chosen for the upper course, rather than promoted to it, after a fair chance has been given in a lower course to demonstrate a capacity to do well in this study. Granted ability, the student will be admitted to an intensive three-year course in architecture which will deal with the advanced subjects relative to that profession.

SHORT OF UNCUT DIAMONDS

Syndicate in London Says Americans and French Are Buying Heavily.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, July 25.—London diamond merchants report a shortage of uncut stones and a probable increase in diamond prices in the near future owing to unprecedentedly heavy buying from America and France. The diamond syndicate, which has its headquarters in Hatton garden, London, and controls almost all of the world's supply of diamonds, is at a loss to account for the sudden American demand, but attributes the French demand to the depreciation of French currency and the desire of Frenchmen to put their money into something less liable to fluctuation than the franc.

London jewelers say that the royal courts have been responsible for many large diamond purchases by wealthy American women in London, and also that returning Americans will take back several important jewels this year.

22 YEARS IN PRISON AT 40

Free at Last, German Hopes to Go Across Sea in Sailboat.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—A free man after spending 22 of the 40 years of his life in jail for burglary, Paul Mueller is attempting to realize the dream that came to him behind the bars. He wants to cross the Atlantic to Brazil in a 40-foot sailboat and start life anew as a farmer. A subscription fund started by a Berlin newspaper has netted him 1000 marks so far.

"All I want is enough to buy a boat, provisions and navigation instruments," Mueller says. "I can't get a job in Germany. Every employer wants recommendations. I can show only jail releases. My last sentence was 13 years. Even if I get a job the Government expects me to pay back 37 cents a day for my keep in jail, or about $1750. I can't do that."

FORMER HEADS OF ROYAL HOUSES PASSING RAPIDLY

Nearly 25 Per Cent Have Died Since Negotiations to Indemnify Them Started in 1918.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—Almost 25 per cent of the heads of former royal houses have died since federal and provincial governments in 1918 were drawn into negotiations to indemnify them for property confiscated during the revolution.

The monarchist slogan, "settle with former Princes and Kings before they die," has a basis in fact, although all the rulers who have died left heirs who are continuing the fight in the half dozen states and principalities which have not settled after eight years.

The delay, now prolonged until the Reichstag meets again in November, is costing the governments millions of dollars annually in pensions and rents on property held. The former Kaiser alone draws a stipend of $144,000 a year. A few of the ex-rulers are land poor. Prince Johann Georg of Saxony, brother of the former King Friederich August, has been forced by circumstances to sell his Dresden Palace and estate to the city for $1,200,000. But most of them are holding out for indemnities and it is believed they have a chance of getting about half of the 3,000,000,000 marks which they demand.

Discolored or Freckled Skins Easily Peeled Off
The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which many skins are subject at this season, may readily be gotten rid of. Mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely absorbs the disfigured outer skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any druggist's. There's no more effective way of banishing tan, freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process itself doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand-new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

Hair that lies in fluffy softness about the face and neck; hair that is lustrous and lovely, seeming much more abundant than it really is—This is the Way which actresses and famous beauties have found. And it is a way you, too, can find by simply getting a package of Canthrox from your druggist.
This shampoo can be given with very little effort, and at trifling cost. Dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough to go all over the hair instead of just on the top. One shampoo costs only three cents and you never know really healthy and beautiful hair until you use it.

KENTUCKY CHURCH USES BARBED WIRE TO CHECK PETTING

First Spite Fence of Kind in State Surrounds Owensboro, House of Worship.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OWENSBORO, Ky., Aug. 14.—Organized warfare on petting parties has been instituted at the Calhoun Road Church, about three miles from this city. Church members, indignant at the petters on church property, voted to erect a barbed wire fence across the front of their lot.

The men agreed to build the fence so as to be impassable and the women pledged themselves to serve luncheon to the workers. The men constructed the fence of barbed wire of so many strands that a giraffe would have to stretch to "neck" over the barrier. Heavy posts were placed to prevent automobiles from running into the church grounds.

This new sort of "spite fence" is the first of its kind in Kentucky.

"You can make it three days," Ebbs said to County Judge Herbert when given five hours to get sober.

"I'll make it 10 days," said the Judge.

"I don't care if you make it 20."

"Just for that I will make it 30," the Judge said. Ebbs went to jail.

SPECULATIVE IN OLIVE STREET KEEN DESPITE PA

Purchase of Parcel 100 Fe Street and Acquisition Sites Examples

By Berry Moore.

Despite the intense heat of the last week, negotiations in real estate circles continued on a decidedly aggressive scale.

Attention was focused on the Memorial Plaza district, with the purchase by A. M. Frumberg, attorney, and Benjamin G. Brinkman, president of the Forest Park Highlands Amusement Co., of the property at 1216-18 Olive street and the abutting property on Pine street, for approximaelty $350,000. Henry R. Weisels, Inc., in connection with the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, handled the negotiations.

The property facing Olive street is 100 feet east of Thirteenth, adjoining the site of the proposed Missouri Pacific building, and is 50 feet wide. It was owned by John F. Lee, attorney. The Pine street frontage is 75 feet, and consists of two parcels, Charles Kratz owning one and Louise and Clara Papin the other. With the widening of Olive street, the site will measure 193 feet from Olive to Pine.

Presumably Speculative Venture.

Represented by Frumberg, the Fox Film Co. recently acquired property at the southwest corner of Grand and Washington boulevards as a site for a large theater and hotel building, through Martin & Breitt. However, it was stated that Frumberg was not acting for the Fox Film Co. in the recent acquisition. The presumption is that Frumberg and Brinkman have purchased the Olive and Pine street lots as a speculative venture, in view of the plans of the Missouri Pacific for a 17-story office building, with provisions for 10 additional stories, and also in view of plans for the 37-story hotel project for Twelfth boulevard, extending from Olive to Pine.

As was told in the Post-Dispatch, the Missouri Pacific has acquired in fee simple the entire Thirteenth street frontage of the block, with a depth of 100 feet on both Olive and Pine streets, the purchase having been made through Henry R. Weisels, Inc., and the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., and plans for the new building are being drawn.

In connection with the hotel plans, two parcels on the Twelfth boulevard frontage already have been purchased outright, while others have been placed under option, including the southwest corner of Twelfth and Olive and the northwest corner of Twelfth and Pine, according to realty operators.

Plans for Tower Hotel.

A syndicate, of which Frumberg is the moving spirit, recently acquired a 99-year lease of the southeast corner of Twelfth and Pine, with plans for a tower hotel structure.

The property at the northwest corner of Olive street and Leffingwell avenue was acquired yesterday by Catherine Nicholls through the John S. Blake & Bro. Real Estate Co. It was owned by an estate, which was represented in the negotiations by the Geraldin Bros. Real Estate Co. The improvements include stores and flats, with 125 feet frontage on Leffingwell and 99 feet on Olive.

This transaction is significant of the speculative interest in Olive street, in that it follows closely the purchase by Mrs. Nicholls of the northeast corner of Olive street and Cardinal avenue, at the instance of the John S. Blake & Bro. Real Estate Co.

Quarters in the new Universal Building, at the northwest corner of Olive and Beaumont streets, have been leased by the Tate Color Corporation, through LeGrand Jones, Inc.

Negotiations for space in this building have been lagging somewhat since the plan for the parkway for street cars on this thoroughfare was announced.

This building is of fireproof construction and covers a quarter of a block. Simon Van Raalte, its owner, is the dominant spirit in the Greater Olive Street Improvement Association, recently organized for the primary purpose of opposing the trolley parkway plan.

View of Real Estate Head.

W. W. Butts, president of the Real Estate Exchange, declared yesterday that the plan for a parked right-of-way for street cars, in the widened portion of Olive street, exclusive of the plaza zone, has retarded negotiations for Olive street property, except that adjoining the Memorial Plaza. This effect has been noted particularly in the case of speculative investments. The Exchange has taken an aggressive stand against the parkway idea, which, members contend, will have an adverse effect on the street for business purposes. With such a parkway, the thoroughfare would become virtually a one-way street, it is argued.

Plans for an eight-story fireproof hotel, with stores on the ground floor, for the northeast corner of Twenty-second and Olive, at cost $750,000, were halted with the adoption of the parkway plan, according to Walter Sheehan, of Sale of Granite Building.

An outstanding feature of the week was the sale of the Granite Building at the southwest corner of Fourth and Market streets, the purchased being Nathan Pritzker, a retired grocer, of 5931A Page boulevard. Negotiations were conducted by the Will C. Wissmath Real Estate Co., through Louis Biener, sales manager of the company. The announced consideration was $350,000.

The building was owned by Edgar Blackwell, who had acquired it in a triangular operation early in the year. In 1920 the building changed hands, at a valuation of $200,000. The advanced price is evidence of the changed sentiment toward that part of the city. The Granite Building is six stories high, constructed of solid granite, and is occupied principally by lawyers.

This section of the city is of historical interest. The Indian Chief Pontiac was buried on the site of this building, and the site of the Courthouse, on the adjacent block, was the traditional starting point of the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

From all surface indications, a general real estate and business revival in this part of the city is in its inception. Developments are expected soon in connection with the Southern Hotel block. While this structure is in the landmark category, it is of fireproof construction, with marble finish. When operated as a hotel, it carried no insurance, and it carries none now.

The Greater St. Louis Exposition to open Sept. 4, comes at a time when the city's growth is manifest to every observer. The additional attention which it will attract to St. Louis is expected, by realty men, to lead to further investment and improvement.

$40,000 APARTMENT FOR 16TH AND OLIVE

Potential desirability of Olive street for downtown homes when it is widened to a 100-foot boulevard has led to plans for remodeling the three-story structure at the southeast corner of Sixteenth and Olive sreets as a six-family apartment building.

Guy Wright of the Thomas Wright Investment Co. announced yesterday that improvements would amount to $40,000. The building was erected about 30 years ago for the late Thomas Wright, manufacturer. The task of moving it into its own back yard to allow 40 feet of space in front for the street widening was completed last week. The apartments are to be fitted modernly.

ALEMITE LUBRICATOR CO. LEASES LARGER QUARTERS

Isaac T. Cook & Co., Inc., report having closed a long-term lease on the two-story building, 100x118 feet, at 3306-14 Washington boulevard, for the account of the Beckley-Ralston Co., for which the building was erected about two years ago by Preston J. Bradshaw.

Frier-Sturges, Inc., which will occupy the building, own and operate the Alemite Lubricator Co. of St. Louis at 3321 Washington boulevard.

Extensive alterations will be made immediately in the new building. They will include front and rear driveways, two automatic rotary lifts for alemiting cars, and a new car washing system, which, according to Frier, will give extremely rapid and complete lubrication and washing service.

A two-story building at 2109-11 Olive street was leased for the account of Milton A. Heilman to George D. Schrader & Son, dealers in laundry machinery and equipment, at present at 2109 Olive street.

The Peerless Express and Transfer Co. will move its office and warehouse from 207 North Sixteenth street to the store at 1019 Olive street. All parties were represented by Isaac T. Cook & Co., Inc., in negotiating these leases.

W. V. SCHMIDT IN EXECUTIVE POST AT GATESWORTH HOTEL

W. V. Schmidt has been promoted to an executive position in the management of the Gatesworth Hotel on Union boulevard. He has had varied business experience.

RIDGEVIEW LOTS SELLING RAPIDLY

Dumont & Co., are setting summer records at Ridgeview, the new Manchester road addition, where the last of 200 lots are being closed out.

A total of 30 lots was sold last Sunday, with sales brisk throughout the week. The tract is on the KMOX site on Manchester roads, just west of Denny road, and is situated attractively. Manchester road is concrete for its entire length, while Denny road may be widened, with concrete construction between Gravois and St. Charles road, thus giving it quick access by auto or bus from all parts of the city and the county.

Aside from the terms, which are extraordinary for an offering of this character, the sale is replete with attractive features. A free certificate of title and a life insurance policy of $1,000 are given free with each lot, with taxes paid until 1927. These policies are given regardless of the price of lots, some of which are as low as $500.

The lots are being acquired as an investment in view of the prices, as well as for home sites. The location is in the direction of the city's most aggressive growth, and the environment is most favorable.

DELMAR HEIGHTS SALES ENCOURAGE DEVELOPERS

Sales at Delmar Heights continue encouraging. Lots in this addition are being offered for both duplexes and bungalows, with restrictions. Concrete streets and sidewalks are being constructed at the expense of the subdivision developer. The addition lies along Delmar boulevard and North and South road, and is embraced in the growth of University City. It is being marketed by the William J. Abbott Real Estate Co., 816 Chestnut street.

RESTRICTIONS PUT ON OSAGE HILLS HOMES

For the full and complete protection of property owners who will live in Osage Hills, on Big Bend boulevard and the Meramec River, restrictions applying to home building, street improvements and every phase of this residential suburb are fully provided for in an indenture executed by Bixby-Smith, Inc., 316 North Eighth street, and recorded in the Recorder's office at Clayton. Ralph F. Bixby, Henry M. Cook and James C. Smith are named as trustees to carry out the provisions of the trust so set up.

The trust established, which carries perpetual restrictions and benefits, is to continue for 25 years and periods of 15 years thereafter in success, and can only be set aside and ended by owners of the fee-simple who hold title to a majority of the front feet of home locations. In such event, all streets, alleys, walks and parks shall be deeded to the public use by the trustees.

Every building must have a hipped or pitched roof, the pitch to be at an angle of not less than 45 degrees. All plans for buildings must be submitted to the trustees for their approval in order that each home may fit in to the general plans and be suited to its location, with harmony and beauty as the result. To the accomplishment of this end the building of bungalows in Osage Hills is prohibited, and no two-family residences can be erected. All homes must be at least one and one-half stories in height and not over two and one-half stories. All garages must be built within or attached to homes as a part of the main building, and no outbuildings of any character are to be permitted.

An area separate from the residential section is set aside for all necessary business purposes, but with the provision that no dance hall or poolroom be included.

MOVIE-CHAIN OWNER PLANS NEW THEATER

A modern fireproof theater building, with stores and apartments adjoining, is to be built on the east side of Grand boulevard, between Meramec and Klock streets, it was announced following the sale of the site to Fred Wehrenberg by the Federer Realty Co. Wehrenberg operates a chain of theaters on the North side. The sale is the latest large building project on South Grand boulevard developed by the Federer Realty Co.

The theater, which will occupy the rear portion of the lot, will be 72 feet wide by 150 feet long and will include a modern stage with dressing rooms, fly galleries and equipment for vaudeville and other theatrical performances.

The auditorium will have a seating capacity of 1500 persons on one floor and 750 seats in the balcony, making a total seating capacity of 2250. There will be lounging spaces, a foyer and rest rooms for the accommodation of the public.

Entrance to the theater will be from Grand boulevard through an arcade and lobby with groined and domed ceiling.

The interior will be richly decorated, paneled and beamed. The procenium arch will be of modern design, and at each end of the arch there will be enriched niches and grilles, hiding from view the concert organ, the keyboard of which will be placed in the spacious orchestra pit.

The front portion of the lot will be occupied by seven stores, above which will be nine modern apartments of five and six rooms each. The stores will be separated from the theater by an arcade and promenade.

The entire structure will be fireproof, and comfort and convenience to the public will be the main consideration in the design.

The exterior will be of brick and terra cotta and of modern Tudor architecture, resting on a base of highly polished Missouri red granite.

The supervision of the building will be in the hands of Otto J. Krieg, architect, who has prepared also the drawings and specifications.

Work will be started at an early date. The total cost of the improvement is estimated at $500,000.

FOX NOT TO BUILD OLIVE STREET THEATER

No Fox movie theater is planned for the site fronting on both Olive and Pine streets, between Twelfth boulevard and Thirteenth street, which has been purchased for a reported consideration of aproximately $350,000 by A. M. Frumberg, attorney, and Benjamin G. Brinkman, president of the Forest Park Highlands Amusement Co.

In reply to a query from the Post-Dispatch, Frumberg, who is in New York, wired:

"Fox Theaters Corporation not involved or interested directly of indirectly in our acquisition of Olive and Pine street properties. Recognizing future of that locality, same was acquired for improvement and investment, especially in view of Missouri Pacific improvement."

The site adjoins on the east the proposed Missouri Pacific office building and on the west a proposed hotel structure. Frumberg is St. Louis representative of William Fox, the motion picture producer, and recently acquired a site at Grand and Washington boulevards for which a Fox Theater is planned.

Maritz & Young, architects, have been engaged by Monheimer for the erection of his new home.

"ASK THE FAMILY WHO LIVES IN ONE"

When we sought a slogan for advertising

MAJESTIC HOMES

We selected the one above, because it puts our homes through the acid test.

"The Family Who Lives in One" Knows:

1st—That they have a home correctly designed by an architect.
2nd—Well built, of best materials by competent mechanics.
3rd—A large lot, in a wonderful community of homes.
4th—All public improvements completed and paid for.
5th—And, final. They got their money's worth and a square deal. The verdict of the several hundred families owning

MAJESTIC HOMES

Should convince prospective buyers of the value of our properties. See the new display bungalow at

FOR SALE AND FOR RENT
THIS MODERN DUPLEX HOME
(Fifteen other Duplexes to select from)
(One sold past week)

Buy this home. Live here rent free, interest free, because the rent you receive from the other half will entirely pay for the home within a few years, and you, in the meantime, are living rent free and interest free.

You have all of the privacy of the finest home, plus all of the conveniences of the finest apartment. Everything practically automatic.

Separate entrances, separate drives, separate garages, each for two machines, separate yards for the children.

You can afford the single home. Everyone can afford a duplex home, as every dollar paid on a duplex continues to earn 6% interest for you. Your money isn't dead, it isn't dead, it doesn't go out of circulation when you own a duplex. On the other hand, all money you invest in a single home goes out of circulation—is dead so far as you are concerned.

Every thousand dollars you put in a duplex is the same as if you were to buy a thousand dollars of the best 6% bonds. You get the 6% in the form of a rent check each month from the other half of the house.

Visit Davis Place. There the 22 beautiful duplexes already built. Let us tell you of the new duplexes starting and soon to start.

The duplex has already swept the East. It is the biggest idea that has ever come to St. Louis.

The modern duplex solves the ever increasing high cost of living.

Live in Davis Place, the social and educational center of St. Louis, in the Wydown Boulevard district, adjoining the polo grounds development. Five minutes west of Forest Park. Two minutes west of the millionaire colony of Brentmoor, Forest Ridge and West Brentmoor.

In Davis Place you have no soft coal smoke, no garbage wagons, no out-of-date alleys cans with the big green fly that brings infantile paralysis to babies. You have clean, noiseless concrete streets, two car lines, busses to take and bring the children from school.

There are thousands of business men in St. Louis who have prosperous businesses—who want their families to have the best social and educational environment.

In a Davis Place duplex home, your children associate with the children of the best families—you have as neighbors the business and professional men you meet downtown—you have a real home, yet your home does not tie up capital you should be receiving an income from.

Home sites have already been purchased in Davis Place by bankers, manufacturers, lawyers, doctors, merchants, professional men, successful business men for duplex homes costing from $20,000 to $35,000 each.

Visit Davis Place any evening (beautiful ride) or come next Sunday and see why these men are turning from the expensive single dwelling to the modern duplex home with an income.

Owing to Hanley Road being improved, for the present drive to Clayton Court-house, then south four blocks.

WILHELM OPPOSED WAR, ASSERTION OF ANTI-MONARCHIST

Had No Hand in Country's Foreign Policy, Germany's Envoy to Institute of Politics Declares.

KAISER A COWARD, MILITARISTS SAID

Jugo-Slavian Minister and Bulgarian Diplomat Clash Over Balkans Issue—Deflation Hazard Stressed.

By the Associated Press.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 14.—The assertion that former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany was not responsible for his country's pre-war foreign policy and even jeopardized the security of his throne by striving for peace, was made here tonight by Dr. Menelsohn Bartholdy, German Republican and anti-Monarchist, at the Institute of Politics. Dr. Menelsohn Bartholdy, who was a member of the German Peace Delegation in 1919, is editing the documents from the secret archives of the German Foreign Office.

"I hold no brief to the Emperor," he said. "I have been brought up as a Republican, but I am bound in justice to say that Wilhelm II, as the documents show him, was a man who strove for peace as hard as any man of his time did. He strove so much for peace that the militarists called him a coward, and more than once planned to depose him.

Wilhelm in Dark.

"There is absolutely no doubt about the foreign office having had complete control over the questions of which documents were to be laid before the Emperor and which were to be kept from him. He never got the reports of the ambassadors directly, and in the last years before the war, he was often kept in the dark for weeks and months and complained bitterly about it."

A heated dispute over the Balkan issue occurred earlier today between Dr. A. T. Pavichich, Jugo-Slavian Minister to the United States, and Stefan Panaretoff, former Bulgarian Minister. The clash occurred during a discussion of the problem of minorities in Macedonia.

Panaretoff had pictured the condition of expatriated Bulgarians, which he said numbered a million, in the Macedonia territory now part of Jugo-Slavia, and concluded with an expression that the difficulty might be solved by a Bulgarian-Jugo-Slavia alliance.

Bulgarians Extinct.

Pavichich declared that the "million" Bulgarians now in Jugo-Slavia numbered, in reality, "some two or three hundred thousand." He added that Bulgaria had never had a hold in Macedonia, anyway, except during the war, and that then she had "distinguished herself by committing crimes and blunders." As a matter of fact, he said, there no longer existed any Bulgarian people. Ethnologically, Macedonia belonged to Jugo-Slavia, he contended, and, in support of his contention, said the only Bulgarian words existing in Macedonia were confined to the names of 10 towns.

After the discussion had ended, Dr. J. S. Reeves, chairman of the conference, remarked that the influence of the League of Nations in harmonizing the various racial and cultural minorities in Europe was manifestly not highly successful."

A breakdown of Chile's world monopoly of the nitrates will ultimately result through the manufacture of synthetical nitrates, Dr. H. A. Curtis, professor of chemical engineering at Yale, predicted in an address before the institute. This, he said, would result in a reduction of the high export tax by which the Chilean industry has so long been maintained. He pointed to a reduction of 5 per cent in the price of Chilean nitrate for the coming year and said there would be other reductions. Chile in the past has produced 95 per cent of the world's supply of nitrates, he said, and the country's income from this source has paid from one-third to two-thirds of the Government's costs.

Speaks on Inflation.

The world might have profited greatly from Germany's experience in inflation, but it does not seem to have taken the lesson deeply to heart, Dr. Moritz J. Bohn, German economist, said today.

"Inflation brought the world near the end of the capitalist cycle, for it put a premium on wasting," he said. "The continued fall in value of money meant that the only way to save it was to spend it immediately, but capitalism is dependent on saving. Germany can say with conviction, a man all the way from the garden to carry out the instructions. The high official's wife wrote that the directions not only saved their hedge, but had saved that of cost of their friends.

Another instance of the high repute of Shaw's Garden among scientists was a bit of "buck passing" by a professor in a famous Eastern women's college. Someone had sent her an alga (a stagnant water minutia) to identify. "I've never seen it before," she wrote, "and so I'm taking the liberty of sending it to you. You undoubtedly will recognize it."

A man in Ohio wrote for a species of maple which he could take home to a 5000-foot altitude in Guatemala. An Australian importer wrote for information on cactus. A nationally known Wall Street broker, right in the midst of famous Eastern gardens, asked what to do for his dahlias. The University of California wrote for data on muskmelons. Russian and Polish and Belgian savants sent queries on abstruse scientific subjects.

And a prominent St. Louisan wrote for a way to get rid of "chiggers" on his country place. For the benefit of interested readers the reply partly is quoted: "Write to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, for Circular No. 77 of the Bureau of Entomology."

Queer Letters on File.

But the prizes of them all are in what Mrs. Leigh might well call her "nut" file, even if her scientific training should constrain her to use the botanical name for "nut." The first letter starts out, "In regards to Khrisnamurti—" and says that the writer has decided on Dec. 29 for her "register," whatever that means—"so if we never have another summer I can't help it."

A man wrote from Pueblo that he heard the garden was looking for men to trap animals, and would they please tell him the place, climate, wages and kind of animals. Another in Arapahoe, Ok., naively remarking that he got the address from "a traveling man," wrote, "We wanted to buy some swans for our chicken fram."

A letter on hospital stationery was: "Enclosed is a branch of a hybrid of the Bokhara clover growing on the grounds of this institution. The plant is about two feet tall and has numerous branches in full flower."

A day or two later another followed, beginning, "I beg to offer an apology for having sent you a speciment of alfalfa as a hybrid of the Bokhara species of clover."

Shaw's Garden a Clearing House for Information

Questions Range From How to Hang Wall Paper to Method of Killing Pests in Cabinet Member's Hedge.

From Caucasia and Korea, from Belgium and Australia, from Poland and Panama and Peru, dozens of queries pour into Shaw's Garden every month on every subject from how to hang the bathroom wall paper to whether the director ever saw a placocephalus kewensis.

The description of the little animal with the long name—beginning hammer-headed snail, 10 to 15 inches long, with seven peculiar longitudinal stripes"—sounded like a cross between a mad puppy and a severe case of the "D. T.'s." But that question was easier to answer than the other. The director, Dr. George T. Moore, hadn't seen one.

Evidently that wall paper had precipitated a family argument. And it almost precipitated another in Dr. Moore's office. The design was recognizably floral, but beyond that—well, it was hard to say. "It must be a fuchsia," said one of his assistants, holding it so that the flowers appeared pendant. "No," said another, turning it so that the flowers were upright, "that's a tulip."

How to Hang Wall Paper.

Dr. Moore settled both arguments. He wrote to the "anxious husband" that certain parts of the plant appeared to be designed after members of the lily family—different members, he might have added—and hence the paper should be put on so that the flowers appeared upright.

By far the most of the queries, however, are just as serious to Shaw's Garden as all of them seem to be to those who ask. And all of them—upward of 50 a month—are answered seriously and carefully by the director himself, or, in his absence, by his secretary, Mrs. Katherine H. Leigh.

Striking as an example of the appreciation of that courtesy is the case of C. W. Powell, whose gift of his matchless collection of Panamanian varieties at Balboa, Panama, recently made the Shaw's Garden collection of orchids the world's greatest. Cordial relations between Powell and the garden began when he sent photographs of orchids here for identification and they were identified. It was a difficult task from photographs only, and other authorities to whom he had sent them had shirked it.

Professor Passes Buck.

A Cabinet member asked how to kill the pests which were destroying his fine hedge, remarking that he could find nobody at Washington who seemed to know anything about it. The only reference to that in the garden's answer, after telling what to do, was to remark sauvely that surely, with all the experts available on Washington, it would not be necessary to send

JESUIT MISSION STARTS TO INDIA TONIGHT

Two Priests and Three Seminarians in Party From From St. Louis.

A party of Jesuit fathers and seminarians will depart for the mission fields of India tonight, after a solemn farewell service at St. Francis Xavier (College) Church. They will go by way of Bombay to the District of Patna, known as the Land of the Lotus Eaters, 11,000 miles from St. Louis.

The Rev. Father Edward O'Leary, senior member of the party, spent last week visiting relatives in Springfield, Ill. He was ordained to the priesthood a year ago by The Bishop of Patna, Rt. Rev. Louis Van Hoeck, S. J., when that prelate was visiting here. The other priest, the Rev. Raymond Conway, was ordained two months ago.

One of the seminarians, Francis Stoy, a native of Chicago, has almost completed his theological studies and will have the distinction of being the first American ordained among the Hindus. Another, Paul Dent, is a native of Dent County, Missouri, and a member of the family from which that county received its name, and of which Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, wife of the General and President, was a member. He will study at Kurseong, where Belgian missionaries have a mission. James Gibbons, whose family lives at Edina, Mo., and who is a relative of Cardinal Gibbons, is studying at Kurseong, where he went last summer.

The missionaries will be joined at London on their way to India by the Rev. Father Carl Miller, formerly professor of physics at St. Louis University.

A colony of former St. Louis University men already exists in Northern India, but Messrs. Gibbons, Dent and Stoy are the first to go there before ordination to the priesthood. This sending of younger men is in accord with the wishes of Bishop Van Heock, who wants his missionaries to master the native languages before beginning their work.

At the farewell services tonight, Bishop Joseph A. Murphy of British Honduras will officiate, and the Rev. Michael O'Connor will preach a sermon. Among those in the sanctuary will be Brother Edward J. Meier and Brother George Stern, who are leaving for missions among the North American Indians.

WOULD LOWER RATE OF NEGRO HOMICIDES

Coroner Vitt Calls Meeting of Leaders to Discuss Means to Check Slayings.

Means to lower the homicide rate among St. Louis Negroes were considered yesterday at a conference in the Coroner's office, which was attended by Coroner Vitt, Prof. Frank Williams, principal of Sumner High School for Negroes, and J. E. Mitchell, managing editor of the St. Louis Argus, a weekly newspaper for Negroes.

The conference was held at the suggestion of Coroner Vitt, because of the increasing proportion of killings among Negroes this year, to which attention was called in Post-Dispatch news articles and editorials.

Negroes, making up about one-tenth of the city's population, figured in 46 of the 72 homicides reported to date in 1926, Dr. Vitt pointed out. These figures do not include killings by motor vehicles.

"We agreed that something should be done, and that a campaign of education probably would be best," Coroner Vitt told reporters when the conference ended.

"Murder doesn't pay, and when that fact becomes known, there may be fewer murders. Most of the killings have been over trivial things. A man quarrels over 50 cents in a crap game and is stabbed. A man looks at another man's wife and is shot. The man who stabs or shoots goes to prison for 20 years or so, maybe for life."

FENG TROOPS ROUTED FROM NANKOW PASS

Allied Forces Under Wu Pei-Fu Claim Important Victory Over Pekin Troops.

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, Aug. 14.—An important victory was claimed today for the troops of Marshals Wu Pei-Fu and Chang Tso-Lin over the national armies of the Pekin Government, which the allied forces overthrew last April. Flags flew in Pekin in celebration of the allies' claim of capture of Nankow Pass, key to the Kuomintung position in the mountains north and west of the capital.

Entrenched at the pass, 26 miles from Pekin, from which they were driven when the Government dominated by their commander, Feng Yu-Hsiang was deposed, the Kuomintung have stubbornly resisted efforts to dislodge and disperse them. Feng abandoned his troops, going to Moscow, but able commanders replaced him and the Kuomintung have been reported well equipped and trained, with supplies reaching them from Russian sources through Mongolia to Kalgan, their base.

The second Mrs. Kresge. Once she sued the 5-and-10 cent magnate for $7,000,000.

Love flew out the window when Wealth came in the door

SEBASTIAN KRESGE PAID TWO BITS FOR A LUNCH, AND TWO MILLION DOLLARS FOR A ROMANCE

The Multimillionaire Whose Fortune Came in 5 and 10 Cent Pieces Was Divorced by His First Wife After They Had Lived Together More Than a Quarter of a Century. Then He Married an Actress. Now He Is Divorcing Her. It Costs Lots of Money.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Michigan.

SEBASTIAN KRESGE, nickel and dime store impressario, financier to the extent of $150,000,000, it is reputed, belaborer of the thirsty wets through his dollars and ministrations with the Antisaloon League — this sometime hardware salesman, who hoisted himself from nothing to his present financial eminence, is about to enter the divorce court for the second time in three years. That is a pretty good record, even for a multimillionaire.

The story of Sebastian Kresge is typically American. He was born without anything. He walked miles to school. He started in as a salesman, made money enough to start his first 5-and-10, married his first wife out of his own store. He championed prohibition. High in his fifties, father of five children, his wife divorced him. Whereupon he married a woman much younger than himself, connected with the stage. The difficulties of this marriage arose from the fact the wife didn't get all the money she thought her millionaire ought to transfer to her. And now the petition for their divorce is waiting the action of the court. The story is as typically 100-per-cent American as any Horatio Alger would have written if his literary romances had taken him beyond the age of adolescence.

Sebastian Kresge was born in Bald Mount, Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania, July 31, 1867, making the gentleman 59 years old at present writing. He went to the grade school in his vicinity, walking as many as six miles in the morning and six miles in the evening to get the benefits that his school offered. A little later he taught at one of these small schools, his monthly remuneration being $22. Then, seeing a chance for greater financial prosperity, he gave up pedagogy for the less idealistic life of a grocery store clerk, but one that netted him $28 each month. At odd times he also took the handles of a plow on the farm of his parents, who, like so many others in that part of Pennsylvania, were of Dutch descent.

REACHED the age of 21, Kresge heard the call of merchandising. He took himself to a commercial school, and there for a year he studied those things which were designed to turn one out as a worthy addition to the salesman's art. Finished with his business curriculum, he got a job as salesman of something one place, salesman of something altogether different another place; he held many salesmanships at many places. Finally, he got a job as drummer for a tinware concern. It is an historical monument to his thrift that in five years, in this capacity, he managed to save $8000.

Kresge, his $8000 in his pocket, thought it was high time to get out for himself. He made for Memphis, Tennessee, and in partnership with J. G. McCrory, there, in 1897, set up his first 5-and-10-cent store.

Now, employed in this store was a young woman called Anna Harvey. She was 18 years old and her job was clerking. But, not satisfied with that, she took up, on the side, the study of accounting, and soon rose to the more dignified position of cashier. Whether this suggestion of ambition first caught the eye of the ambitious Kresge, or whether the proprietor was touched by a more tender feeling is unknown. Regardless, Kresge married his cashier before the nickel and dime store had its first audit.

The Memphis store prospered. Its first year's success was enough to cause Kresge and his partner to think of greater things. They set up another 5-and-10 in Detroit. A year later Kresge became sole owner of the business.

THE Kresges then left Memphis and made their home in Detroit. From this city, as his headquarters, Kresge directed his nickel and dime industry. One city after another was invaded by his bazars; soon they had entered into those municipalities designated only as towns. The string grew like the chapter list of a new and ambitious college fraternity. Soon the low-price emporiums were everywhere.

Before long the erstwhile farm boy was counting his money in the hundred thousands; before long he was figuring it in the millions; it grew with such rapidity that as time went on it became no easy matter to count it. Each year his cheap-rate argosy made him richer.

The Kresge fortunes grew, and so did the Kresge family. Five children were born. The Kresges, husband and wife, got to be known as religious leaders. Kresge was made vice president of the Methodist Union of Detroit. The war came, and Kresge was a director of the National War Council of the Y. M. C. A. He was a leader in the Methodist Centenary movement. He gave the Antisaloon League huge sums. When a national civilian vigilance organization was formed, in 1921, to aid the Government in trying to enforce prohibition, Kresge was the chairman of the Vigilance Committee, sometimes referred to by not so ardent sympathizers of the dry amendment as the "Snoopers' League." The Antisaloon League, creating a Manufacture and Business Committee, chose Kresge for its chairman. In that capacity Kresge, in a letter, asked for help "to keep the liquor bloodsucker off decent trade."

But the emperor of the fives and tens did not so far outdo his wife in religious endeavors and the problems of society. She became an officer of the Northwestern Branch of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. And she founded a home for self-supporting girls in Detroit.

Billy Sunday, on one occasion, coming here for a two months' stay, during which he hoped to convince legions of Detroiters that the sawdust trail was the only path, was hailed by the Kresges. They surrendered their home to Sunday and his party and found quarters elsewhere.

It was 1923. The Kresge stores numbered more than 200. They were not his all. He had acquired large interests in several department stores in big cities. The oldest child was of age, the youngest, 12. The Kresges had been married 26 years. One day Mrs. Anna Kresge filed suit for divorce.

MRS. KRESGE'S action created a stir and subsequent gossip not only within the confines of this city but over the whole country as well. Kresge, the gentleman of the religious leanings and social reform inclinations, had been well heralded. It didn't seem possible that any woman could want to divorce him. But want to divorce him Mrs. Anna Kresge certainly did.

For, she alleged, he was moody and morose. There were even times, said she, when he refused to speak to her; he ignored her guests, and refused to be concerned with the care of his five children. On two occasions, the lady declared, Mr. Kresge left his home, once taking up his residence in a downtown hotel. So, Mrs. Kresge contended, what with his sullen silences, frequent evenings spent with him without any conversation, what with his nagging and scolding and his finding fault with the manner in which she brought up her children, she'd had enough of him.

Another photograph of Doris Mercer Kresge.

The pair were divorced in January, 1924. Mrs. Kresge got the half-million dollar Detroit home and other holdings which brought her settlement, according to estimates at that time, up to about $25,000,000, this settlement being made out of court. The 5-and-10 man didn't appear at the trial; the proceedings were not contested. When the case was heard, he was living in Detroit. Soon after he departed for New York.

About this time Kresge's friends began to notice a change in the gentleman's manners, habits and conversation. Sebastian Kresge, who had declared that 25 cents was enough for any man to spend for lunch, and who boasted he never spent more than that himself, suddenly became the proud owner of 14 new suits of clothes. This same Kresge, whose conversation in days of yore had been almost exclusively confined to business, prohibition and religion, was heard now to talk almost exclusively of novels, plays and music. Music, especially, seemed to get his attention. It became so, it is told, that the names of Puccini and Bizet crossed his lips more often than the name of Wayne B. Wheeler.

What, wondered Kresge's friends, could the reason be and how had it happened? It was not long before they found out.

Three months after Kresge had been divorced by his wife he married Miss Doris Mercer, age 31, actress and singer, in her New York apartment. The first Mrs. Kresge, told of it, smiled and said: "I am very, very sorry for Mr. Kresge. He ought to know, if he ever used his powers of observation, what happens when May and December marry." Then she continued, "I have known about her for almost two years, so I'm not so surprised as I might have been. Oh, well, I hope he's happy. I've been happier since my divorce than I had been in years."

The new Mrs. Kresge was a comely creature, a woman of unusually fair complexion, with black eyes and hair. She was the daughter of an oil operator, one time a Pittsburg steel plant superintendent, and in Pittsburg she spent her girlhood. When she was quite young, she and a young man, a son of a former partner of Andrew Carnegie, became much enamoured of each other and decided to get married. Came parental objections and Doris ran away from home.

Her father went searching for her and found his truant daughter in New York, playing a minor part in something called "The Earl and the Girl." He took her away from Broadway and put her in the Episcopal County Home at Germantown, Pennsylvania. Before long she ran away from there and went back to Pittsburg.

When she was 18 she did get married. She married Percival D. Harden, publisher of a Washington weekly that devoted itself to social gossip. She and her husband were divorced in 1919 and she took back her maiden name.

The brother of Kresge's bride was for some time the millionaire's secretary. It was through him that the staunch Antisaloon Leaguer met Doris Mercer, the meeting taking place at a dinner party at a New York hotel.

Once married, Kresge and the new Mrs. Kresge set out on their honeymoon. They made for the Adirondacks, then Atlantic City, from there to Detroit. In Detroit they stayed only a short time, but long enough for Kresge to take his lady for a drive around the city and point out the house he had given to his former wife. Then they went back to New York and Kresge joined the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, the church attended by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Asked about her romance, Mrs. Kresge, second, had this to say:

"MOST women whose people have comfortable incomes have no serious purpose in life. I have a serious purpose — my music. This attracted Mr. Kresge, and our friendship from the first was based on love of certain bits of opera. We are of one accord, and Mr. Kresge is as interested in my voice as I am. It is the hope of both Mr. Kresge and myself that I may sing some of the roles we both love. I am studying constantly, just as I have done all my life. Music to me has always been my one object in life. I always preferred study to golf and bridge."

Mrs. Kresge went on to relate that she had studied in Florence and Paris, that she had mastered the roles of "Thais" and "Tosca," and that she was just about to enter on the study of "Carmen."

It looked like life for the Kresges was going to be one long, grand song.

But it wasn't. For they had hardly been married a year when Doris Mercer Kresge went into court one day and entered suit against her husband for the sum of $7,000,000. She said she deserved it. Because, said she, he promised to give her 20,000 shares of his 5-and-10-cent store stock, as a token of love, on their wedding day, if she would marry him, and that 20,000 shares of her husband's stock was worth $10,000,000.

Before her marriage, so went the lady's story, he gave her 2500 shares of Kresge stock. But on the day of their wedding, she related, he arrived at her apartment quite correctly attired for the ceremony, and she awaited him, quite correctly attired for the ceremony, but her future husband, instead of bearing a bouquet, brought two lawyers and a contract. Mrs. Kresge then went on to say this contract provided that instead of receiving the 17,500 shares she thought were coming to her, she was to waive all her dower rights in return for 2500 shares.

At this time, Mrs. Kresge's lawyer said, Kresge patted her affectionately and assured her the rest would be given to her in due time. But, according to Mrs. Kresge's assertions, the 2500 shares mentioned in the contract hadn't been given to her at the time she filed her suit.

Then Mrs. Kresge's barrister went on to tell his client's sad tale. "When she kept reminding him of it," said the legal gentleman, "he kept putting her off. Finally, he said he would turn the stock over to her for a Christmas present. Instead, on Christmas day he brought her a one-pound box of candy and a plush dog, the kind that he sells in his stores.

"Then he said he would give it to her for an Easter present. Having failed to do so, a few days after Easter he packed up his things in the night, while she was sleeping, and went away."

A short time afterward, however, Mrs. Kresge, perhaps thinking $7,000,000 was an awful lot of money, reduced her claim to $1,000,000. Came March of this year and the day set for the trial.

Kresge's counsel got up and said the real question before the Court was, whether or not his client was "to be mulcted out of more millions than he had already been gouged out of by a grasping hand." The attorney also told the Court that Kresge had been "a fool."

But the attorney was by no means through. He next told the Judge that Kresge had brought his wife's brother from Pittsburg to see if he couldn't bring about a reconciliation, and that after considerable negotiations, this brother told Kresge that for $10,000,000 cash his wife might possibly be put in a mood where she would consider reconciliation.

Counsel for Mrs. Kresge then took the floor and related:

THAT Kresge met Mrs. Kresge in 1921 while she was engaged in the study of music. That he asked her how much she needed to complete her studies. That she said $10,000 a year. That Kresge put securities in trust which would net her that income; that when the account was closed in 1923 Kresge took it over in his own name; that Mrs. Kresge had received $146,000 income from the stock up to that time.

The case was going along nicely when suddenly it was adjourned. The Kresges again were to make a stab at reconciliation. They held conferences with the Judge, conferences with their pastors, conferences with their attorneys. Then it was announced that they had reached an agreement. Mrs. Kresge dropped her suit. Kresge said that now Mrs. Kresge was "independent for the rest of her life." Kresge went to his wife's apartment, left a suitcase there, and departed with Mrs. Kresge. It is told Mrs. Kresge settled for about $2,000,000.

But despite pastors, judges, attorneys, regardless of Kresge's calling at his wife's apartment and leaving his suitcase there and both of them departing together, the life of the Kresges failed to prosper. For the other day Kresge filed suit here for divorce from the Mrs. Kresge, second.

That is the typically American story of Sebastian Kresge.

By GUY FORSHEY
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

NEW YORK.

IT IS an international wedding that calls up again the magic name of Barnato. From London comes announcement of the marriage of Carlyle Blackwell, movie Apollo with whose face American screen spectators have long been familiar, to Mrs. Leah Barnato Haxton. Mrs. Haxton is the former wife of Sir Alfred Haxton, who divorced her fifteen months ago, naming Blackwell as corespondent. He alleged that when he returned to England after a trip to this country he found the American screen lover had moved into his London home and established a domicile there with himself as master of the household.

Barnato, Mrs. Haxton's maiden name, was made famous some years before the birth of the young woman who now bears it. Leah Primrose Barnato Haxton is, of course, a world figure as a consequence of her wealth and her ownership of the finest ropes of pearls in existence, but she is important mostly as a daughter of Barney Barnato. She owes her wealth and her opulence of jewelry to that same circumstance.

Mention of her brings at once into review a spectacular and romantic age of history—the gilded age of South Africa. It conjures up again the times when shining gems of great price were picked up by children playing in the sands of Cape Colony or dug from the stucco walls of Boer cottages. From the dusty and crumbling newspaper files of the nineties it calls forth the specter of Barney Barnato to take his place at the head of the column of mighty men and mighty events in the valley of the Vaal River—the "Valley of Diamonds."

NOT much more than a memory is the name of Barney Barnato now, but what a spell it cast in the money markets in those days when the Kaffir boom was at its crest! Mention of it in connection with an enterprise set the investors to speculating wildly. It caused mining shares to rise sometimes as much as 100 per cent within an hour. It caused mining companies with vast capital to be set afloat within ten minutes. From England, the Continent and even the Americas it lured prospectors by the boatload. For Barnato in popular opinion was invested with a magic property akin to that of Croesus. Everything he touched seemed to turn to gold, or, better still, to diamonds. When he came back to London in 1895 to build a five-million-dollar palace in the city where 25 years earlier he had peddled shoestrings and second-hand clothes for a living, he was master of a fortune conservatively estimated at $500,000,000, one of the greatest private fortunes the world ever heard of. Every penny of it he made himself in a little more than 20 years of strenuous trading in the South African diamond fields. He made it with little education to go on and with no capital except the $50 he made doing acrobatic stunts for the amusement of fellow passengers on the boat between London and Cape Town.

In the field of fiction let the Horatio Algers and the Oliver Optics ply their pens with no holds barred and weave with unbridled imagination their tales of miraculous ascents from rags to riches. Let them spin their most incredible yarn and then match if they can the true life story of Barney Barnato, the Whitechapel peddler who became the "Diamond King" of the world; the one-time ragged urchin of the London slums who in later years moved so gorgeously on the stage of the world.

About the only point upon which his contemporary biographers could agree was that he had an extraordinary capacity for making money. No two accounts of his origin and personality were the same. It at last came to be pretty well established that he was the son of a poor Jewish shopkeeper of the East End of London; that his real name wasn't Barnato at all, but Barnett Isaacs; that he left school at the age of 14 and began rustling for himself as an "artful dodger" of the slums; that he was a good boxer, a good actor and in later years the shrewdest of speculators as well as the most notoriously superstitious; that he enjoyed his wealth and gave it away with almost unparalleled generosity, and that he ended his life by leaping off a ship in mid-ocean in 1897.

IT WAS to help his father in the Whitechapel clothing shop that the lad was taken from school before he completed what corresponds to the eighth grade in this country. For a time he peddled old clothes in Petticoat Lane, his specialty being waistcoats. Later he took a turn at cab driving and then worked as a billiard marker. Subsequently he followed the example of his elder brother, Harry, who had become a juggler in cheap circuses and penny gaffs. Discarding the name of Isaacs for that of Barnato, he launched into the uncertain career of Barney Barnato, the itinerant actor and acrobat. He used to carry around with him a piece of carpet which he would spread down to serve as a stage in any side street that seemed inviting. On this he would perform as a contortionist, tumbling and kicking up his heels for the entertainment of such spectators as chanced to stop. And from these he would collect a few pennies. Sometimes he would wrestle or box with any comers who would volunteer their services and occasionally played brief stands with some traveling theatrical troupe. In this way he earned a precarious living, often having difficulty in getting together as many pennies as he later got millions. In 1871 both he and his brother joined a circus at Leeds and there was begun the chain of circumstances that was to send him to South Africa.

It seems that in the circus Harry was assigned to take part in a cannon ball act. This consisted of firing a cannon at a man, bound hand and foot, who was to be jerked out of the line of fire at the moment of the cannon's discharge. Harry's was the responsible duty of manipulating the rope that shifted the living target. Once he became confused and failed to shift the man on time. As a result, the cannon ball plowed a furrow across the target's scalp and nearly killed him. Without waiting to be fired, Harry fled and didn't stop until he had reached Cape Town. When he wrote back two years later advising Barney to follow, the younger brother, then about 21 years old, had saved just about enough money to pay his passage. He would have landed "flat broke" had it not been for the fact that he simply couldn't help making money. As it was, he landed in South Africa with $50.

In 1867, six years before Barney Barnato's arrival, there had been discovered South Africa's first diamond, and with it an empire. The children of a Dutch farmer had picked up the bright pebble as a plaything. From that bit of crystal with which the tow-headed Dutch babies were playing were evolved the mines of Kimberly, the fortune of Barnato, the fortune of Cecil Rhodes, the British South Africa Company, the Dominion of Rhodesia, the Transvaal War and ultimately British rule over an area a third as large as America.

Apparently the pebble was thrown about with the children's toys for several weeks before importance was attached to it. Then one day a farmer named Schalk Van Nelkirk visited the family and noticed the bright plaything. He spoke of it to the mother and she, seeing that he admired the trinket, gave it to him. He took it home and some time afterward showed it to a trader who got possession of it and sent it to experts to be tested. They reported it was a diamond of 21 1-4 carats weight. The trader then sold it to Sir Philip Wodehouse, the Governor, for $2500. With that, the people of Cape Colony began to sit up and take notice. They looked over their children's playthings and stopped giving pebbles away to visitors. It was not long until other diamonds were picked up and still others were purchased from the natives.

IN THE autumn of 1870 some other children did a bit of diamond hunting that resulted in the discovery of the famous Kimberly mine, and the lure that it exercised upon the rest of the world was more than human nature could resist. Miners swarmed in by the thousands and set up their camps until the scene resembled, as one writer put it, a gathering of a hundred of the "Greatest Shows on Earth." The stampede continued a roaring boom. It eclipsed even the memorable American gold rush of '49. By 1873 prospectors were arriving at Cape Town by the shipload from foreign ports and were scurrying away to the desert to scramble every man for himself, in the diggings. With this horde came Barney Barnato.

Harry had already established himself as a diamond trader in a small way. It appears he did not at once take Barney into partnership. It seems, in fact, that the new arrival didn't start trafficking in the precious stones for several months, but devoted himself to trading in wool, feathers, vegetables and anything else that brought grist to the mill. He took part in several theatrical productions and gained a measure of popularity by staging now and then a boxing bout. On the way to Kimberly, he tramped in the dust beside the wagon by day and slept under it at night. At the end of that journey lay his colossal fortune, but he often said he would have turned back had it not been for the fact that he was superstitious. He thought certain bad luck would follow if he turned back from anything he had started and that notion characterized him throughout his life. Even after he had become a multi-millionaire he obeyed it. If on leaving his home or office he found he had left important papers behind, he would send back after them, but never turn back himself, even if it were but a few steps. The only occasion upon which he would retrace his steps was when he had unwittingly passed a blind man. In that case the rule didn't hold good and he would turn back to give away a six-pence.

When he reached the fields, instead of scrambling for a questionable claim, as most of his fellows did, Barney launched into a business of more certain profits. He became a "kopje walloper," a trader who buys diamonds from the sorting tables of the different kopjes (small hills) and turns them to the best profit he can. In this activity he fell in with Louis Cohen and the two commenced a brief partnership.

As capital, Cohen had a hundred pounds and Barney had 10 boxes of cigars which he had taken in a trade. They pooled their resources and started looking for a location. What they found was a tiny unfloored, corrugated iron shanty about six by eight feet which rented for $5 a day. Cohen wasn't in favor of paying so much but Barney talked him into it with the argument that they could make 30 shillings and they took their first "office." Cohen was inside man while Barney went in for the outdoor work, rounding up stock from the sorting tables. They spent 12 months at this, living from hand to mouth until there came a turn of affairs that started them both on the road to wealth. This "turn of affairs" was a broken down horse.

The young traders had one competitor who was prosperous and had a long list of good customers. Daily he drove around the camp with a cart drawn by an aged yellow pony which was so familiar with the route that he stopped in front of every customer's house like a veteran horse of a milk route. One day the old driver appeared driving a young and sprightly horse and a new cart. He had become so prosperous the old outfit would no longer suffice. This was Barney's big opportunity. He located the purchaser of the old horse and bought it, harness, cart and all, for 27 pounds, 10 shillings. The next day he gave it the reins. It made all the accustomed stops and thus located for Barney all the customers of his competitor and he made good use of the information. The venture fairly put him on his feet and a short time afterward he was taken into partnership with Harry.

Three years after Barney's arrival he had amassed about 3000 pounds, and with this he bought four claims well situated for working in the Kimberly mine. By this move he left off merely trading in diamonds and started digging on his own account, severing connections with his former partners. From his diggings he obtained the profitable yield of two and a half carats a ton. Then he put over another shrewd move characteristic of him. Soon after his purchase, the yellow ground known to be diamondiferous gave out and revealed an under stratum of blue rock of great thickness. Examination convinced most of the miners that it contained no diamonds. The difficulties involved in mining in this rock also discouraged many and caused them to sell their claims or abandon them altogether. Here Barney's instinct came to his aid again. When expert engineers said there were no diamonds, Barney said there were and went on buying claims and diggings. In a short time his investment of 3000 pounds was bringing him 1800 pounds a week. He even declared that the deeper the shaft went the bigger the diamonds would be and that the Koh-i-noor would be nothing at all in comparison, but that was one prophecy that was never fulfilled.

YEAR by year he kept adding to his interests until he was the largest holder in the great mine which a short time before had been simply a small hill known as Colesburg kopje. In 1881 he launched his first big organization venture—the Barnato Diamond Mining Company—with a capital of 115,000 pounds. This was a step toward amalgamation of all the interests in the mine. Barnato had seen that a great saving could be effected if all the interests were worked as one and he strove for this end. He gave the unheard-of price of 30,000 pounds a claim for some of his holdings and it was a good investment for it brought him tremendous notoriety. It was an investment in public confidence as well as mining claims. It brought him the nickname of the "Diamond King" and made him known as the most formidable rival of Cecil J. Rhodes of the great De Beers Syndicate.

After much negotiation he and Rhodes joined forces and at the first annual meeting of the joint concern Barnato acted as chairman. In that session his masterly dealing with figures of such magnitude as usually are found only in national budgets won the lasting admiration of Rhodes and got him the reputation of being one of the ablest financiers in the world. He had a profit of 448,905 pounds to declare, and the most sanguine of the shareholders were astonished.

From that time on his fortune rose so rapidly he could scarcely keep track of it. With millions pouring in from the diamond industry, Barney was rich enough eventually to take a vacation, and this he did, visiting the Rand district, where gold had been discovered. As a result of the holiday he made millions more, for he became enthusiastic over the prospects of the gold field and bought up all the mining claims he could find. In the space of a few days he had invested in the Rand to the extent of 2,000,000 pounds. He even planned a large part of the city of Johannesburg himself and held on when others were losing faith. His foresight was well rewarded. He had the Croesus touch and apparently couldn't escape it, but it cannot be said that he ever stumbled blindly upon any of his coups. He made it all by good judgment. His associates declared his grasp of detail was amazing and one who was in constant contact with him said he was never able to floor Barnato with any question about the most minute detail of his business.

Barney Barnato in his great days.

HIS success never changed his good nature. He was bright, merry and witty to the end. He was a strange mixture of a bohemian and a man of business. He enjoyed his wealth and was a fastidious dresser, but withal was domestic in his tastes and devoted to his family. "It was pleasant," wrote Harry S. Raymond in his "Memoir of Barney Barnato," "to see Barnato, when pressed on all sides with work, not unmindful of his children's toys." It is said the only time he ever violated his rule against turning back was when he once went back to the office to get a doll he had bought for his small daughter's birthday. He was also proud of his two sons. In later years when his health was failing and his friends urged him to give up his active life he would refuse with the declaration that he was working for the boys. "When they are grown up and I am no more," he would say, "I want them to be able to point to my photograph and say, 'Ah, that dad of ours, a clever little chap he was.'"

Barnato had many peculiarities. With all his millions he never carried money about with him. Many a time he would turn to his friends and say "Lend me five shillings." But they wouldn't do it. "No, Barney," they would reply, "five pounds if you like, but not five shillings." They knew he would take scrupulous care to return the five pounds but would never refer to the shillings again. It seemed he could think only in terms of large amounts, and that characterized his donations to charity. He gave large sums or none at all. Most of his wealth was given away, millions upon millions going to the system of orphanages he founded under the name of the Barnato Homes. It is recorded that more than 100,000 orphans have been reared in these homes and educated for a life of usefulness.

ACQUAINTANCES declared it was work that killed Barney Barnato and not worry over the reported losses of his investors. He said he had no worries, but he never could find time to get through all his work and he couldn't bear to let a single detail escape him. He had to know all that was going on and he broke down under the strain. For a long time it had been apparent that such a bundle of quivering nerves must snap sooner or later and that either his life or his brain must go.

In 1895 he returned to London and began the construction of a magnificent marble palace in Park Lane, a most aristocratic section of the city, but he was destined never to enjoy its luxury. From the first he seemed to regard the venture with superstitious dread and was obsessed with the popular belief that any millionaire smitten with the house-building mania is a doomed man. The rising mansion came to be widely known as "Barnato's folly," and he himself would remark when exhibiting it to friends, "There it is but I don't think I shall ever live in it."

That was a prophetic utterance. On June 2, 1897, Barnato sailed from Cape Town on the British steamship Scot, bound for Soutnampton. He had been in bad health for months from what had appeared to be a nervous breakdown. His spirits seemed to revive during the first week of the trip, but on the afternoon of June 14, when the ship was nearing Funchal, in the Madeira Islands, 500 miles west of Morocco, he was seized with melancholia and told fellow passengers he meant to end his life. He was walking on the deck attended by two friends when suddenly he wrenched away and leaped overboard. An officer of the vessel leaped after him, but in the heavy sea attempts at rescue were futile and the officer himself was almost drowned. Later Barnato's body was found. It was taken to London and the funeral in Hyde Park on June 20 was one of the greatest ever seen. Police cordons were unable to keep the crowds back and 2000 persons broke through the lines and pressed against the hearse. It almost ended in a riot.

Even the death march of Barney Barnato was strenuous as his life had been.

AUXVASSE, Missouri.

DURING the past few years a woman in her sixties had often visited this village. Age had by no means stolen away all of her good looks; there still remained that which bespoke her notable beauty of years before. Her hair was white, but her dark eyes kept their sparkle. She dressed tastefully, but plainly. Rings didn't bedeck her fingers, no diamond brooch was at her throat.

As she picked her way around Auxvasse, men and women meeting her called out: "Hello, Clem; when did you get back? How's everything out East?" And Clem would stop in her path and grasp the hand of John or Nellie; she'd congratulate them on their new grandson or console them on the death of their sister. And, stepping out of a hay wagon's way, she'd fling a greeting to its farmer-driver, and pass down the street to the home of so-and-so, who was confined to her chair with rheumatism.

A stranger in a village as small as this is certain to attract attention. The girl who had just come in from the farm 10 miles off to work in the notion store would ask: "Who is that?"

"Who is that!" her more sophisticated coworker would exclaim: "Why, that's Mrs. Charles Morse, Clemence Morse, the wife of that New York millionaire. She was born on a farm just outside of town. She comes back here a couple of times a year. To see her nephew and her sister-in-law."

And the girl who had recently chosen Auxvasse for her home would hasten to reply that she'd of course heard of Mrs. Morse a lot. But—her husband had millions. And—as the girl's thoughts floated to the multi-millionaires of Robert W. Chambers and Rupert Hughes—where were all Mrs. Morse's maids and automobiles, and how funny she spoke to everybody just like—well, just like she must have done before she got to be the wife of a multi-millionaire. Then this girl would be told there wasn't anything funny about it; Clem Morse never brought along any maids or automobiles, and Clem Morse spoke to everybody 50 years ago, before she ever left Auxvasse, and she still spoke to them.

CLEMENCE was the daughter of Goodwin Cowles, a Tennessee farmer who had moved to Callaway County, Missouri, in the pioneer days. Cowles settled on a little farm two miles north of Auxvasse, and in a weather-boarded log house his family was born and reared. By the time Clem was four or five the people of the neighborhood declared her the beauty of Callaway County, and by the time she was fourteen the opinion of the people of Callaway was that she was the best-looking girl in Missouri.

Beautiful she was. Of medium height, she had a lovely and charming figure. Her face was of a soft, olive tint, her features intriguing, her eyes black and brilliant. Her beauty was so supreme that mothers of the vicinity, whatever they thought of the good looks of their own daughters and despite any stabs of jealousy Clem's arrival on a scene might have conjured up, could not but admit she was one of thousands. The men of Callaway, perhaps in this respect more forthright, declared the young woman's pulchritude with a medieval fervor.

Clemence was born in 1859. She attended a little log schoolhouse a short distance from her home. Only the most fundamental "grade" subjects were taught there. But one day, when Clem was 15, her mother, a letter in her hand, walked to the door of the Cowles farmhouse and called to Clem to get off that horse she was riding and come in. And Mrs. Cowles told her that she had just got a letter from Clem's uncle, out in California. This uncle had written that he'd grown pretty rich out there on the Pacific coast and he'd like his sister to send one of her four daughters out to him. He'd send the girl to school, and if he liked her she'd be his heiress.

Mrs. Cowles chose her most beautiful daughter to try for this fortune in the West. So Clem was packed up, and off she went to California.

HER uncle put her in a school in San Francisco. She stayed there for a year. But when the year was over Clem and her rich uncle had a disagreement about something or other and that gentleman bought her a ticket, stuck $50 in her hand and packed her off back home.

Clem, however, chose not to go straight back to Callaway County. She'd had a taste of a city, and she liked it. One of her classmates, a Miss Howard, lived in Omaha, and she invited Clem to visit her. Clem did.

This Miss Howard had a brother, a man several years older than herself. According to Clem's stories of later years, he was a handsome young man. And this handsome young man thought his sister's young visitor a most beautiful child. Just before Clemence was ready to leave for the farm in Callaway County, Howard told her he'd send her to school until she had finished if she'd marry him upon her graduation. But Clemence was convinced she'd had all the education she needed; what was more, she was pretty tired of being educated, and she told the handsome young Mr. Howard so. But, said she, she was quite willing to marry him right then and there. And married they were. To San Francisco they went and took up their residence at the old Palace Hotel, then the finest hostelry on the west coast. But Howard's joy with his bride was short-lived. A few months after their arrival in San Francisco he died.

Employed as a clerk at the Palace was one Charles F. Dodge. The little Mrs. Howard, suddenly bereft of her husband, awakened his sympathy, as she did the sympathy of everybody else. But Dodge, sympathetic though he was, soon realized that was not the only emotion that permeated him as far as the young widow was concerned. He told her it wasn't, explained the accompanying emotion, and they were married just a year and a day after Clem's first wedding. It was 1877.

Below—Nine years after he was released from the Federal penitentiary because "he couldn't live more than six months." Morse, the shipping magnate, on the deck of the "Oceana," just after he had hoisted the stars and stripes, a ceremony signifying the opening of the first American line to Bermuda.

The Dodges stayed in San Francisco for a time, and then they started around the country. Dodge prospered. He went to Chicago and became manager of a large hotel there. Chicago was not far from Auxvasse and the Callaway County farm, and Clem, who had got so far out into the world, found her way home for frequent visits.

Dodge continued to prosper. He bought an interest in a Vermont hotel. He made money out of it. He became owner of a hotel in Atlanta, Georgia. He was getting on. The Dodges has been married for more than 10 years now. But soon Clem heard tales about her husband. It seemed his prosperity in no way increased his fidelity. To Mrs. Dodge's ears came stories that her husband, despite her beauty and the acclaim it got from all who saw her, was a man of magnanimous affections. Other ladies there were, it seemed, in Mr. Dodge's life, and Clemence did not take kindly to the information.

She left the gentleman where he was and sallied forth to New York, where one of her sisters now lived. Now Clemence had a new problem to meet. It first had been her good fortune, after leaving the Callaway farm, to be in the good graces of a rich uncle. Next she was the wife of a man in easy circumstances. The husband that followed him progressively prospered during the years of their marriage. But now the still legal Mrs. Dodge, choosing to strike out on her own, found she was in need of money. She set herself up as proprietress of a boarding house in West Forty-fourth street, New York.

She kept at this for a time. And then she heard that Charles W. Morse, the man of many millions, the man whose expresslike financial rise made him the magic figure of the great banking district of Lower Manhattan, was looking for a housekeeper. Morse was a widower. He had four children. He needed somone to run his house. Mrs. Dodge applied for the position and got it.

Morse had come from almost as modest a place in life as had Mrs. Dodge. He was born in Bath, Maine, the son of the boss towboat man of the Kennebec River. Finished high school, the boy wanted to go to college, but the father could see no sense to that. His son had been well enough educated, according to his beliefs; let him go out and work. But the boy would have no such dictation.

HE MADE an agreement with his father to keep the towboat company's books for $1500 a year. Then he got another boy to do the year's work for $500. This left young Morse a profit of $1000 annually, and off he went to Bowdoin College. In 1877 he graduated.

Morse wasted no time in beginning his money-making career. He decided it was due time to exploit the ice fields of Maine. They could be used to supply New York City. His father shipped large quantities of coal by barge and steamer from New York. But these boats always returned to New York empty, obviously a financial loss. Young Morse proposed a partnership with his father. The elder Morse's boats were to continue bringing coal up the river, but going down the river they were to carry ice.

The young man's plans worked so well that by 1881 he felt it was due time he was getting to New York. He had made $50,000 on his first ice contract. He invested in Florida pine lands. He managed to clean up $500,000. Then he began a 10 years' fight to corner the New York ice market. The strategy of his campaign hardly smacked of the unsullied white of purity. He cultivated New York politicians. He got close to Tammany. He became friendly with Mayor Van Wyck. Years later it was discovered that the city administration had rented C. D. Morse & Co. municipal docks at amazingly low figures and had given them contracts for the municipal ice supply. Such doings gave Morse an advantage over his competitors and Morse began ruthlessly to squeeze them out.

By 1890 Morse had cornered the New York ice supply. In 1897 he merged more than 60 ice companies into one corporation, and called it the American Ice Company. Two years later, during the worst heat of the summer, Morse jumped the price of ice from 30 cents to 60 cents a hundred pounds. New York's poor suffered. Morse didn't lower his prices until talk of a Government investigation caused him to drop them down a bit. It was afterwards found that Mayor Van Wyck held a block of American Ice Company stock.

It was into the home of this financial twister that Clemence Dodge came as housekeeper. She had sued Dodge for divorce. In the routine of such things her case was heard. Her husband failed to put in his appearance, and in 1898 Mrs. Dodge became free of her second husband. She then quit Morse's employ and took up her residence at the Hotel Plaza.

When she left the Morse household it is related that Morse discovered the loss of Clemence Dodge, the woman, was even more poignant than the loss of Clemence Dodge, the housekeeper. It was then, according to the story, that Morse realized the lady meant quite a good deal to his personal happiness. The gentleman then laid seige to his erstwhile housekeeper's heart. For three years, it is said, she could arrive at no decision, but in 1901 she figured out the problem to her satisfaction, and to Morse's also, for she married him.

By this time Morse was said to be worth more than $20,000,000. Four great bank combines then existed in lower Manhattan, and Morse controlled one of them.

It appeared as though Clemence Morse's third marriage venture would be a pleasant one. Morse had bought her a fine house on Fifth avenue, and was reported to have spent $200,000 in furbishing it anew. He is said to have tranferred between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 to his wife. The married life of the Morses was getting along splendidly. When, one morning, while Morse and his wife were at breakfast, a man was ushered in, and this man was a process server. Charles F. Dodge had appeared over the horizon, declaring that his wife's divorce was invalid, as he had never been properly notified.

CLEMENCE MORSE immediately left her new home. A hearing of the case was set. Dodge, it was revealed, had fallen on spare days. He had gone from hotel proprietor to small restaurant owner. He had lost that and became a dining car steward. But, awaiting the hearing of his wife's case, he went around New York spending plenty of money. The testimony heard, the marriage of Clemence Dodge and Morse was declared null and void.

Abe Hummel, probably the most notorious of New York's crooked lawyers, now dead, acted for Dodge. After the trial the testimony offered by Hummel was turned over to a grand jury. Dodge made for Texas. Hummel was tried on a perjury charge, was convicted, sent to Blackwell's Island for a year, and disbarred. Where did Dodge get the money for all this business? From an uncle of Morse, it is said; who didn't approve of his nephew's marriage.

Dodge's case blown up, Mrs. Morse went again to her husband. Morse continued to build up his fortune. Then came the panic of 1907. Ice stocks dropped from 63 to 1. The banks Morse controlled found themselves in heavy seas. In a desperate effort to save himself, Morse used $1,200,000 of his depositors' funds held by the National Bank of North America.

The bank was forced into receivership and Morse was indicted for misappropriation. Morse scraped together every cent that remained of his fortune. He resorted to every legal device to save himself from prison. But he was convicted and in 1910 entered the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta to serve a sentence of 15 years.

CHAPTER 4.

IN THOSE years between 1860 and 1870, a small, serious and near-sighted German was learning to be a doctor at the University of Goettingen. His name was Robert Koch. He was a good student, but while he hacked at cadavers he dreamed of going tiger-hunting in the jungle.

Koch wanted to be an explorer, or to be a military surgeon, but when he graduated from the medical college in 1866 he became an interne in a not very interesting insane asylum in Hamburg. Here the echoes of Pasteur's prophecies that there were such things as terrible man-killing microbes hardly reached Koch's ears.

Finally he settled down to practice medicine in a succession of unromantic Prussian villages.

He trekked from one deadly village to another still more uninteresting, until at last he came to Wollstein, in East Prussia, and here, on his twenty-eighth birthday, Mrs. Koch bought him a microscope to play with.

You can hear the good woman say: "Maybe that will take Robert's mind off what he calls his stupid practice . . . perhaps this will satisfy him a little . . . he's always looking at everything with his old magnifying glass . . ."

Koch was poor, he had his nose on the grindstone of a medical practice, all the science he knew was what a common medical course had taught him—and from this, God knows, he had learned nothing whatever about the art of doing experiments; he had no apparatus but Emmy's birthday present, that beloved microscope—everything else he had to invent and fashion out of bits of wood and strings and sealing wax. Worst of all, when he came into the living room from his mice and microscope to tell Frau Koch about the new strange things he had discovered, this good lady wrinkled up her nose and told him:

"But, Robert, you smell so!"

THEN he hit upon a sure way to give mice the fatal disease of anthrax. He hadn't a convenient syringe with which to shoot the poisonous blood into them, but after sundry cursings and the ruin of a number of perfectly good mice he took slivers of wood, cleaned them carefully, heated them in an oven to kill any chance ordinary microbes that might be sticking to them. These slivers he dipped into drops of blood from sheep dead of anthrax, blood filled with the mysterious, motionless threads and rods, and then—heaven knows how he managed to hold his wiggling mouse—he made a little cut with a clean knife at the root of the tail of the mouse, and into this cut he delicately slid the blood-soaked splinter. He dropped his mouse into a separate cage and washed his hands and went off in a kind of conscientious wool-gathering way to see what was wrong with a sick baby . . . "Will that beast, that mouse die of anthrax . . . Your child will be able to go back to school next week, Frau Schmidt. . . . I hope I didn't get any of that anthrax blood into that cut on my finger. . . . " Such was Koch's life.

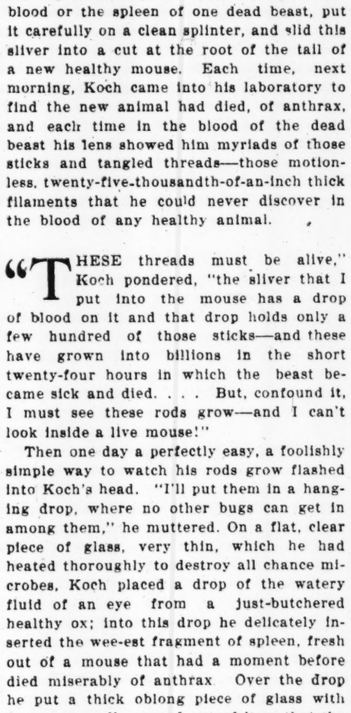
And next morning Koch came into his home-made laboratory—to find the mouse on its back, stiff, its formerly sleek fur standing on end and its whiteness of yesterday turned into a leaden blue, its legs sticking up in the air. He heated his knives, fastened the poor dead creature onto a board, dissected it, opened it down to its liver and lights, peered into every corner of its carcass. "Yes, this looks like the inside of an anthrax sheep . . . see the spleen, how big, how black it is . . . . it almost fills the creature's body . . . ." Swiftly he cut with a clean heated knife into this swollen spleen and put a drop of the blackish ooze from it before his lens. . .

At last he muttered: "They're here, these sticks and threads . . . they are swarming in the body of this mouse, exactly as they were in the drop of dead sheep's blood that I dipped the little sliver in yesterday." Delighted, Koch knew that he had caused in the mouse, so cheap to buy, so easy to handle, the sickness of sheep and cows and men. Then for a month his life became a monotony of one dead mouse after another, as, day after day, he took a drop of the blood or the spleen of one dead beast, put it carefully on a clean splinter, and slid this sliver into a cut at the root of the tail of a new healthy mouse. Each time, next morning, Koch came into his laboratory to find the new animal had died, of anthrax, and each time in the blood of the dead beast his lens showed him myriads of those sticks and tangled threads—those motionless, twenty-five-thousandth-of-an-inch thick filaments that he could never discover in the blood of any healthy animal.

"THESE threads must be alive," Koch pondered, "the sliver that I put into the mouse has a drop of blood on it and that drop holds only a few hundred of those sticks—and these have grown into billions in the short twenty-four hours in which the beast became sick and died. . . . But, confound it, I must see these rods grow—and I can't look inside a live mouse!"

Then one day a perfectly easy, a foolishly simple way to watch his rods grow flashed into Koch's head. "I'll put them in a hanging drop, where no other bugs can get in among them," he muttered. On a flat, clear piece of glass, very thin, which he had heated thoroughly to destroy all chance microbes, Koch placed a drop of the watery fluid of an eye from a just-butchered healthy ox; into this drop he delicately inserted the wee-est fragment of spleen, fresh out of a mouse that had a moment before died miserably of anthrax. Over the drop he put a thick oblong piece of glass with a concave well scooped out of it so that the drop would not be touched. Around this well he had smeared some vaseline to make the thin glass stick to the thick one. Then, dextrously, he turned this simple apparatus upside down, and presto!—here was his hanging drop, his ox-eye fluid with its rod-swarming spleen, imprisoned in the well—away from all other microbes.

Koch did not know it, perhaps, but this—apart from that day when Leeuwenhoek first saw little animals in rain water—was a most important moment in microbe hunting, and in the fight of mankind against death.



The little drifting rods began to grow! Here were two where one had been before. There was one slowly stretching itself out into a tangled endless thread, pushing its snaky way across the whole diameter of the field of the lens—in a couple of hours the dead small chunks of spleen were completely hidden by the myriads of rods, the masses of thread that were like a hopelessly tangled ball of colorless yarn, living yarn—silent, murderous yarn.

"NOW I know that these rods are alive," breathed Koch. "Now I see the way they grow into millions in my poor little mice—in the sheep, in the cows even. One of these rods, these bacilli—he is a billion times smaller than the ox—just one of them maybe gets into an ox, and he doesn't bear any grudge against the ox, he doesn't hate him, but he grows, this bacillus, into millions, everywhere through the big animal, swarming in his lungs and brain, choking his blood-vessels—it is terrible."

He planted a wee bit of his rod-swarming hanging-drop into a fresh, pure drop of the watery fluid of an ox-eye and in every one of these new drops the few rods grew into myriads.

"I have grown these bacilli for eight generations away from any animal, I have grown them pure, apart from any other microbe—there is no part of the dead mouse's spleen, no diseased tissue left in this eighth hanging-drop—only the children of the bacilli that killed the mouse are in it. . . . Will these bacilli still grow in a mouse, or in a sheep, if I inject them—are these threads really the cause of anthrax?"

Carefully Koch smeared a wee bit of his hanging-drop that swarmed with the microbes of the eighth generation—this drop was murky, even to his naked eye, with countless bacilli—he smeared a part of this drop on to a little splinter of wood. Then, with that guardian angel who cares for daring, stumbling, imprudent searchers of nature standing by him, Koch deftly slid this sliver under the skin of a healthy mouse.

The next day Koch was bending nearsightedly over the body of this little creature pinned on his dissecting board; giddy with hope, he was carefully flaming his knives. . . Not three minutes later Koch is seated before his microscope, a bit of the dead creature's spleen between two thin bits of glass. "I've proved it," he whispers, "here are the threads, the rods—those little bacilli from my hanging-drop were just as murderous as the ones right out of the spleen of a dead sheep."

So it was that Koch found in this last mouse exactly the same kind of microbe that he had spied long before—having no idea it was alive—in the blood of the first dead cow he had peered at when his hands were fumbling and his microscope was new. It was precisely the same kind of bacillus that he had nursed so carefully, through long successions of mice, through I do not know how many hanging-drops.

FIRST of all searchers, of all men that ever lived, ahead of the prophet Pasteur, who had blazed the trail for him, Koch had really made sure that one certain kind of microbe causes one definite kind of disease, that miserably small bacilli may be the assassins of formidable animals. He had angled for these impossibly tiny fish, and spied on them without knowing anything at all of their habits, their lurking places, of how hardy they might be or how vicious, of how easy it might be for them to leap upon him from the perfect ambush their invisibility gave them.

Cool and stolid, Koch, now that he had come through these perils never thought himself a hero; he did not even think of publishing his experiments! Today it would be inconceivable for a man to do such magnificent work and discover such momentous secrets, and keep his mouth shut about it.

But Koch plugged on, and it is doubtful whether this hesitating, entirely modest genius of a German country doctor realized the beauty or the importance of his lonely experiments.

AT ONE fantastic jump Koch had soared out of the vast anonymous rank and file of pill-rollers and landed among the most original of the searchers, and the more ingeniously he hunted microbes, the more miserably he tended to the important duties of his practice. Babies in far-off farms howled, but he did not come; peasants, with jumping aches in their teeth, waited sullen hours for him—and at last he had to turn over part of his practice to another doctor.

It was now the year 1876, and Koch was thirty-four years old, and at last he emerged out of the bush of Wollstein, to tell the world—stuttering a little—that it was at last proved that microbes were the cause of disease. Koch put on his best suit and his gold-rimmed spectacles and packed up his microscope, a few hanging-drops in their glass cells, swarming with murderous anthrax bacilli; and besides these things he bundled a cage into the train with him, a cage that bounced a little with several dozen healthy white mice. He took a train for Breslau to exhibit his anthrax microbes and the way they kill mice, and the weird way in which they turn into glassy spores—he wanted to demonstrate these things to old Professor Cohn, the botanist at the University, who had sometimes written him encouraging letters.

Professor Cohn, who had been amazed at the marvelous experiments about which the lonely Koch had written him, old Cohn snickered when he thought of how this greenhorn doctor—who had no idea, himself, of how original he was—would surprise the highbrows of the University. He sent out invitations to the most eminent medicos of the school to come to the first night of Koch's show.

And they came. To hear the unscientific backwoodsman—they came. They came maybe out of friendliness to old Professor Cohn. But Koch didn't lecture—he was never much at talking—instead of telling them that his microbes were the true cause of anthrax, he showed these sophisticated professors. For three days and nights he showed them, taking them in swift steps through those searchings he had sweated at—groping and failing often—for years. Never was there a greater come-down for big-wigs who had arrived prepared to be indulgent to a nobody. Koch never argued once, he never bubbled and raved and made prophecies—but he slipped slivers into mouse tails with an unearthly cleverness, and the experienced professors of pathology opened their eyes to see him handle his spores and bacilli and microscopes like a sixty-year-old master. It was a knock-out!

KOCH packed up Emmy and his household goods and moved to Breslau and was given a job as city physician at $450 a year, and was supposed to eke out his living with private patients that would undoubtedly flock to be treated by such a brilliant man.

So thought Cohn and Cohnheim. But the doorbell of Koch's little office didn't ring, hardly anyone came to ring it, and so Koch learned that it is a great disadvantage for a doctor to be brainy and inquire into the final causes of things. He went back to Wollstein, beaten, and here from 1878 to 1880 he made long jumps ahead in microbe hunting once more—spying on and tracking down the strange sub-visible beings that cause the deadly infections of wounds in animals and in human beings. He learned to stain all kinds of bacilli with different colored dyes, so that the very tiniest microbe would stand out clearly. In some unknown way he saved money enough to buy a camera and stuck its lens against his microscope and learned—no one helping him—how to take pictures of these little creatures.

Meanwhile his friends at Breslau had not forgotten him and in 1880—it was like some bush-leaguer breaking into the big league—he was told by the Government to come to Berlin and be Extraordinary Associate of the Imperial Health Office. Here he was given a fine laboratory and a sudden undreamed-of wealth of apparatus and two assistants and enough money so that he could spend sixteen or eighteen hours of his working day among his stains and tubes and chittering guinea-pigs.

By this time the news of Koch's discoveries had spread to all of the laboratories of Europe and had crossed the ocean and inflamed the doctors of America. The vast exciting Battle of the Germ Theory was on! Every medical man and Professor of Diseases who knew—or thought he knew—the top end from the bottom of a microscope set out to become a microbe hunter. Every week brought glad news of the supposed discovery of some new deadly microbe, surely the assassin of suffering from cancer or typhoid fever or consumption. One enthusiast would shout across continents that he had discovered a kind of pan-germ that caused all diseases from pneumonia to the pip—only to be forgotten for an idiot who might claim that he had proved one disease, let us say consumption, to be the result of the attack of a hundred different species of microbes.

An Outline of 'Microbe Hunters'

TODAY'S installment of Paul de Kruif's true story of pioneers in bacteriology, published by Harcourt, Brace & Co., is the fourth of a series of 12 and describes the memorable battle of the German doctor, Robert Koch, against tuberculosis, anthrax and cholera. Previous chapters have told of Leeuwenhoek's discovery of microbes, of Spallanzani's work in showing that microbes reproduce and multiply, and Pasteur's triumph on the field of Pouilly le Fort.

Following installments will tell again of Pasteur and his fight on hydrophobia, of Roux and Behring and their discovery of diphtheria antitoxin, of Metchnikoff and his great discoveries made almost by accident, of Theobald Smith, the first American microbe hunter; David Bruce, Ross and Grassi, Walter Reed, great foe of yellow fever, and Paul Ehrlich, perhaps the greatest scientist of the group.

So great was the enthusiasm about germs—and the confusion—that Koch's discoveries were in danger of being laughed into obscurity along with the vast magazines full of balderdash that were being printed on the subject of the germ theory.

And yet today we demand with a great hue and cry more laboratories, more microbe hunters, better paid searchers to free us from the diseases that scourge us. How futile! For progress, God must send us a few more infernal marvelous searchers of the kind of Robert Koch.

So Koch set out to spy upon and discover the most vicious of microbes, that mysterious marauder which each year killed one man, woman and child out of every seven that died, in Europe, in America. Koch rolled up his sleeves and wiped his gold-rimmed glasses and set out to hunt down the microbe of tuberculosis.

HE WENT to hospitals everywhere in Berlin and begged the bodies of men or women that had died of consumption; he spent dreary days in deadhouses and every evening before his microscope in his laboratory, where the stillness was broken only by the eerie purrings and scurryings of guinea pigs. He injected the sick tissue from the wasted bodies of consumptives who had died into hundreds of guinea pigs, into rabbits and three dogs, thirteen scratching cats, ten flopping chickens and twelve pigeons. He didn't stop with these wholesale insane inoculations but shot the same kind of deadly cheesy stuff into white mice and rats and field mice and into two marmots. Never in microbe hunting has there been such appalling thoroughness.

"Ach! this is a little hard on the nerves, this work," he muttered (thinking, perhaps, of the lightning move of the paw of one of his cats jabbing the germ-filled syringe needle into his own hand). For Koch, hunting his invisible foes alone, there were so many disagreeable and always imminent possibilities of excitement—of something tragically worse than mere excitement. . . .

But the hand of this completely unheroic looking little microbe hunter never slipped, it just grew drier and more wrinkled and blacker from its incessant baths in the bichloride of mercury—that good bichloride, with which in those old days the groping microbe hunters used to swab down everything, including their own persons. Then, week by week, in all of Koch's meaouwing, crowing, barking, clucking menageries of beasts those small curved bacilli grew into their relentless millions—and one day the animals died, and gave eighteen-hour-days of work to Robert Koch in post-mortems and blear-eyed peerings through the microscope.

"It is only when a man or beast has tuberculosis that I can find these blue-stained rods, these bacilli," Koch told Loeffler and Gaffky. "In healthy animals—I have looked, you know, at hundreds of them—I never find them."

"That means, without doubt, that you have discovered the bacillus that is the cause, Herr Doktor"——

"NO—NOT yet—what I have done might make Pasteur sure, but I am not at all convinced yet. . . . . I have to get these bacilli out of the bodies of my dying animals now . . . grow them on our beef broth jelly, pure colonies of these microbes I must get, and cultivate them for months, away from any living creatures . . . and then, if I inoculate these cultivations into good healthy animals, and they get tuberculosis . . . " and Koch's sober wrinkled face smiled for a moment. Loeffler and Gaffky, ashamed of their jumping at conclusions, went back awed to their own searchings.

Testing every possible combination that his head could invent, Koch set out to try to grow his bacilli pure on beef-broth jelly. He made a dozen different kinds of good soup for them. It was no go!

But one day a reason for his failures popped into Koch's head: "The trouble is that these tubercle bacilli will only grow in the bodies of living creatures—they are maybe almost complete parasites—I must fix a food for them that is as near as possible like the stuff a living animal's body is made of!"

So it was that Koch invented his famous food—blood-serum jelly—for microbes that are too finicky to grow on common provender. He went to string-butchers and got the clear, straw-colored serum from the clotted blood of freshly slaughtered healthy cattle and carefully heated this fluid to kill all the stray microbes that might have fallen into it. Delicately he poured this serum into each one of dozens of narrow test tubes, and placed these on a slant so that there would be a long flat surface on which to smear the sick consumptive tissues. Then ingeniously he heated each tube just hot enough to make the serum set, on a slant, into a clear beautiful jelly.

THAT morning a guinea pig, sadly riddled with tuberculosis, had died. He dissected out of it a couple of the grayish yellow tubercles, and then, with a wire of platinum, he streaked bits of this bacillus-swarming stuff on the moist surface of his serum jelly, on tube after tube of it. Then, with that drawing in and puffing out of breath that comes after a nasty piece of work well done, Koch took his tubes and put them in the oven—at the exact temperature of a guinea-pig's body.

Day after day Koch hurried in the morning to his incubating oven, and took out his tubes and held them close to his gold-rimmed glasses, and saw—nothing.

"Well, I have failed again," he mumbled—it was the fourteenth day after he had planted his consumptive stuff — "every other microbe I have ever grown multiplies into large colonies in a couple of days, but here, confound it—there is nothing, nothing. . . . "

Any other man would have pitched these barren disappointing serum-tubes out, but at this stubbly-haired country doctor's shoulder his familiar demon whispered: "Wait—be patient, my master—you know that tubercle germs sometimes take months, years to kill men. Maybe, too, they grow very slowly in the serum tubes." So Koch

ATHENS, Greece.

Behind photograph, lithograph, or a half-tone reproduction, you will find in a literal hundred of thousands of homes in modern Athens, and scattered throughout Greece today, a portrait of Odisseo Pangalos, son of General Theodore Pangalos, dictator of the Hellenes. The Greek people have a new national hero. It is not because Odisseo Pangalos is the son of their self-appointed and iron-fisted ruler. It is because Odisseo Pangalos has defied his father's autocratic power—for love.

Since Leander swam the Hellespont all Greece has loved a lover. It loves not less this youth whose daring has not only issued challenge to the seas, but has defied the will the nation dares not question.

"You cannot marry Rita Tripliovich," thundered Papa Pangalos. "I have other plans for you."

His son waited not to hear those other plans. "I will marry her, sir," he quietly said.

Odisseo's defiance ended the interview. It was the beginning, fittingly enough, of an Odyssey of love. There were idyllic days in Corfu, where Ulysses himself had journeyed on his Odyssey, near to where that wanderer met fair Nausicaa. There were days of bitter exile on a barren island in the blue Icarian sea. Adventures came by water and by land before the lovers were reunited in Serbia's busy capital for happy days together. There is to be a honeymoon in London.

All's well that ends well. But his interference with the affairs of his family hasn't ended so well for Papa Pangalos, though as dictator he has interfered in the affairs of all Greece with impunity. His dream of dynasty is done. He has brought his country into diplomatic clash with Serbia and has been forced to humble his fierce pride when told to mind his business. His dignity is wounded to the quick. Though he rage inwardly against his people because they venerate his son, he has not dared yet to issue a ukase against that portrait. He knows that everyone in Athens admires his son. He knows that women just adore the boy. And he, whose memory is long, remembers the Greek people have quickly tired of rulers these last years, and that in ancient times they banished Aristides without a better reason than that he was called "the just."

WHAT General Pangalos' plans were with regard to his son he has not told. He is not a man to reveal his plans. He learned a lesson once, when, in 1922, while he was commanding the Greek Army in Thrace, he started to march on and take Constantinople. Possibly he might have succeeded—military experts say he had a chance—had he not told his plan to a trusted lieutenant who informed his enemies in Athens. At that time Premier Venesilos was in Lusanne attempting to negotiate the withdrawal of Turkish power from Europe. But his friends at home smashed Pangalos' plan by which the General had hoped to make himself a national hero as a stepping stone toward seizing the Government of Greece.

Pangalos is like that. Sudden. Quick. Decisive. And always with an eye that is greedy of power. He comes from Albanian stock, although he was born on the classic island of Salamis. The blood of mountain warriors races through his veins. Early he chose to follow a career of soldiering. After study at the military college at Athens he continued his education in Paris, and on the battlefield. Since 1916, when he commanded a regiment on the Macedonian front, his career has been meteoric. With ruthless military tactics he has surprised his enemies, and advanced himself, and with each advancement has consolidated and fortified his political situation.

It is probable that the General had in mind a marriage for his son that would have entrenched him in his place as dictator and possibly have fixed upon the Hellenes a Pangalos dynasty.

But Odisseo had other plans.

Odisseo Pangalos doesn't look like the Greek god of popular conception. But he is handsome, clean-cut, magnetic. His oval face is surmounted by a high, rounded forehead, his eyes are not less frank for their sparkling brilliance. His is a sensitive, well-modeled nose. His mouth is large, generous, firm, yet sensual. His chin, like his father's, is firm-set.

One would think of him more as a northerner than as a Greek. He is simple of manner, generous of spirit, loves sport, hates politics, is a man's man, and perhaps a woman's man, but not a politician's man.

His father designed young Odisseo for the Navy. After preliminary studies in Greek schools he was trained by British naval officers. There is quite a bit of the Englishman reflected in his manner.

Pangalos pere was going to have a son worthy of such a sire. A trained fighter, a commander, an executive, a fit ruler of men. But something happened.

A friend of Odisseo Pangalos entertained for the dictator's son. There was dancing. Not a more select company could modern Athens boast.

AMONG the guests was Rita Tripliovich, who lived with her parents in Athens although she had been born in Dalmatia, and who was of Serbian citizenship. Odisseo Pangalos danced with the beautiful Dalmatian. Before he knew it he was in love. So was Rita Tripliovich.

What a girl! Her profile chiselled as by the hand of Praxiteles, her dark eyes were like deep pools of love and mystery, her wealth of dark brown hair was worthy indeed the poet's phrase—"a woman's crowning glory."

They could not see enough of each other. They became almost inseparable. Young Pangalos asked their daughter's hand of Mlle. Tripliovich's parents. They were honored, and delighted.

"You cannot marry her."

Love laughs at locksmiths—and at parental bans. Odisseo Pangalos continued to see the Dalmatian beauty. "Wait," he would say, "I'll win my father over."

Suddenly, and without warning, came the dictator's order. His son was not to see the girl again. And Papa Pangalos has a way of making sure of things. He'd settle the thing once for all, he thought, by exiling the maid. He sent for two members of his secret service. By his orders they took Rita Tripliovich to the Serbian border. And warned her not to step a foot again on Grecian soil.

To give color of justification to his act, the dictator sent for his son. Rita was a bad girl, he said, utterly unfit to be the bride of a Pangalos. Also he issued a public statement through his private agents. Rita Tripliovich, they announced, had been exiled because she was a spy in the pay of the Russian Bolsheviks.

Dictator Pangalos' bitterest enemies are the Bolsheviks. He really fears their influence. After he had seized the reigns of government and dissolved parliament last September he ordered elections for October. In Saloniki and Xanthia, two of the largest cities outside of Athens, the Communists won. So that when he called Rita Tripliovich an emissary of Red Russia he branded her among his followers with the worst name that he knew.

Gen. Pangalos, who couldn't dictate to his son.

And she, once out of Greece, went right back in again. She took ship for the Island of Corfu. There she found a refuge in the home of Spiridione Skiadas, a millionaire Greek banker whose financial interests are ramified in every direction through the Balkan peninsula.

Nothing cold-hearted about this banker. He not only gave a home to Mlle. Tripliovich, he helped her send word to Odisseo Pangalos of where she was. Odisseo, in service at sea in the Greek navy, was torn between duty to his country, to his father, and to his heart. And he resigned his commission in the Hellenic navy and went at once to join the girl in Corfu.

THEY were idyllically happy. Corfu is an island for love's delights. From the Skiadas villa they looked down on the bursting water front, with its unceasing play of color and of movement, and out across the azure waters of the land-locked harbor. They looked down on the high houses of the city, all creamy stone, or they looked out, and back, at the mountain-peaks behind, thrust up as high as 3000 feet. All was bright buoyancy, golden sun, and clear, breeze-blown transparency of air. It was like a fairyland for those two, a fairyland of blue sea and lilac plains and mountains sometimes blue, or violet, or crimson. They gathered, as they roamed beneath olive trees, mauve and purple anemones, silvern daisies, tiny orange marigolds, scarlet pimpernels, narcissi and grape hyacinths. They saw the banners of the prickly pear flaunted along the highways. They saw, in turn, the orchards flower, almond, peach, plum, pear and apple, the magnolias bloom and the nespoles glow with gold. And they wandered through fields that were—yes, really were—of asphodel, filling the glades of age-old olive woods with mystery-veils of rosy silver.

"He will be very angry," confided Odisseo, "but when he knows I'll go to sea no more, then father will relent."

Meantime good Spiridione Skiadas had been summoned to Belgrade on business. He had smiled farewell at the lovers and kissed his warm-hearted, ample-bosomed wife good-by. It was really important, this business, or he would not go. There was so much of the joy of life in watching these young lovers.

No sooner was he on Serbian soil than Spiridione Skiadas was arrested.

"Orders from Athens," grunted the gendarmes when he demanded an explanation. "The chief will tell you."

It appeared, so the millionaire banker found, that Athens had ordered him held on a charge of fraud. "He is a thief," the telegram had said.

He was taken to Belgrade under constant surveillance. It was all so stupid, he protested. All they had to do was to wire Athens.

But all their wires brought forth no information. Skiadas began to suspect. Then like a flash he knew just what had happened.

"Let me see the chief. I can explain," he said.

He was ushered into the office of that brusque functionary.

"You see," he said. "It was thus. I befriended the girl. She is charming. I helped her get word to the dictator's son. And he quit the navy. Immediately. So you see, Papa Pangalos——"

"TELL that to the marines," said the Chief of Gendarmes, only he used the Serbian equivalent for those words. "You say you are the innocent victim of another man's love affair! How silly! Bankers don't do things like that. And you can bet your last red cent they don't when they're your age. You're a shrewd one, aren't you?

"You say your story is true. Well, General Pangalos says his story is true, also. Now which, as a sensible business man and banker, would you believe?"

At the Skiadas villa in Corfu, meanwhile, the world seemed to have come to an end for the lovers. No sooner was Spiridione Skiadas safely under arrest in Belgrade than a Greek warship entered the harbor of Corfu. Trim, business-like marines marched up to the door of the villa. They seized Mlle. Tripliovich and put her aboard another vessel for the mainland. They took young Pangalos by their strength, and, fighting, he was forced to go, back to their ship. They weighed anchor and steamed out, leaving Mother Skiadas hysterical, heart-broken, ignorant of the fate of the lovers, and certain that the punishment of those who had defied the dictator would be most terrible. Her heart bled at this sort of ending to the young romance she had so lovingly nurtured.

"I shant lose courage," Rita had whispered as the marines tore her from her lover's grasp.

"I shall find you somehow, somewhere," he had called out as he struggled against armed soldiery.

Those messages cheered each of them as, in future days, they brooded in their misery, neither knowing where the other was.

Rita Tripliovich was set ashore at Ragussa, near her Dalmatian birth-place, but the naval vessel that carried Odisseo Pangalos steamed down through the Ionian sea and into the sea of Candia and thence up through the Carpathian Sea and into the Icarian, where it came to anchor off the islet of Lipso and, lowering a boat, set its prisoner ashore.

"IF YOU try to escape from here," the commander said, "you will be captured, thrown into a dungeon, and kept there. Your father is tired of all this nonsense."

"You'll have plenty of time to think it over. And when you have grown wiser if you just write a letter to your father and promise to give up that woman, he will take you back into his family and give you your old naval post again."

"You'll have to live," he added curtly. "Here is something your father said to give you." And he turned on his heel and went back to the boat, never stopping to listen as Odisseo shouted: "I will never give her up."

There was plenty of time to think it over. In all the world the elder Pangalos could scarce have found a more deserted place for the exile of his son.

When the Emperor Domitian, during his persecution of the Christians, sought a place of exile for St. John, the Evangelist, he chose the island of Patmos, where the Book of Revelations was written—a desert island, rocky, barren, brown, wild and desolate. So it is today. And so is the islet of Lipso, just six miles distant, where Odisseo was landed.

Two dozen, perhaps, of square and bleak white buildings rose up from the rocky bluff that guards the tiny harbor. About them clustered the ruins of an older civilization. Here lived a tiny population of fisher-folk who eked out a meager living by diving for sponges. High, back of the tiny town, rose forbidding hills of jagged lava rock, hills covered with heather and scrub arbutus that seemed burned brown by the blazing sunlight. Here young Pangalos lived, with a fisher family, helping with the nets, learning to dive for sponges, as they dived.

Living was cheap. And the youth had money in plenty. But money was of little use. He had to win the fisherman's confidence.

And he did. His manly bearing, his simplicity, his genuine thoughtfulness, his willingness to bear a hand in the daily task of winning a meager living from the sea—all these helped establish him in trust. And at last he managed to persuade one of these fisher-folk to steal across to the mainland of Asiatic Turkey in the night.

His plan was simple. He would get a ship at Smyrna, and thence, sailing through the Dardanelles, the Sea of Marmora and the Bosporus, would enter the Black Sea and land at Kunstendje in Roumania. Thence by rail to Bucharest, the capital. And there he would begin to search for Rita.

Only the daring of his fisher-friend made possible his escape, for the night was shrouded in threatening cloud and the waves ran high as they put forth from Lipso in their little smack for the Turkish coast. For 50 miles there was a fight with wind and wave, and then young Pangalos was landed, drenched to the skin, on Turkish soil in Asia. Now he made his way north to Smyrna, encountering peril, this Greek among hereditary enemies, but finally reached that port in safety and set sail on a little vessel bound for Constantinople. There, landed, he had other misadventures, for he was recognized and it was known to Greeks in the old city of the Sultans that the dictator no longer would give protection to his son. Indeed, only by bribery did he manage to escape from there, for while he waited for the boat some spies had wired to Athens of his presence and trumped up charges were arranged to get him into Greek custody.

At last he was safely in Bucharest, and from thence, with his remaining funds he managed to get into Serbia.

GOOD news awaited him. Skiadas at last was free. He had finally convinced the Serbian authorities that he was an innocent victim of the Greek dictator's hate. More, he knew where Rita was and brought the lovers together.

Skiadas had been busy in other ways as well. He had gained the ear of high Serbian officials. He had pointed out to them that Rita Tripoliovich was a Serbian subject, and that the treatment accorded her by Greece was an outrage.

It mattered not that Dictator Pangalos, through his secret agents, inspired long stories the purpose of which was to prove that Rita was a Russian spy, that the Corfu banker was a thief, and that young Pangalos was a mutinous sailor. Those stories only served to arouse more sympathy for the trio. Belgrade grew indignant.

Then from Athens the cables thundered. The Serbian police must arrest the three at once. They must be sent back to Greece.

Serbia smiled. And then looked firm. Then the Serbian Government dictated a note. It was very polite. It was very diplomatic. But what it said in effect was "mind your own business. Don't interfere with the Serbian police. You'd best leave Serbia alone."

Couched politely was the note, but it meant what it said.

Papa Pangalos retired with what dignity he could muster. His final edict was a message to his son. "You are no longer," he said, "a member of the Pangalos family. You need never ask me for a cent."

And so Odisseo Pangalos became free to wed the woman of his choice. Yet over them hung the threat of danger still. Belgrade is not too far from Athens. Greek agents kept a watchful eye upon the lovers. And Belgrade police hinted that to avoid international difficulties it would be quite as well if the two young folks could find another refuge.

Again was Spiridione Skiadas a fairy godfather.

"I have it," he said. "There is my London office. I need a bright young man with brains and grit to represent me there."

And that is how young Pangalos and his bride will spend their honeymoon in London.

The $10,000,000 Pun, the Plot That Backfired, and—
The Penniless Millionaire Widow

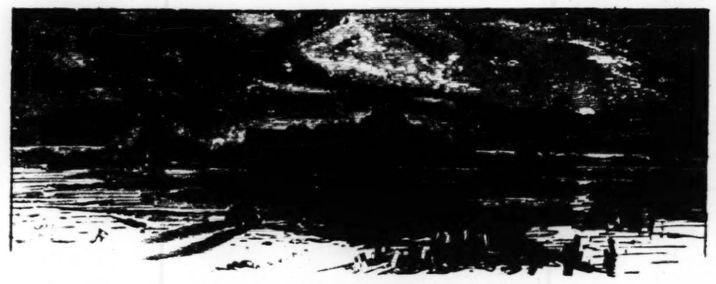
Sir Robert Houston, 35 Times a Millionaire, Tried to Beat the Crown Out of Its Inheritance Tax, and Lady Houston, Involved in the Quaint Laws of the Isle of Jersey, Found Herself Unable to Get a Penny of Her Personal Funds Until She Proved Herself Sane; Shipmaster's Estate Tied Up for a Year and a Day.

Lady Houston, penniless amid millions.

Sir Robert, who tried to save $15,000,000.



The harbor, where the Government seized the yacht.

LONDON, England.

WHEN the late Sir Robert Houston, Baronet and shipping king, hit upon the Island of Jersey as a residence so as to save his estate from possible death taxes to the British Empire and his widow from trouble with the tax collectors he dropped her, as it were, from the frying pan into the fire. For Lady Fanny Houston cannot yet touch one penny of his $35,000,000 estate and it is only by virtue of a recent court decision that she has been freed from the custody of the Jersey courts and is able to spend a single farthing of her ample personal fortune.

When Sir Robert died and left his widow stranded, as it were, at Beaufield Mansion, on the Isle of Jersey, she differed from the ancient mariner in that about her was money, money, everywhere and not one cent to spend. More than that, the Jersey courts, with their quaint, old-time procedure, took possession of the widow. And kept it. In the harbor, not far from her home, was the million-dollar steam yacht, the Liberty, her shipmaster had built. But the courts of Jersey had seized that yacht, confiscating all her papers, lest Lady Fanny should escape by boat from the curious legal machinery which, descending from the days of William the Conqueror, still obtains in the channel islands.

It required the services of world-renowned physicians and brain specialists—among them Sir Thomas Horder, personal physician to the Prince of Wales, and Dr. Joseph Babinski, probably the greatest neurologist in Europe—to testify to Lady Fanny's mental competency, before she was freed from the custody of the courts and permitted even to spend the money which is her own.

"For a year and a day"—so reads the Jersey law—from June 8, this year, until June 9, 1927, not one penny of the estate of the late Sir Robert Houston can be touched, although Lady Houston and George H. Appleton, the shipmaster's business partner, who were the only beneficiaries under the will, were named by that document its executors. And the estate, in the meantime, having passed from their hands into the maw of the Jersey courts, will be administered by those courts, under the petition of a Chicagoan who alleges he is an heir, to protect him—in case he shares in it—if the $35,000,000 estate cannot pay its debts! For a year and a day—at least—Lady Fanny and George H. Appleton must stand and wait. The courts of Jersey will administer the estate.

SARDONIC was the trick Fate played on the dead Sir Robert. Canny, shrewd, cunning, he had devised a way to beat the Empire out of its 60 per cent death duties. He who, in his early years in Parliament, had again and again raised a stentor voice defending the rights of the Crown. He who, in the course of 30 years in the House of Commons, had emptied vials of verbal vitriol upon the offending heads of those who even attempted to evade the payment of what was due the King.

For 20 years Sir Robert had led the assault on tax dodgers. Then, one day, he shouted "Robber!" to Lloyd George—the day the former Premier managed to increase the scale of "death duties," or "inheritance taxes," raising them from the established 40, to 60 per cent, on the estates of millionaires. He announced from his seat in the House his unalterable opposition to such duties. He was bitter. He was caustic. And never after that, so long as he occupied a bench in the House of Commons, did he fail to cry out against England's methods of taxing the rich. Perhaps in those days there entered into his mind his plan to beat the Crown.

He had made what he had—made it by hard work and financial and commercial genius. And to him it was robbery, this plan of the Government's to tak a big part of it away—even though the taking was after he was dead.

SIR ROBERT was born at Bootle, in 1853, his father being a middle-class merchant and well to do. He attended Liverpool College, was apprenticed to a shipbuilder, and at the age of 21 was superintendent of engineering in a Mersey shipyard.

By the time he was 28 years old he had one ship—and the Houston line of steamers had been founded. A year later he organized the firm of R. P. Houston & Company, shippers and merchants to the River Plate. Quick to see opportunity, he sought to extend English commerce first in South America and afterward in South Africa, in the shipping to which he was a pioneer.

He was a fighter, two-fisted, a dominant man. Usually the last to throw off his coat, yet in his earlier years, when every other resource had been exhausted, he did not disdain to argue with his muscles. And he usually won the argument.

When the Boer War came he was, as it were, already on the ground. With his shipping and commercial connections in South Africa, he was able to furnish the British Government everything, from mules to butter—and "laid down." His already considerable fortune grew. Again in the World War he repeated that business strategy and his fortune increased to swollen proportions.

Seven years before the beginning of the Boer War, Houston had determined to enter Parliament. He was elected as a Conservative from the West Toxeth Division of Liverpool, in which he was born, and his political position served to give prestige to the shipping master. But politics did not keep him away from his business. These two—business and politics—were driven tandem in his race to power. When the House of Parliament did not require his attention he was working in his counting house—and working harder than most clerks. He had one purpose—money. And he had one love—his ships. He shunned women, and from society he kept aloof. On his yacht, the Liberty, he spent his vacations, cruising to his different offices in foreign lands to see—as he expressed it—"that all wheels were well oiled." He boasted more than once of having touched at every big port in the world.

Thus he lived, piling up his millions. His ship lines were as nerves, his foreign offices nerve centers, all atingle with the markets and the politics and rumors of the world. And all of these nerves led to a brain—his brain. He was able to anticipate, discount, foresee. The prestige of Parliament helped. He was your "hearts of oak" sort of Briton, true to the traditions of the ships and sea. No wonder in those earlier years in the House of Commons he savagely attacked all those who would seek to withhold from the Crown the taxes which supported a great empire and ruled the seas.

So he lived to man's allotted span. At 69 King George conferred on him a baronetcy. Two years later—he was 71 years old—Sir Robert wanted rest, and he retired from Parliament.

Then, in December, 1924, the British world of politics and shipping and society gasped at the news. Sir Robert Houston, that chronic bachelor, had married.

His wife was Lady Fanny Lucy, widow of the ninth Lord Byron.

The new Lady Houston was one of the first five women to be created a Dame of the British Empire. Sir Robert was her third husband. Born Fanny Lucy Randall, she had married Sir Francis Brinckman in 1883 and divorced him in 1895. Then, in March, 1901, she married the ninth Lord Byron.

Her new husband had just emerged from a two years' fight in the bankruptcy courts, with only a shred of his estate remaining. He had suffered the loss of $250,000 through his association with Mrs. Howard Kingscote, the daughter of a British diplomat, who became known as one of the most remarkable adventuresses of the day.

LONDON had gasped when George Frederick William, Lord Byron, who was quiet and retiring, had become involved in the Kingscote scandal. It gasped again when, almost immediately after his victory in court, he brought home Lady Fanny as his bride. She was poised, serene, oblivious to gossip, and a charming hostess; and their home in London became a social center. For 16 years they lived most happily, and when the ninth Lord Byron died in 1917 his widow inherited his estate.

And now she was married again. Sir Robert Houston had taken his bride for a honeymoon cruise on the Liberty. After a few months they brought the yacht into the harbor of St. Savior's, Isle of Jersey. Near there was Beaufield Mansion, where Sir Robert had chosen to end his days.

When Sir Robert discovered the Channel Islands no one knows. He had visited them, of course, when on vacations while he was yet a boy. Probably the memory of their quaint customs lingered with him. But it is hardly likely that this far-seeing, foreseeing, man of business, who never did anything without a most excellent reason, just chanced to end his days on the Island of Jersey because of boyhood memories.

CERTAINLY he couldn't have been without knowledge of the curious survival of old feudal customs in government, and almost everybody in England knows that from the standpoint of taxation the Channel Islands are the spoiled children of the British Empire. Certainly what everybody knows Sir Robert must have known. And he was scarcely more than settled in Beaufield Mansion before the cunning old shipmaster formally had declared himself a resident of Jersey.

That had its advantages. What everybody didn't know, and Sir Robert did, was this: There were no death duties in Jersey

St. Savior's Church, where the shipmaster was buried.

That island, and the other channel islands, were the personal property of William the Conqueror when he brought over his Normans and mastered England. He held them, too; and they then, in 1066, became a part of the British Empire. British they have remained, despite their nearness to the coast of France and although to this day the people speak French.

Many of the old Norman legal customs still survive in Jersey. Modern British law in the main has not interfered with the ancient form of Norman courts and government. For hundreds of years the islands were difficult of access. Tax-collectors had a hard time getting there. And so Jersey was virtually immune from the necessary evil of Empire taxation. Sir Robert had declared, after the increase in death duties, that not one penny of his fortune would pass into the Empire's treasure chest. So long as Jersey was out of the traveled way and seemingly forgotten, it looked as though his boast would be made good.

For now he was a resident, legally, of the island. To Beaufield Mansion Lady Houston had brought the art of entertainment. Friends high in the social world sought her out there. The mansion was a social capital in little. Its parties became famous; its invitations sought.

Yet entertainment was not upon the lavish scale which perhaps was her desire, for Sir Robert, who had long been ailing, began last winter to decline. On April 14 of this year he died, and was buried in the cemetery of St. Savior's.

What was to become of that $35,000,000 estate?

English newspapers gloated over the fact that under the English law more than $15,000,000 of it would devolve upon the British treasury in the form of death duties.

Others recalled that Sir Robert had once made a will leaving much of his fortune, report said $10,000,000, to Lord Birkenhead, then a bosom politician friend, now Secretary of State for India in the British Cabinet.

Those guesses were wrong. In the last will, made Jan. 19, this year, Sir Robert had left four-fifths of his estate to Lady Houston and one-fifth to his business partner, George H. Appleton.

Then the British press remembered the estrangement of Sir Robert and Lord Birkenhead, and the Cabinet Minister was credited with having perpetrated the most expensive pun in history.

The shipmaster was vain. No denying that. During all his years in the House of Commons he managed to keep his beard a notable blue-black, despite his rapidly advancing age.

And one day he made a speech. A conservative speech. An ultra-conservative speech, which gave offense even to Lord Birkenhead. The latter, in displeasure, referred to the great shipmaster as "the original die hard."

Spoken privately, the joke was too amusing to be kept. It reached Sir Robert's ears. A new will then!

The new will was offered in the Jersey court six days after Sir Robert's death and by that court approved—under the Jersey law which has no death duties.

MORE excitement! There was talk that the British Crown, through the Imperial Treasury, would seek to press the claim for Empire death duties. Here was a threatened crisis. Executor Appleton felt that he needed time. Lady Houston, also an executor of the will, was grief-stricken, and a sufferer from jaundice, and physically and mentally incapable of helping Appleton in his dilemma.

So he played for time. He invoked an ancient Norman law asking the appointment of a curator and electors to have custody of the estate. Moreover, Appleton wanted quick action on his petition for a curator. For another complication had developed.

From Chicago had arrived Cecil Houston Skinner, who said he was a grand-nephew of the late Sir Robert, and the only kin of blood. He sought to establish his own claim to a part of the estate, though he had not been remembered in the will.

Skinner wanted to wrest the estate from the administration of Lady Fanny and Mr. Appleton. He also took advantage of the Jersey law, demanding the procedure of "benefice d'inventaire" which the Royal Court of Jersey, sped on by his Chicago technic, granted on Saturday, May 22. Under the procedure of "benefice d'inventaire" the estate is sequestered by the Island of Jersey and inventoried on the theory, which the possible heir sets up, that it is not of sufficient value to pay the debts against it.

In vain did Appleton and the attorneys for the estate point out that Skinner was no heir—that the will established the heirs. In vain did they show that parliamentary debate and press reports had made it a matter of common knowledge that Sir Robert's estate would pay its debts with $35,000,000 to spare. The Royal Court of Jersey granted the inventory. And—which probably is what Skinner wanted it to do—it took the estate out of the hands of Lady Fanny and her co-executor and put in its own officers as administrators.

Two weeks later the court named S. G. Crill as curator, and he and his electors took custody—not of Lady Fanny's interest in the estate, but of Lady Fanny's every piece of property.

SHE protested. If she had been seriously ill, mentally confused when the petition was filed, she had much recovered before the curator was named. Now though mentally alert she found herself caught in the law's machine and penniless and helpless. She appealed to the court. It held that the curatorship must run for a year and a day. That was the Jersey law.

Her protests had the effect of arousing the court to a more strict realization of its dignity. On June 27 its officers took possession of her yacht, the Liberty, lest she go aboard and escape from their jurisdiction.

She was willing to spend thousands of dollars if necessary to be declared sane. She knew she was sane. So did her friends. So she called in the doctors, Dr. John MacDonald of Edinburgh, her personal physician, Sir W. Arbuthnot Lane, Sir Thomas Horder, Sir Maurice Craig and Dr. Farquhar Bubbard, from London. And if these were not enough, preparing against the possibility that the French-speaking Jerseyites might more likely believe those who spoke their language, she summoned also Dr. Joseph Francois Phillipe Babenski, the great Paris neurologist, and Dr. Pierre Janet of Paris.

All these when they came into court, and the curator and his electors, each and every one, testified that the widow was in her right mind, and a proper person to be free from court restraint.

So on Saturday, July 3, Lady Houston was restored to her civil rights. The estate, however, remains impounded, and under process of inventory. She immediately went aboard the Liberty and proceeded to sea, to travel by her physician's orders, for her health.

Before Lady Fanny set out on her cruise Secretary of the Treasury McNeil announced in the House of Commons that "steps are being taken" by the Government "to establish the validity of Sir Robert's change of domicile."

It was a challenge that Lady Fanny did not fail to answer. "Let the Government seek to collect the death duties," she said, "I for one will not resist it."

So that after all the Empire's treasury may pocket the duties bluff Sir Robert swore he'd never pay.

Came Jane Austen.
He Showed Her Around.
Fulton's Well-known Taxi.
Those Happy Days of Long Ago.

IN THE preceding chapter I told of my first meeting with Jane Austen. The beautiful little English woman had come to our shores in response to an attractive offer from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer people, one of whose officers had spelled out her novel, "Pride and Prejudice," and considered it good material for a seven-reel comedy. Syd Chaplin was at that time with this firm and was slated for the title role.

Miss Austen had a few weeks' time to spare before she was due in Hollywood, and it fell to my lot to entertain her. I postponed my engagement with President Pierce, who I intended to interview with regard to my pension as General in the Spanish War, and placed myself entirely at the disposal of the little authoress. She expressed a desire to see the night life of New York and I organized a party to visit Texas Guinan's. In the party besides myself and Miss Austen, or Janey, as we called her, were Brinck Thorne, then captain of the Yale football nine, and Harry Wills.

(Author's note: Other teams would not play against Mr. Thorne unless he limited himself to eight helpers instead of the regulation ten.)

After two or three rounds of drinks we decided we had had enough and a waiter brought us a check for $22.75. The other two men seemed to have paralysis of the arms, and as I found only $1.50 in my pocket I asked Miss Guinan if she would take my check. She said yes and I made out a check on the Great Neck Trust Co., but knowing my balance there was only $7, I purposely neglected to affix my signature. Miss Guinan's sharp eyes noticed the oversight and asked for my autograph. This piqued Miss Austen, as she was really more famous than I at that time, so to smooth matters over I suggested that we all give Miss Guinan our autographs and start an album for her.

I NEXT took Miss Austen to Albany to meet Governor Al ("Peaches") Smith. The Governor received us with his usual simplicity and said he was a great admirer of Miss Austen's work.

"I thought 'The Green Hat' was a scream," he complimented her.

It was about a month subsequent to my affair with Jane that the world was startled by Robert Fulton's invention of the taxicab.

It is estimated that the earnings of his taxicabs had run well over $50 when they were suddenly cut off by the invention of the horse.

Horses were very uncertain at first. For example, you would bet on one that was a favorite at some such price as 3 to 5 and seemed to have far and away the best chance to win and along would come an 8 to 1 shot and make your horse look like a sucker.

(Editor's note: "Sucker" was a slang invention of the author's, meaning probably in this case, "dub" or "flop.")

The furore over the invention of horses by Thomas A. Edison had no sooner abated than the country was thrown into a new ferment of grape juice by John F. ("Peaches") Hylan's discovery of the subway. Instead of being obliged to pay a nickel for a ride, passengers were sent engraved invitations and the number of same was limited to the seating, or rather, lying down, capacity of the trains—say 40 or 50 individuals who expected to be particularly busy at their office on Monday received subway cards for that day; 40 or 50 others whose busy day was Tuesday were invited to ride that day, and so on through the week.

EACH car was equipped with half a dozen four-poster beds, half a dozen twin beds, three or four easy chairs and a chaise lounge. Later the twin beds were taken out of the equipment because so few twins seemed to be in business in New York; more correctly, many sets of twins were in business, but not in the same line and not particularly busy on the same day. For example, the Kitchell twins, Howell and Growell; they both had offices downtown, but Howell was a fishmonger, with an exclusive Friday trade, while Growell sold welts, and by tacit agreement, out-of-town welt buyers visited New York Mondays only.

(Author's note: What of it?)

At this time Lily Langtry was the toast of New York. Co-starred with the Marx Brothers in "A Texas Steer," she swept Broadway and was next given a job sweeping the cross streets. It became my duty to show her around.

Unlike Jane Austen, who had insisted on visiting the night clubs, Lily wanted to see the city's noon life. Nothing gave her more of a thrill than to lunch at one of the sidewalk tables outside the Pennsylvania Station and watch the zinc workers and hatters at their midday revels.

So a party of four or five of us, usually consisting of H. L. Mencken, the Marx Brothers, Ward and Vokes, Barnum and Bailey, the Duncan Sisters, the Striblings, the Bison City Quartet, the Happiness Boys and the Four Horsemen, besides myself and the Langtry, would daily engage a corner table at Seventh avenue and Thirty-third street and, as I have said, enjoy the antics of the tradesmen out for their noon lark.

At length Mayor Walker asked me to take Lil to Atlantic City, as she had never seen an auction sale. But it happened that just at this period a law had been passed against auctions, said to be the only law ever passed in New Jersey. So all that the Langtry and I could find to do was walk up and down, walk up and down.

"No wonder," she said, "they call this the Bored Walk."

THE MICROBE HUNTERS

did not pitch the tubes out, and on the morning of the fifteenth day he came back to his incubator—to find the velvety surface of the serum jelly covered with tiny glistening specks! Koch reached a trembling hand for his pocket lens, clapped it to his eye and peered at one tube after another, and through his lens these glistening specks swelled out into dry tiny scales.

In a daze Koch pulled the cotton plug out of one of his tubes, mechanically he flamed its mouth in the sputtering blue fire of the Bunsen burner, with a platinum wire he picked off one of these little flaky colonies—they must be microbes—and not knowing how or what, he got them before his microscope.

THEN he knew that he had got to a warm inn on the stony road of his adventure—here they were, countless myriads of these same bacilli, these crooked rods that he had first spied in the lung of the dead workman. They were motionless, but surely multiplying and alive—they were delicate and finicky about their food and feeble in size, but more savage than hordes of Huns and more murderous than ten thousand nests of rattlesnakes.

Insanely, Koch completed this most fantastic test by sticking his microbes from the serum cultivation into—a goldfish.

Days dragged by, weeks passed, and every day Koch walked into his workship in the morning and made straight for the cages and jars that held these momentous animals. The goldfish continued to open and shut his mouth and swim placidly about in his round-bellied bowl. The frogs croaked unconcernedly and the eels kept all of their slippery liveliness; the tortoise now and then stuck his head out of his shell and seemed to wink an eye at Koch, as if to say: "Your tubercle bugs are food for me—give me some more."

But while his injections worked no harm to these creatures, that do not in the course of nature get consumption anyway—at the same time the guineapigs began to droop, to lie pitifully on their sides, gasping. One by one they died, their bodies wasting terribly into tubercles. . .

Now Koch had forged the last link of the chain of his experiments and was ready to give his news to the world: The bacillus, the true cause of tuberculosis, had been trapped, discovered! When suddenly he decided there was one more thing to do.

"Human beings surely must catch these bacilli by inhaling them, in dust or from the coughing of people sick with consumption. I wonder will healthy animals be infected that way, too?" At once Koch began to devise ways of doing this experiment—it was a nasty job. "I'll have to spray the bacilli from my cultivations at the animals," he pondered. But this was a more serious business than turning 10,000 murderers out of jail. . . .

Like the good hunter that he was, he took a chance with the dangers that he couldn't avoid. He built a big box and put guinea-pigs and mice and rabbits inside it and set this box in the garden. Then, through the window he ran a lead pipe that opened in a spray nozzle inside the box, and for three days, for half an hour each day, he sat in his laboratory, pumping at a pair of bellows that shot a poisonous mist of bacilli into the box—to be breathed by the cavorting beasts inside it.

In 10 days three of the rabbits were gasping, fighting for that precious air that their sick lungs could not longer give them. In 25 days the guineapigs had done their humble work—one and all they were dead, of tuberculosis.

On March 24, 1882, in Berlin, there was a meeting of the Physiological Society in a plain small room made magnificent by the presence of the most brilliant men of science in Germany. Paul Ehrlich was there and the most eminent Professor Rudolph Virchow, who had but lately sniffed at this crazy Koch and his alleged bacilli of disease—and nearly all of the famous German battlers against disease were there.

A BESPECTACLED, wrinkled, small man rose and put his face close to his papers and fumbled with them. The papers quivered and his voice shook a little as he started to speak. With an admirable modesty Robert Koch told these men the plain story of the way he had searched out the invisible assassin of one human being out of every seven that died. With no oratorical raisings of his voice he told these disease fighters that the physicians of the world were now able to learn all of the habits of this bacillus of tuberculosis—this smallest but most savage enemy of men. Koch recited to them the lurking places of this slim microbe, its strengths and weaknesses, and he showed them how they might begin the fight to wipe out this sub-visible deadly enemy.

At last Koch sat down, to wait for the discussion, the inevitable arguments and objections that greet the finish of revolutionary papers. But no man rose to his feet, no word was spoken, and finally eyes began to turn toward Virchow, the oracle, the Tsar of German science, the thunderer whose mere frown had ruined great theories of disease.

If old Leeuwenhoek, 200 years before, had made so astounding a discovery, Europe of the seventeenth century would have heard the news in months. But in 1882 the news that Robert Koch had found the microbe of tuberculosis trickled out of the little room of the Physiological Society the same evening, sang to Kamchatka and to San Francisco on the cable wires that night, and exploded on the front pages of the newspapers in the morning. Then the world went wild over Koch, doctors boarded ships and hopped trains for Berlin to learn from him the secret of hunting microbes; vast crowds of them rushed to Berlin to sit at Koch's feet to learn how to make beef-broth jelly and how to stick syringes full of germs into the wiggling carcasses of guineapigs.

Pasteur's deeds had set France by the ears, but Koch's experiments with the dangerous tubercle bacilli rocked the earth and Koch waved worshipers away, saying:

In 1883 the Asiatic cholera knocked at the door of Europe. This cholera had stolen out of its lurking place in India and slipped mysteriously across the sea and over desert sands to Egypt; suddenly a murderous epidemic of it exploded in Alexandria and Europe across the Mediterranean was frightened. In Alexandria the streets were still with fear; the murderous virus—no one had the slightest notion of what kind of an invisible beast it was—this virus I say, sneaked into healthy men in the morning, doubled them into knots of spasm-racked agony by afternoon and put them to rest beyond the reach of all pain by night.

So Koch sailed from Berlin for Calcutta, with the fate of Thuillier hanging over him, drolly chaperoning 50 mice and dreadfully annoyed by seasickness. I have often wondered what his fellow passengers took him for—probably they guessed that he was some earnest little missionary or a serious professor intent to delve into ancient Hindu lore.

Koch found his comma bacillus in the dead bodies of every one of the 10 carcasses into which he peered, and he unearthed the same microbe in the intestines of patients at the moment the fatal disease hit them. But he never found this germ in any of the hundreds of healthy Hindus that he examined, nor in any animal, from mice to elephants.

Quickly Koch learned to grow the comma bacillus pure on beef-broth jelly, and once he had it imprisoned in his tubes he studied all the habits of this vicious little vegetable, how it perished quickly when he dried it the least bit, how it could sneak into a healthy man by way of the soiled linen of patients that had died. He dredged this comma microbe up out of the stinking water of the tanks around which clustered the miserable Hindu's huts—sad hovels from which drifted the moans of helpless ones that were dying of cholera.

AT LAST Koch sailed back to Germany, and here he was received like some returning victorious General. "Cholera never rises spontaneously," he told his audience of learned doctors; "no healthy man can ever be attacked by cholera unless he swallows the comma microbe, and this germ can only develop from its like—it cannot be produced from any other thing, or out of nothing. And it is only in the intestines of man, or in highly polluted water like that of India, that it can grow."

It is thanks to these bold searchings of Robert Koch that Europe and America no longer dread the devastating raids of these puny but terrible little murderers from the Orient—and their complete extermination from the world waits only upon the civilization and sanitation of India. . . .

From the German Emperor's hand Koch now received the Order of the Crown, with Star, but in spite of that his countrified hat continued to fit his stubbly head, and when admirers adored him he only said to them: "I have worked as hard as I could . . . if my success has been greater than that of most . . . the reason is that I came in my wanderings through the medical field upon regions where the gold was still lying by the wayside . . and that is no great merit."

But we come to the end of the great days of Robert Koch, and the exploits of Louis Pasteur begin once more to push Koch and all other microbe hunters into the background of the world's attention. Let us leave Koch while his ambitious but well-meaning countrymen prepare, without knowing it, a disaster for him, a tragedy that, alas, has partly tarnished the splendor of his trapping of the microbes that murder animals and men with anthrax and cholera and tuberculosis. But before you read the perfect and brilliant finale of the gorgeous career of Pasteur, I beg leave to remove my hat and make bows of respect to Koch—the man who really proved that microbes are our most deadly enemies, who brought microbe hunting near to being a science, the man who is now the partly forgotten captain of an obscure heroic age.

Mrs. Dumbly

Artie's Vacation.
Going to the Cottage.
Decorations Are All Ready.
What For? For Two Weeks.

PERHAPS I can get all the things I've fixed up to put in our summer cottage arranged before we leave there, but I'm not certain. Perhaps I can wear all the clothes I've bought to wear on my summer vacation—I mean on Artie's vacation—before it's over, but I'm not at all sure. Perhaps I can get rested before it's time to come home, but I'm in doubt.

As I told Artie when we were packing, I've labored day and night for six months getting ready for this vacation. But Artie only dug into one of the trunks with the fervor of an archeologist and, excavating a large box from the lowest substrata, demanded: "What's this?"

"Window boxes for the cottage," I said, in my enthusiasm forgetting my weariness. "I bought them at the 10-cent store, 5 cents for the front and back of each box and 5 cents for the ends. And I bought some beautiful geraniums to go with them, 10 cents for each stalk and 10 cents per flower. I'm not taking any dirt, because I thought we could find plenty at the cottage. I'm going to let you put them up after we get there—in your spare moments. But what are you looking for in that trunk?"

"Pipe," he mumbled, throwing the contents over his head like a dog digging into a ground hog hole.

"I KNOW just where your pipe is," I said, so filled with enthusiasm that I could hardly wait to explain to him, "I made a candlestick out of it. I learned how to do it from an article in the Ladies' Home Wrecking Magazine on 'Easy Ways of Getting Rid of Money in the Household.'

"But what am I going to do about my pipe?" he began.

I silenced him by saying that since I was economizing in making all these things he could buy a new pipe. "I've spent my time for a week fixing up those candlesticks," I said. "Of course, they had to be painted and so I copied the design the magazine suggested for a summer cottage, a conventionalized design of canoes tipping over. It was hard work, but not half as hard as painting the furniture red, with green stripes. That took me four weeks, and, of course, I was tired out when I got through, but I'm willing to endure it for the sake of a rest."

"Where's my box of fishing tackle?"

"I've decorated that," I said brightly. "I'm going to put it on the mantel between the candlesticks. I decorated it with a conventional design of turtles nibbling the bait off of trout lines. It's the same design I put on the mousetraps."

"On the what!" he asked. And seeing how utterly mystified he was, I took delight in telling him of my ingenuity.

"I WON a prize from the Household Hints department of the Ladies' Home Wrecking Magazine for this recipe for napkin holders, made of hand-painted spring mousetraps. I painted the springs with a suggestion of black and blue. There are six of them, so we can accommodate only half a dozen guests, but I don't think we'll have more than that many at one time. I asked everybody we know who might be driving up that way to stop, but, of course, I don't really expect them to, though I would like to have my friends see what lovely rugs I made from the old socks and neckties I collected from all of them. Those rugs meant at least four months of my time and were more work even than the cretonne pillows and curtains. I've made adorable lamp shades out of tin funnels painted to match the curtains. The magazine says they cover a light so completely you'd never know it was there. I thought you could adjust them to the oil lamps some time when you're not doing anything else."

"Which will be never, according to the schedule you're working out," he objected. "But it's a cinch I won't spend any time reading if those shades are anything like the ones we have at home. Every one of our lights is masked like a holdup man's face. For a year I've had to read by light that was strained through several layers of chiffon and velvet and ribbon rosebuds. There isn't a corner in our house where I can read comfortably. Every one"——

"I don't see what that has to do with a summer cottage," I interrupted. "I don't see why it makes any difference to you, how the cottage looks. We'll be outdoors all the time, anyway. We'll only go in the cottage to sleep."

"Then why are you decorating it?" he asked.

"Artie Dumbly!. I refuse to discuss the question any further," I declared.

And for the next two days, while we packed the remaining boxes and trunks, I refused to speak to him. I don't know how we're going to get all those things out to the cottage, but when I look at them I feel a glow of satisfaction—for they represent six months of hard work—six months.

How long are we going to stay at the cottage?

Oh, about two weeks.

5000 Baby Gull... To Trace

CANADIAN naturalists, co-operating with the Biological Survey of the United States, have recently set a world's record in the intensive banding of wild birds.

In five hours a party of 12 people succeeded in placing metal bands round the legs of 5000 baby gulls.

This remarkable feat in bird-banding was accomplished at the Beaverhill Lake gull colony in Northern Alberta, and its object is to discover, if possible, whereabouts, in the United States and in South America, these gulls spend the winter, what route they take and other information as to their migratory habits.

The colony in which the banding was done is one of some 30,000 breeding birds normally, and the species is known as the Franklin gull, named after Sir John Franklin, famous Arctic explorer. This particular type of gull is of inestimable value to the farmer as it wages war on all insect pests—wireworms, cutworms, grasshoppers, etc.

The gull colony at Beaverhills Lake is a good one for really intensive banding. The birds breed over a densely packed area of heavy reeds, which concentrate the young birds and also prevent them from escaping the workers. Opportunity was thus afforded for banding several thousand gulls of about the same age, all of one species, and all from one colony—very desirable factors for a large-scale search into migratory habits.

5000 Baby Gulls Banded To Trace Their Migration

CANADIAN naturalists, co-operating with the Biological Survey of the United States, have recently set a world's record in the intensive banding of wild birds.

In five hours a party of 12 people succeeded in placing metal bands round the legs of 5000 baby gulls.

This remarkable feat in bird-banding was accomplished at the Beaverhill Lake gull colony in Northern Alberta, and its object is to discover, if possible, whereabouts, in the United States and in South America, these gulls spend the winter, what route they take and other information as to their migratory habits.

The colony in which the banding was done is one of some 30,000 breeding birds normally, and the species is known as the Franklin gull, named after Sir John Franklin, famous Arctic explorer. This particular type of gull is of inestimable value to the farmer, as it wages war on all insect pests—wireworms, cutworms, grasshoppers, etc.

Mother birds flying over the nests.

The gull colony at Beaverhills Lake is a good one for really intensive banding. The birds breed over a densely packed area of heavy reeds, which concentrate the young birds and also prevent them from escaping the workers. Opportunity was thus afforded for banding several thousand gulls of about the same age, all of one species, and all from one colony—very desirable factors for a large-scale search into migratory habits.

The bands used, supplied by the U. S. Biological Survey, are of aluminum alloy, light and strong. Every band bears a serial number—444,001 upward in this case, and each band has engraved on the outside, "Notify Biol. Surv.," and inside "Washington, D. C."

First, fairly exact knowledge of the wintering grounds of the species; then, proof or disproof of the theory that birds breeding in the extreme north of their range, winter in the extreme south.

What route do the birds take in their long flight south in the fall, and north again in the spring? Do all the birds from one colony use the same route to the same winter grounds? Do adult birds follow the same route they followed as youngsters? How long do Franklin gulls live? How old is the gull before it comes north again, to breed? Will the Beaverhill Lake gull return to its home marshes to breed?

The 12 apostles of bird-banding left Edmonton, Alberta, late in June, for the auto run to the southern shore of the big lake, a few miles beyond Tofield, on the Canadian National Railway. This is the story of the banding:

So here we are, 5 a. m., the sun getting warmer and driving the gray mists from the surface of the lake.

The rings are made up in packages of 50 each, numbered consecutively. Five packages to each man—250 rings to be pinched onto as many gull-chick legs.

Everywhere there are nests! In twos, threes, fours—all slapped down on the reeds, haphazard, go-as-you-please. It is a medley of old, fouled nests, from which the chicks have gone; of new nests in which repose the mottled eggs, two, sometimes three, to a nest; of other nests from which apprehensive, innocent-eyed baby gulls stare out at us, to slip hurriedly into the water as we plow toward them.

Wet to the skin now, we chase the baby chick madly across his little sea of open water. Grab! The baby turns, opens an absurdly wide beak, hisses—and is swept, shrieking loudly, into the air by one yellow foot.

Quick hands slip the aluminum over his baby shank; eager fingers press together the loose ends of the band, and the chick, now too surprised even to squeak, flops back to the water and hastens to hide himself.

We wade boldly out beyond the fringe of the reeds, to the open water off-shore, where the larger chicks, each as big as a husky fist, paddle quietly, remote from the turmoil.

This time, it is by threes and fours that we grab them, hanging on to the agile little rascals as best we may, while the chicks fight back, pecking lustily, and even grabbing their own yellow toes in ecstacies of terror.

We banded 5000 baby gulls in five hours!

IDLY we sit and watch the wheeling gulls, wondering if the parents will ever get their offspring sorted out again, and, if so, what they will think of those leg adornments?

The work is done and we break camp, turning our backs on the wheeling, screaming gulls. May our 5000 banded baby gulls live long and happy lives, and when their turn comes to die, may they so dispose themselves that their leg bands will at last find their devious routes to the offices of the U. S. Biological Survey, Washington, D. C.

History should record the names of those who established this new world record in banding wild birds. Here they are:

P. A. Tavener of the Victoria Memorial Museum, Ottawa, Canada's premier ornithologist. Hamilton Laing, Canadian naturalist-author, and naturalist to the Mount Logan expedition; B. J. Mair or Harvard University; C. G. Harrold of Winnipeg, Manitoba; B. J. Lawton, Alberta's Chief Game Commissioner; Dr. Rooney, president of the Northern Alberta Game and Fish Protective Association; Professors MacGibbon, Strickland and Walker, Librarian Cameron and Research Scientist Stansfield, all of the University of Alberta; William Rowan, head of the zoology department of the University of Alberta, who arranged the banding.

THE FIRST PAGE OF THIS MAGAZINE

THE spirit of bleak insolation is basic in Bruno Liljefors' painting, "The Eagle's Nest," which is reproduced upon the first page of this issue of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, by courtesy of the City Art Museum where it was exhibited this summer in that institution's annual foreign exhibition. A cold green tone pervades the picture, at the left of which, from a thicket of stunted growth rises a wind-blasted pine. In the lower right is a spit of sand toward which the whitecaps roll in. High above the sea and dropping toward his nest in the topmost branches of the pine is the eagle, and his talons clutch a duck. The painting is an excellent example of authentic representation of one of nature's cruel moods.

Clemence Cowles of Callaway County

Then Clemence Cowles that was got to work. She sold all her jewels. She rented two rooms in the building which once had held her husband's magnificent offices. She declared she'd carry on his work for him. Morse had hardly donned his prison clothes before she started tales of the dire illness with which he was beset.

The woman threw all her energy and thought into a campaign to free her man. She was always at it, speeding from New York to the capital, from there to Atlanta, and back again. She interviewed Congressmen, Senators, officers of the Department of Justice. She told her story to bankers and capitalists. She spared herself nothing. She drew up a petition, asking clemency for Morse because of his state of health. And then she went from one influential man to another, begging them to sign it. And many of them did, not because all of them thought Charles Morse should be freed, but because of the woman's untiring devotion.

Finally, the case was put before President Taft. Reports from Atlanta said Morse was in a precarious condition. The President permitted his transfer to the Government hospital at Hot Springs, Arkansas. But this was not enough for his wife. She kept at her work. More pressure was brought to bear, and finally the President sent a board of army surgeons to examine the banker, who had again been returned to an army hospital near Atlanta.

The board examined Morse and Surgeon-General Torney made this report to President Taft:

"A careful review of these reports makes it clear to my mind that he is suffering from a combination of diseases due to degenerative changes, which are incurable and progressive. The reports show that both the condition of the kidneys and heart are growing worse. I regard the attack of cardiac dyspnoea, or heart block, from which he suffered on the morning of the fifteenth instant, an ominous occurrence. In my opinion the prisoner's duration of life will be, in all probability, less than one month, if kept in confinement, and in the event of his release under commutation of sentence it is not probable that he will live as long as six months."

KINDLY President Taft reviewed this official communication of his board of army surgeons. It was too much for the President's large heart. Poor fellow, a month of life if he remained in prison, only six months if he was released. And the President had every reason to believe and have faith in the official report. He commuted Morse's sentence.

A member of the Department of Justice brought the commutation papers to Clemence Morse, who was then in Washington, and she hurried with them to Atlanta. She and her husband took ship for Europe. The six months that were left of Morse's span of life passed and Morse, instead of dying, was living a luxurious and pleasant life in Europe.

Clemence Morse and her husband returned to America. It was learned he had made $7,500,000 through speculations since his release from prison. He got into steamboat transportation. Along came the war. Morse built a shipyard and got contracts to make merchant vessels for the Government. He was accused of selling a registered American ship to Tunis, without obtaining the necessary sanction of the United States Shipping Board. The charge was dropped. He was indicted for defrauding the United States Shipbuilding Corporation in contracts, but he beat the case.

Clemence Morse had not visited her realtives and friends in Auxvasse since 1922. Her husband had been ill; he had suffered two strokes of paralysis, and his wife, as she had always done, kept close to him so she might help him. Morse liked to have her near. On those earlier occasions when she visited Auxvasse there always came a stream of letters and telegrams from him. And, opening them, she would turn to her nephew, Bernard Cowles, and say: "Look at that boy. He wants me to come home." Which she usually did, cutting her visit short by several days.

The letters more recently received in Auxvasse from Clemence Morse did not seem so cheerful as they once had been. She seemed to be troubled. But she promised, if her husband's health permitted it, to visit this village again in a short time.

The other day a news dispatch came over the wires from New York that Charles Morse, indicted almost five years ago for using the mails to defraud in the sale of steamship company stock, had lost his fight in the Federal Court to keep from being brought to trial. Almost at the same time came from Bath, Maine, where the partly paralyzed financier and his wife were staying, a telegram that Clemence Morse had been stricken suddenly with apoplexy and was dead.

The Outline of the Arts — By H. G. WELL

XIII.—The Rise of Fiction and Its Predominance

The English Novel Gradually Broke the Restraint of the Earlier Stories of Events and Manners. Influence of German Writers. France, With Notable Exceptions, Tamed and Subdued the Art of Fiction, Holding It to Form and Rule. The Desire to Know About Life Spread Through Europe, and the Novel Supplying That Knowledge Gained and Held an Ascendancy That Was Not Seriously Affected by the Romantic Movement Led by Sir Walter Scott and Lord Byron.

DEVELOPING more slowly and against the discouragement of the scholastic, academic and critical worlds, the form of prose fiction rose by degrees to equality with and then to a predominance over poetry. That was what people were really reading, and that was what the times required. The great prose book about life, with a narrative progression in its substance, already foreshadowed by Rabelais and developed by the discursive novels of Fielding and Sterne, emerged slowly to completion and recognition as the century progressed. As it grew in length and power, the short novel and the short story appeared beside it.

The earlier novels were stories of events and studies of manners. Fanny Burney (1752-1840) takes us back to the world of Dr. Johnson. Jane Austen (1775-1815), working within narrow limits, carried on the tradition of feminine observation, finely expressed. From the restraints and limitations of this sort of tale about manners and feelings, we find the English novel gradually breaking bounds as the mind of the century broke bounds.

A very great and central figure in the enlargement of the novel was the German writer, Jean Paul Richter (1763-1825). His narrative is a mere thread for jeweled and decorated digressions. Another great German writer was Heine (1797-1856). Richter affected the work of the English writer, Thomas Carlyle, very profoundly. Through Carlyle the discursive and enriching influence of Richter reached Charles Dickens (1812-1870) and George Meredith (1828-1909). Thackeray (1811-1863), the great rival of Dickens, wandered and philosophized and buttonholed his reader, but in a fashion that derives rather from Sterne than from the Germans. Charles Reade (1814-1884), in his "Cloister and the Hearth," presented the still living issues between Protestantism and Catholicism in Europe in the form and fabric of a great romance.

BOTH Thackeray and Carlyle found their disposition to discuss life freely leading them away from the form of frank fiction towards the interpretation of historical phases. There is a natural and necessary connection between the great novel of the English type and history. Carlyle's "French Revolution" and his "Frederick the Great" were read like novels and an immense success was made by Macaulay (1800-1859) with his history of the later Stuart period. It is the fault of historians rather than the fault of the public if history is not widely read. Such brilliant historical writers as Lytton Strachey, Guadalla and Belloc are popular as novelists in England and America.

In France the same necessities and curiosities that broadened the English novel from a mere story to a picture and interpretation of life, inspired Balzac (1779-1850) to the vast enterprise of his "Comedie Humaine." At a great distance below him his successor, Zola (1840-1903), wrote his kindred "Rougon-Macquart" cycle, a group of novels tracing the fortunes of a copious French family through several generations.

Victor Hugo (1802-1885) stands by himself, an exuberant, bold, florid and sometimes rather tawdry mind, erupting plays, poems, novels and political disquisitions.

BUT in France the influence of the Academy, the classical tradition, the tradition of scholastic discipline, though it could not restrain these exceptional cases, did on the whole tame and subdue the art of fiction. It must have "form," said the pedagogues. It must be "correct." It must not digress. It must be politely impersonal in its manner. So the French novel was obstructed on its way to the limitless freedoms of experiment that the British school enjoyed. Within the limits thus fixed, Flaubert (1821-1880) is the most subtle and finished of French writers.

Thomas Hardy (born 1840), the last of the great Victorian novelists, belongs rather to this French classical school than the British tradition in fiction. He rebelled in his later years against the limitations he had set himself, abandoned the novel form altogether, and in "The Dynasts," a representation of the whole Napoleonic adventure in the form of a drama, he achieved his masterpiece, another instance of the close affinity of the great novelist to the interpretative historian.

The desire to know about life and what is happening to it, the disposition to question life closely and keenly, that made the British impatient of the formal restrictions of poetry and elevated the novel and its cognate forms to literary predominance, spread through all the European countries. Germany, Russia, Scandinavia, in particular, produced great literature in this form. The outstanding name amidst a multitude of excellent German novelists is that of Gustav Freytag (1816-1895). Norway produced its Bjornson (1832-1910); Russia a great galaxy of splendid writers, from Gogol (1809-1852) to Dostoievsky (1821-1881), Turgeniev (1819-1883) Tolstoi (1826-1910) and Tchekov (died 1904).

BUT not all readers in the nineteenth century were eager and curious. Intermingled with the types and classes whose minds were filled with doubts and progress were types and social strata in active resistance to progressive ideas. Side by side with a great and growing literature that provoked and stimulated, there was in Europe and America alike, a vast output of written matter at every level of technical achievement, which was designed to amuse and soothe and reassure. People had learnt to read, there was much time and need for reading, and they read to stanch their minds rather than encourage their flow.

Sir Walter Scott is a figure whose enormous contemporary prestige will, like Lord Byron's, perplex posterity. He began his literary career as a poet and wrote two long, glib narrative poems; he then wrote a series of historical romances, glorifying the romantic past, exalting the loyalties of monarchy, the richness of tradition. These appealed enormously to gentlefolks and prosperous people, alarmed by the cold uncertainties of the changing and questioning present. He was the begetter of a wave of romantic and regretful fiction, not only throughout the English-speaking world, but throughout Europe.

Balzac, who broadened fiction to an interpretation of life.

Upon the continent, these two writers, strangely translated or paraphrased, were used as symbols of a vague, large wave of influences, complex in origin, incoherent in aim and quality and now happily dispersed and done with, the romantic movement. It meant medievalism, it meant rich and florid color, it meant gestures towards adventure in armor and disapproval of contemporary fashions and interests. It meant instinct against reason and emotion against science. Its tendency to archaic language was tempered by the indolence of its experiments.

It had more of the nature of a drinking bout followed by a riot than of a phase in intellectual and esthetic progress. It was opposed not only to the realities of the present, but to the classic past. It was catholic, it was individualistic, it revived the fairies and wallowed in sham legends; it was anything, it was nothing.

In Germany it was written about enormously and heavily, but it pervaded all Europe. Shakspeare was claimed as a romantic; there was a woolly-brained "romantic philosophy" and a "romantic theology."

There was a vast production of costume novels in English, the mental parallel of the English revival of Gothic architecture, and stockbrokers and tired business men could forget the responsibilities of their business activities and the question of where, if anywhere, they thought they were going, by dreaming themselves the gallant crusaders, soldiers, highwaymen, rescuers of distressed damsels figured as the heroes of these There was no pretense to real appearances and significance period in this costume stuff, charm. The mentality of the acters was the mentality of the perous middle class, partly idealized.

"How do they keep those GLORIOUS COMPLEXIONS in that awful climate?"

It's a question asked by every woman who has visited Spain—land of ice and fire, dry hot summers and ferocious winters. And those glorious complexions of Spanish women—even the most delicate blondes—are never tarnished by that climate. They remain through youth and middle age firm and fine, with that ravishing "golden pallor"*—the most beautiful complexions in Europe.

How do they do it? No magic, no cosmetics of mysterious virtue—nothing but pure Castile toilet soap! (Named, you recall, from Castilla, the Spanish province where this incomparable jabon duro (Castile) was first made, six centuries ago.)

And of course we all know that nothing in the world can approach this pure soap in its bland cleansing virtue. And so—to make the very finest toilet soap in the world, what could be more obvious than to make this lovely Castile into dainty toilet form—as American women would like it?

And that's what we have done. Improvement?—Yes! We have made an exquisite, "hard-milled," lasting cake, adorably shaped for a woman's hand. It will not deliquesce (a new virtue in Castile): it will give you a profuse lather, quickly, even in lukewarm water. A lather that will rinse instantly. Too, you can use it ever so freely; Doña Castile costs ten cents. And you can get it practically anywhere. Armour, U. S. A.

The Pleasant Way to Reduce

Wavering About Waving?

Are you wavering in your decision about having a permanent wave? Or have you discovered the Eugène Method?

Many women who used to hesitate to entrust their delicate hair to permanent waving have found in the Eugène Method the solution of the difficulty.

For the Eugène Method assures perfect preservation of the hair's supple beauty, together with the greater beauty of the Eugène wave.

Most ordinary methods of permanent waving first drench the hair in chemical solutions, then bake it until it is fixed rigidly in form.

The Eugène Method winds the hair dry, then softens it with tiny jets of clean, white steam, until it comfortably relaxes into permanent, natural-looking Eugène waves. The hair dries gradually and naturally with no loss of suppleness. True, the Eugène Method is a trifle more expensive than ordinary processes. But it is so gentle that it may be used again and again on the finest-spun and most delicately tinted hair.

May we give you a little booklet which tells you more about the Eugène Method? Perhaps, too, we may be able to direct you to a shop where you may inquire first-hand about it. Just drop us a note or a post card, and we shall forward the booklet to you at once.

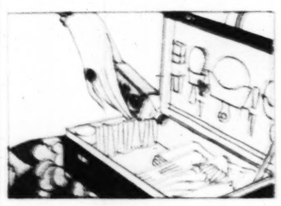
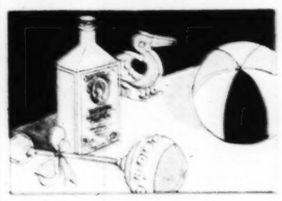
HINDS
Honey & Almond
CREAM

PAT IT ON
before the sun gets in its work

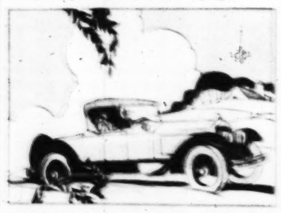
Keep a bottle of Hinds Honey and Almond Cream on your dressing table. It makes a splendid powder base.



Slip a bottle of Hinds Cream into your travelling bag. You'll need it to cleanse your face, as a base for powder, to keep your hands soft, etc.



After the bath, pat Hinds Cream all over baby's small person. Then dust with talcum. If this is done every day, baby's skin will stay pink, smooth, free from prickly heat and chafing.



Tuck a bottle of Hinds away in a pocket of your car. Then when your skin grows, moisten your handkerchief with Hinds Cream. Go over your face. It will make it feel soft and clean.

PLAY GOLF and tennis in the hot sun, spend long hours stretched out on the beach. You won't get sunburned if your skin is first protected with Hinds Honey and Almond Cream. For Hinds Cream prevents sunburn. Wards off blisters, peeling and general discomfort.

Just pat on Hinds Cream, and powder over it, before going out in the sun. That's all. But this simple care will protect your skin from the sun; keep it soft and fresh.

And if you're already sunburned, Hinds Cream will cool and soothe the burn. And hasten the departure of roughness, tan and freckles.

Try Hinds Cream. You can buy it anywhere. Or, if you wish, we'll send you a generous sample bottle. Just fill in the coupon and mail.

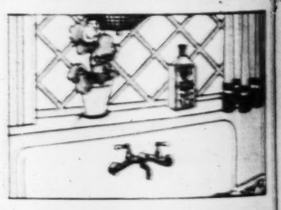
Before going on the hot beach, pat on Hinds Cream. And again when you come out of the water use it. This simple care will protect your skin from sunburn.



If you do your own work, every time you dip your hands in water rub Hinds Cream into them. It will keep them smooth and in good condition.

Before you start on the evening, smooth a little Hinds Cream into your hands. Then your fingers will not "catch" in delicate materials.

DEAL CLOSED TO MAKE ST. CHARLES TOLL BRIDGE FREE

WILL MAKE SPAN PAY FOR ITSELF

Sinking Fund Created to Meet Purchase Price With Ultimate View of Presenting It to State.

A contract was signed today whereby the toll bridge across the Missouri River at St. Charles will be acquired through a committee of seven men, headed by Probate Judge Sam D. Hodgdon of St. Louis County, and acting for residents of St. Louis and St. Charles Counties, to be used ultimately as a free bridge and a part of State Highway No. 2.

The contract provides for continuation of present tolls and acquisition of the structure from its profits, thus entailing no direct expense to anyone, and indirectly placing the cost upon those who use it and will profit most by an ultimate cessation of tolls.

Purchase Price $1,250,000.

Officers of the St. Louis & St. Charles Bridge Co., owners, and members of the committee signed the contract following a meeting of stockholders and directors. The purchase price, $1,250,000, interest upon which, at the rate of 4½ per cent, is to be paid semi-annually from July 1, together with the principal, is to be paid from a sinking fund into which all tolls and other income of the bridge is to be placed.

The Bridge company is to continue operation, management and maintenance until it receives its final payment. Tolls cannot be increased and improvements are to be made only with the consent of a majority of the committee.

Under the terms of the contract, any amount of money which may be paid by any individual, corporation, city, town or the State, at any semiannual payment date, shall be accepted. When the principal and interest has been paid, title to the bridge, together with all contracts with electric railways and wire companies, is to be conveyed to St. Louis and St. Charles Counties to be forever a part of the State Highway System.

State's Status in Plan.

The State Highway Commission may, if authorized by the passage of a statute, assume all rights and powers of the committee. Also, it may, if authorized, pay out of the general highways funds of the State, for repair and maintenance of the bridge, thus increasing the amount of the sinking fund and hastening the removal of tolls.

Chairman Theodore Gary of the Highway Commission told the Post-Dispatch last February there was no law authorizing the commission to acquire toll bridges and that he did not favor a change in the law until after the completion of the 7460-mile State road system in 1932. The time required to pay for the bridge under this plan, depending, as it does, on the traffic, cannot be definitely foretold. But judging the future by the increase in the income during the last year or more and with State Highway No. 2 completed in a few months, the estimate of those interested is from five to seven years.

The bridge was a financial failure for 20 years after its construction in 1901, being twice refinanced, the bondholders once foreclosing. With the partial opening of the St. Louis-Kansas City concrete highway, which takes transcontinental traffic over the bridge, the road having the Federal designation of Route No. 40, it is becoming a profitable enterprise.

Profit Since 1919.

No dividends were paid until 1919, when a small profit was made. Since then it has increased until, in 1924, the company paid $112,000 to its stockholders, many of whom reside in New York and Chicago, California, Wisconsin and Michigan. Construction on State highway No. 2 was in progress at that time, and with its completion traffic has become even heavier. The company is capitalized at $560,000.

The St. Charles bridge is the only vehicle structure across the Missouri River from its mouth to Jefferson City, and is the only toll bridge on State highway No. 2, the bridge at Boonville, where the route recrosses the river, having been built as a free bridge by citizens assisted by the Government, at a cost of $512,000.
